LETHBRIDGE, ALTA., JAN. 9.—It costs one cent ot plant a tree in Canada, according to a report submitted to the International Dry-Farming Congress by Norman M. Ross of Indian Head, Saskatchewan, and just published in the annual Congress handbook. Mr. Ross is chief of the tree planting division of the Dominion forestry department. He states that the Dominion forest nursery station at Indian Head is annually distributing to settlers in Western Canada, free of charge, more than two and three-quarter million seedlings and cuttings and that, during the past ten years, the tree planting division has furnished, roughly, 18,500,000 trees and cuttings to 14,822 settlers, an average of 1,240 to each applicant. At the lowest estimate, it is said, 85 per cent. of these plantations are successful, and, based on the total appropriation spent by the tree planting division last season, the cost to the department amounts practically to one cent per tree planted in the permanent site.

"The tree planting division," says Mr. Ross, "also issues and distributes a great quantity of printed matter in the form of illustrated bulletins and circulars, and furnishes speakers to attend the farmers' institute meetings organized by the provincial authorities. On the nursery station two large areas are set out to permanent plantations in order that data may be gathered as to the cost of establishing and the probable returns that may be expected from prairie planting.

"The assistance offered to intending t reeplanters is eminently practical, and, during the past ten years, has shown results of a very convincing character. The work is under the direction of the Dominion director or forestry. If a settler wishes to plant trees on his farm the forestry branch provides him with as many trees and cuttings as possible, under certain conditions. The conditions which have to be complied with before trees are granted practically ensure the success of the plantations. The ground must be thoroughly prepared, the trees planted according to instructions supplied by the forestry branch, and cultivation carried on for as many seasons as are necessary until the trees are thoroughly established. Trees are granted only on the recommendation of an officer of the forestry branch, after a personal inspection in each case. The tree planting division employs eight inspectors during the summer months who visit and report on the preparation made for proposed plantations and the results of recent lantings.

"The value of forest plantings by the prairie settler to establish windbreaks and shelter belts, to produce fuel, fencing and other timber and to add to the comfort and beauty of the farm home has been well established in recent years. As a windbreak alone it has been shown at Indian Head that a forest growth on the windward side of a field will establish a protective influence of 50 feet for every foot in height."

The annual handbook of the Dry-Farming noCgress, in which this report appears, is a compendium of more than eighty articles covering the progress of dry-farming in eighteen states of the United States, the Canadian prairie provinces and ten other nations of the world, and dealing with every phase of the great science which is to-day so rapidly changing the western range country into a region of productive farms and comfortable homes. The next annual convention of the Congress will be held in Lethbridge in October, 1912.

Carload Of Ford Cars Arrive

A carload of Ford Model "T" automobiles, arrived yesterday for Ald. J. J. Duffus, the local representative of the company. One of these cars goes to Millbrook and the other two will be delivered to their owners here just as soon as the roads will permit. This may seem a very early date at which to receive autom biles, but Mr. Duffus states that owing to the demand, notwithstanding that the company are building 75,000 this year, all orders will be filled according to their dates and it is necessary in order to get delivery for use as soon as the roads are good in the spring, to have orders placed as early as possible. These cars are on exhibition at 303 George street, where Mr. Duffus will be pleased to have anyone call at any time during the day or evening for the purposes of inspection.

A LIBERAL OFFER

We Guarantee to Relieve Dyspepsia. If We Fail the Medicine Costs Nothing.

To unquestionably prove to the people that indigestion and dyspepsia can be permanently relieved and that Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets will bring about this result, we will furnish the medicine absolutely free if it fails to give satisfaction to any one using it.

The remarkable success of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets is due to the high degree of scientific skill used in devising their formula as well as to the care exercised in their manufacture, whereby the well-known properties of Bismuth-Subnitrate and Pepsin have been combined with Carminatives and other agents.

Bismuth-Subnitrate and Pepsin are constantly employed and recognized by the entire medical profession as invaluable in the treatment of indigestion and dyspepsia.

The Pepsin used in Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets is carefully prepared so as to develop its greatest efficiency. Pepsin supplies to the digestive apparatus one of the most important elements of the digestive fluid. Without it the digestion and assimilation of food are impossible.

The Carminatives possess properties which aid in relieving the disturbances and pain caused by undigested food. This combination of these ingredients makes a remedy invaluable for the complete relief of indigestion and dyspepsia.

We are so certain of this that we urge you to try Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets on our own personal guarantee. Three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Bury.

Team Of Horses Ran Away

A pair of spirited little "Bays," owned by Mr. R. Gibbs, and attached to a closed hack, started off from a point adjacent to the C. P. R. station this morning, galloped up George street, and defied every effort to stop them until they had covered some distance north of Edinburgh street. They were eventually captured and taken back, appearing no worse for their escapade.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER WILL NOT RETIRE

Sir Wilfrid Laurier was practically tied out of office—defeated on appeals that after events have shown were false to the core. Now an attempt is being made to lie him out of the leadership. An Ottawa dreamer of lies, has thrust him out of the leadership and replaced him by Mr. Hugh Guthrie, M.P., of Guelph. The latter says that the absurd story has not the slightest foundation, so far as he is concerned, and cites Sir Wilfrid's public and emphatic declaration in Montreal, that he would continue to lead the Liberal party as a complete repudiation of the story as applied to Sir Wilfrid.

BIG INCREASE LOOKED FOR

Customs duty collected on goods imported into Peterborough for the month of December 1911 was $38,-227.00, while the amount for the same month for the preceding year was $45,334.00, showing a decrease of $17,-107.00. This should not be considered an alarming decrease, however, under the circumstances, was the opinion of customs officials, when seen by a reporter to-day. The receipts for 1910 were the highest probably ever recorded in the history of the city, due to the fact that the C.G.E. Co. imported an enormous amount of machinery, and also the great inrush of raw material to the Quaker Oats Co. from the U.S., due to the fact that some of the company's establishments were destroyed by fire. As a result of this fire, the Peterboorugh branch of the Quaker Oats Co. received considerable more materially and consequently customs duties were directly affected. In conversation with Customs House officials to-day, an Examiner reporter was informed thot the outlook for the year was exceptionally bright and a big increase over last year's figures is looked for.

Many Calls On Relief Department

About 60 cases of charity have been dealt with by City Relief Officer Miller since the advent of winter, and they are rapidly increasing. Sickness in the family and lack of employment for the breadwinner of the house, were the chief reasons advanced for their destitute conditions, upon investigation by the Relief Officer.

Supplies of provisions and fuel are being sent out by the Charity Department daily in an endeavor to alleviate the suffering of the poor. To many of them the task of shovelling snow on the streets has proved a boon, which bears out the old adage that "it is an ill wind that blows nobody good."

While the existing conditions, as concerns the poor of the city, are not abnormal by any means, indications are that the drain on the charity department this winter will be a heavy one. This is due in a large measure to the influx of a large number of immigrants to the city during the past summe r, who were unprepared financially to face the hardships of a Canadian winter.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unparalleled."

THURSDAY, JAN. 11, 1912.

A FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE.

Hon. Dr. Reid, Minister of Customs, has secured something of a triumph in persuading Chairman Mabee, of the Railway Commission to order, in the interests of the travelling public, a change in the C. P. R. time-table, between Ottawa and Prescott. Hon. Dr. Reid has been fighting for this change for a long time, and showed his interest to the extent of personally conducting the case before the Commission. A public man in power and in earnest, can with the help of a gentleman like the fearless and straightforward Chairman of the Commission, do a great deal in protecting the interests of the public in relation to public services. Dr. Reid, in this case, does much to dispel the popular fallacy that a public man and a politician cannot be a public benefactor.

FRANK SPEAKING.

The following is not from any philistine Grit newspaper, writhing under the canker of reverse, but from the dyed-in-the-wool, Conservative, Toronto Telegram. It is the Tory Telegram that thus inquires and remarks:

Does Hon. R. L. Borden propose to allow his Postmaster-General to cut off the heads of Liberal postmasters in any constituency on the strength of a written request from the Conservative M.P. representing that constituency?

If so Hon. R. L. Borden is going to make himself look more like the puppet of the worst and smallest element in his own party, rather than like the premier of a whole country.

Every Liberal postmaster or appointee who is dismissed is a new hand to the rope-works that will supply halters for the necks of twenty Conservative members in this province.

THE GLOBE WILL FIGHT.

The following from the Globe is of interest to both the press and the public:

The Globe yesterday received from the Postoffice Department at Ottawa an account for $25,754, said to be the amount due for the conveyance of copies of the Globe to non-subscribers from the fifth of August to the twenty-second of September, 1911. This account will not be paid. The Globe believes that it has what in business circles would be regarded as a binding agreement on the part of the Post-Office Department to carry these papers at the regular rate of postage upon papers—namely, one-quarter of a cent. per pound. The courts would enforce such an agreement in the case of any other common carrier, and the Globe claims that in this case the Post-office Department of Canada is a common carrier, and has no legal authority, arbitrarily and without notice, to vary the rates quoted by its officials, and on which the Globe entered into a contract for the supply of papers during the election campaign.

If payment of this bill is pressed we may expect some revelations of interest, and we, perhaps, shall learn whether or not Governments are bound to compliance with the legal requirements by which other interests are governed in their public relations.

TUBERCULOSIS AND THE STATE.

Lieut.-Col. Buriand, of Montreal, has contributed $100,000 towards the erection of a hospital for the treatment of tuberculosis. Montreal owe largely to him and his family the work represented by the Royal Edward Institute. While such benefactions are highly creditable to the makers, they are only accidents, and cannot, or should not be, depended upon to provide the adequate support of institutions and enterprises so closely related to the public interests, as to become legitimate and proper charges upon the state. The duty of providing for the treatment of tuberculosis, becomes incumbent upon the state, so wide are the ravages of the disease, and so inadequate are private means to the proper employment of the measures called for. In Ontario the public health is one of the constitutional responsibilities placed upon the government. This indicates that the government of the province could, as it is empowered to do, warrantably take a much more active and substantial interest in promoting measures for dealing with the terrible destruction created by tuberculosis. Money to this end could be lavishly expended and its expenditure justified, in the interests of the province. Tuberculosis annually creates so much human suffering, material loss from loss of employment, and so much diminution of citizenship, that the government of the province would be heartily sustained, on economic as well as humanitarian, grounds, in handsomely aiding, private philanthrophy, in the fight against the disease.

THE MATTER OF MARKETS

In his address as president of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, Sir Edmund Walker tells us that Canada stands fifth amongst the nations in production of wheat. The production in the United States last year was 658,567,000 bushels, and in Canada 192,981,000. It is to be remembered also that in the United States production has almost come to a standstill. It was less last year than in 1898, 1901, 1902, 1905, 1906, 1908, 1909 and 1910. Furthermore, the production in the United States is less than seven bushels per head, while in Canada it is twenty-seven bushels per head. This condition emphasizes the necessity of providing new and larger markets for our annually increasing crops of wheat. It also serves to make ridiculous the idea that the home market is adequate to the profitable absorption of the continuous increase of farm and other products, out of all proportion to our increase of population. It would be as reasonable to expect the family of a prosperous farmer to consume all that is grown on the farm. Great Britain can easily consume all its own farm products, and so far as the British farmer is concerned, the home market is sufficient. But to think of applying the home market idea to British manufactured products, would be March hare madness. Reversely, it is setting a very low standard of ambition for Canadian progress to limit the market of Canadian production to our own citizens. The real wealth of a country that comes from the soil, depends upon the profitable and adequate market for soil productions; and as the time goes on, and as soil production increases, the people will realise that they were deluded into assuming a position of antagonism to the opening of a profitable market for our surplus products, growing as rapidly as the agricultural products of our neighbours are decreasing. In the next dozen years, according to the relative Canadian increase of population and wheat production, the latter will have doubled, and instead of Canadian wheat production being 27 bushels per head, it will probably be, at the least, fifty bushels per head.

NEW PHASE OF THE HYDRO-ELECTRIC.

Mr. N. W. Rowell, Liberal leader, speaking at Dundas on Tuesday night, spoke, among other things ,of the proposal of Sir James Whitney to bury the Hydro-Electric scheme in a government department.

Referring to the proposal to make Hydro power a department of the Government, and to place it in charge of a Minister, Mr. Rowell said this was characteristic of the Prime Minister. It was an outrage to the municipalities for the head of the Government, without consulting the parties interested, without consulting the Legislature, to say that this should be done by an edict of his imperious will. Mr. Rowell said:

"I would say to Sir James Whitney that to the full limit of the resources of the Opposition in the Legislature we will oppose a policy inimical to the best interests of the municipalities, prejudical to the development of our Hydro-Electric system; a policy which strikes one of the worst blows every struck to public ownership in this Province. If you take the administration of that great boon of the people from a business Commission and make it a department of Government, where it will be subject to the spoils of a patronage system, you do a great wrong to the people of this Province." (Loud applause.)

Continuing, Mr. Rowell reviewed the development of the Hydro-Electric movement from its inception, showing that from the beginning is was essentially a municipal undertaking. Hon. Adam Beck became connected with the scheme first as a representative of the municipalities. The Hydro-Electric Commission was a trustee for the municipalities; the responsibility rested entirely upon them. The Commission is the agent of the municipalities to distribute the power to them. If it is efficiently managed the municipolities will get the benefit of it. If there is an extravagance, incompetence, inefficiency, it costs the Government not a farthing.

"No more unprogressive, autocratic, or despotic use of power has ever been seen in this Province," Mr. Rowell went on, and declared amid resounding applause that "nothing will tend to more discredit the Hydro-Electric development, making a failure out of what might be a success, than by making that enterprise part of the political machine of either party.

"What is the position of Mr. Beck?" asked the Liberal leader. "I venture to say here—it is well known, it is a common report, it cannot be denied—that Mr. Beck, to his own friends and associates has no hesitation in expressing his disapproval of the proposal. It has come as a great surprise to many of Mr. Beck's friends throughout the Province that Mr. Beck has not had the courage of his convictions to resist the demands of the Prime Minister."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Sir William Mackenzie, remarks the Victoria (B.C.) Colonist, is over in England, where he is said to have raised $80,000,000 to buy up a few railways and similar trifles. The Chinese Government is at its wits' end to borrow $20,000,000. The Emperor of that land made the greatest mistake of his life when, at the time of Sir Donald Mann's visit to China some ten years or so ago, he did not strike a bargain with Mackenzie and Mann to run his country.

PRINCE RUPERT

Prince Rupert, British Columbia, the new seaport on the Pacific Coast which has been founded by the Grand Trunk Pacific Company for the western terminus of theNational Transcontinental Railway through Canada, continues to demonstrate the stability with which the enormous resources in that part of the world have endowed her. The population of about five thousand people who have settled there, thus forming the beginning of this future city, have shown their faith in its unquestioned future by building permanent homes and business establishments in almost every line of trade and commerce. Not alone in this faith confined to the citizens of Prince Rupert, but foreseeing the important factor she must early become in the commerce of the world, the leading banks, viz.: the Bank of Montreal, the Canadian Bank of Commerce, the Bank of British North America, the Royal Bank of Canada, etc. have located branches there. In all of our new Canadian towns and cities in the West and on the Pacific Coast, the buying and selling of real estate constitutes an item of much local importance and value, which, however, in the case of Prince Rupert has extended beyond the confines of the locality itself and even beyond the Province and Dominion to other parts of the world, for which large sums of money have been sent for investment and development. When the first lots in the townsite were placed on the market and sold a little more than two years ago the prices realized extended the expectations of the most sanguine by reaching figures in many cases several hundred per cent., and in numerous instances as much as one thousand per cent above what was estimated to be a fair valuation, and events since that time have given no cause to change the confidence then shown, as reports have just been received of the sale of an additional section of the townsite containing about six hundred lots, for which there was an increasing demand and which realized prices of about two hundred per cent. above what was considered a conservative valuation. The completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway through to the Pacific Coast is rapidly approaching, when trans-Pacific steamships will sail from this new seaport, and in order to be prepared for the increased accommodation and facilities that will will be required large additional capital expenditures will be made within the next two years to provide commodious hotel accommodations and also a dry dock and ship repairing plant, the latter of which will be constructed under a subsidy granted by the Dominion government.

During the past year the principal thoroughfares in the business section of the city have been constructed to grade, and extensive plans are at present receiving the serious consideration of the city council for municipal improvements in the way of heat, light, power and water, and from the energy which has already been shown by the citizens there can be no question that her many natural advantages will be availed of in building a city at Prince Rupert that will be a model of utility.

IS CANADIAN IMPERIALISM OF THE STERLING QUALITY?

We have heard a lot here in Canada, and the echo has gone all over the world, to the effect that the verdict of the Canadian electorate on September 21 was a verdict for Imperial unity.

It may have been; but it certainly does not look that way.

Take three news items in yesterdays issue of The Ottawa Free Press. The first stated that the Steel Trust of Canada was going to organize a monster deputation of members of Parliament to impress upon the Government the necessity for restoring the bounties, which Mr. Fielding abolished, or, failing that, the increasing of the duty upon British pig iron, because pig iron can be produced so much more cheaply in England and Wales than in Canada that the duty of ten per cent. under the preference tariff is not sufficient to enable the Steel Trust to pay substantial dividends upon the $100,000,000 of bonds and stocks which it has unloaded upon the public.

Thus far as regards the capitalistic side. What happened on the other side of the slate?

There was a deputation representing the trades unionists of Canada before the Premier of the Dominion to ask that additional barriers should be placed against the Englishman, the Scot or the Irishman, who wants to come to Canada, the "land of promise," under contract with an employer, because it was not less pleasing for a Canadian to find his place in a factory taken by a Britisher than by an alien.

Then, to press the point a little farther, the Government was asked to place the Indian subjects of the King-Emperor on exactly the same footing as the Chinese and the Japanese to debar them from Canada altogether, or, failing that, to restrict their immigration as much as possible.

In addition to this anti-British tendency of the times, we have the do-nothing policy as regards the navy.

What is the Imperialism of Canada anyway? We have declined so far to increase the British preference in the tariff. We are now seeing our manufacturers asking for further protection against British products, even though those products, be raw material; and we see our labour leaders asking for legislation which will restrict the coming to Canada of British subjects, except under regulation and supervision, which might be applicable to aliens but certainly have no right place in an "Imperial" Dominion.

Is that the right of Imperialism? If Canada is anything to-day it is because Britain has sent us her brawn and her blood—indeed, many of the men who asked yesterday for restriction of immigration from Britain were once immigrants themselves; it is because Britain is our banker; and it is because we have flourished under the flag.

All the talk of militant Imperialism served its purpose so far as platform speeches went and so far as campaign cries carried; but what is the result? We have the Protectionists of Capital demanding further protection from British competition; we have the Protectionists of Labour demanding that we shall keep out our brothers and sisters; and we have the combination of the Nationalists and Conservatives declaring that there is no need for hurry about the navy, that there is ample time.

Is that the sort of Imperialism which the Canada of 1912 stands for? We doubt it. It was not that sort of Imperialism which placed Canada in the front rank of the daughters of the Empire, when, on April 23, 1897, W. S. Fielding announced his free gift of a preference to the Mother Country; it was not that sort of Imperialism which thrilled the world when Wilfrid Laurier went over to London and told the people there "If you want our aid you must call us to your councils;" it was not that sort of Imperialism which allowed Canadians by the thousand to volunteer and offer to spend their blood for the flag in South Africa; it was not that sort of Imperialism which designed to make Canada ,that which Providence intended her to be, the great link of unity between the Mother England and the United States of America; it was not that sort of Imperialism which has made Canada the Mecca of the adventurous, the brave and the strong of the Mother Land.

It is easy to imagine conditions under which the restriction of certain classes of men might be advisable; it is even possible to imagine conditions under which it would be advisable to refuse money from certain quarters; but there can be no sane reason for the restriction of the import of either British blood or British manufactures (even if they be only pig iron) into this country. Just as long as we remain British we should give a preference to British men, to British women and to British children, just as we should also give a preference to British goods.

When we make up our mind to place further barriers against British blood or British goods, then the sooner we throw away our most boasted disguise of Imperialism the better.—Ottawa Free Press.

Court Stanley Officers Are Installed By The District High Chief Ranger

The annual installation of officers for Court Stanley, No. 7090, A. O. F., took place Tuesday night in the S.O.E. hall, before a large attendance of members, with the District High Chief Ranger, Bro. William Milne, of Trenton, in charge. The following were installed:

C.R.—F. Pratt.
J.C.R.—Geo. East.
Treasurer—S. Adlam.
Secretary—R. J. McWilliams.
Sr. Woodward—R. Hale.
Jr. Woodward—Jas. Hendry.
Sr. Beadle—Jas. Babb.
Jr. Beadle—A. Whittaker.
Chaplain—George Tremain.
Trustees—Bros. Edwards, Tremain and Hunwell.
Auditors—Bros. Malone, Record and McWhee.
Medical Officers—Drs. Scott and Amys.

Afterwards the gathering adjourned to Coleman's, where an oyster supper had been prepared in honour of the District High Chief Ranger and the new officers.

Afterwards a toast list was carried out and addresses of interest to the members were made. Chief Ranger Bro. F. Pratt occupied the chair and everyone had a good time.

In a well worded address Bro. Pratt thanked the members for electing him as Chief Ranger, a position which he hoped to fill to the satisfaction of all. He also thanked the retiring officers for the diligent work and harmony which had been evidenced.

Bro. A. Brotherson extended best wishes to the new officers for a prosperous year. What he had done during office was a duty which was also a pleasure, and during his term he had received able assistance from Bro. Pratt, the assistant chief.

Bro. Wm. Milne returned his thanks for another election to office as District Chief Ranger. He paid a tribute to the worth of Court Stanley and to the splendid work being done.

Other speakers were heard and a comic song by Bro. Henry was well received. Altogether the affair was a big success, and the year 1912 looks promising for Court Stanley. The singing of Auld Lang Syne concluded the evening.

By Ruth Cameron

"SHE is always thoroughly courteous" I heard one woman say about another the other day, and somehow it came to me with a new force, how very much that meant.

Courtesy, it seems to me, in the highest sense, means complete respect and observance of the rights and comforts of others.

Now, how many people could qualify under that definition as always thoroughly courteous?

No person can be thoroughly courteous who goes into a crowded place with hat so large and so decorated with protruding feathers or hatpins as to make other people uncomfortable, or even endanger their eyesight.

No person who allows himself to have a bad breath can be called thoroughly courteous. Think of the discomfort he inevitably causes.

No one who stops suddenly in the middle of the sidewalk without thinking what effect he may have on others can be called thoroughly courteous.

No person can qualify in that case who has a harsh, rasping voice and does not make any effort to overcome it.

No person could possibly be called thoroughly courteous who uses a party-line telephone for twenty minutes or half an hour on a stretch.

No one who is habitually or even frequently late to appointments could possibly be considered a model of courtesy, no matter how perfect his manners in all other particulars. Punctuality, you know, is the A. B. C. of politeness.

No one who, either because he is living beyond his means or because of carelessness, leaves bills, little or large, unpaid for weeks and months, could by any stretch of the imagination be called thoroughly courteous.

No one who deliberately travels at rush hours, when that is not necessary, can pretend to perfect courtesy.

No person who habitually disregards the rules asking him to use certain exits and entrances in a car, and hampers traffic by getting in or out of the wrong door, is courteous at all.

No person who carelessly holds a wet umbrella so that it will dampen other people's clothing, is perfectly courteous.

No person who keeps a book which has been loaned him for weeks and even months beyond a reasonable time is in the courtesy class.

No person who is always trying to keep the conversation on topics pertaining to, and of special interest to himself, is really courteous.

"Where your neighbour's rights begin, there yours stop."

Only the man or woman who thoroughly appreciates that definition and lives up to it, and perhaps a bit beyond it, qualifies, in my opinion, for the distinction of being called "perfectly courteous."

It's a large order, isn't it?

But I don't think it's too large.

Do you?

Ruth Cameron

BETTER GET YOUR MIND ON THE COAL QUESTION NOW

BURN Occo SCRANTON COAL

ROSEBOROUGH—McNAUGHTON.

(Sudbury Journal.)

On Saturday, Dec. 23rd, a very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. McNaughton, when Mr. and Mrs. D. McNaughton, when ried to Mr. Hall E. Roseborough. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. Jas. Desson, in the presence of about thirty friends and relatives.

At 7.30 to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by Mr. J. Henry, of Toronto, the bride descended the stairs. She was escorted by her father to the parlour, where the groom stood awaiting her. Their vows were taken under an arch of ferns, palms and smilax, interlaced with carnations and roses of pink and white. The bride looked charming in a gown of white messaline. She wore rosebuds in her hair and carried a large bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. The groom was dressed in the conventional black.

Immediately after the ceremony the guests were escorted to the dining room where a beautiful dinner was served, the table being very prettily decorated with pink and white roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Roseborough left on the Toronto local for a honeymoon trip to Toronto, Peterborough and other points in the east. They expect to remain away a month, after which they will be at home to their friends in Sudbury. They were the recipients of many beautiful and costly presents.

Among the out-of-town guests were Miss Mabel Andrews of North Dakota, a cousin of the bride, Mr. J. Henry of Toronto, and Mr. D. Smith of Sellwood.

ROSS CRAIG'S POSITION

Ross Craig, of Dundas, entered on his new studies in the long room in the local customs house yesterday. This will be welcome news to the many football enthusiasts in this city, as it means that Craig will be a member of one of the local senior teams.—Hamilton Herald.

SCOTCH CURLERS ARRIVE AT MONTREAL

MONTREAL, JAN. 10.— The Scottish curlers, who arrived in Montreal this morning, were awaited on at their hotel at 10.30, by Alderman Leslie Boyd, and escorted to the City Hall, where they were greeted by Alderman U. H. Dandurand, chairman of the Civic Reception Committee. Later Mayor Guerin received the visitors in the name of the city.

There was no speechifying, the reception being of an informal nature.

In the midst of the crush, for there were some half hundred friends of the granite in the Mayor's Chamber at the time, the famous Tam o' Shanter of Harry Wills was ever prominent. The white plume of Henry of Navarre has nothing on that Tam, take it from us.

The visitors and their entertainers then took a sleigh drive around the city and to the top of Mount Royal.

Sorest Corn Removed Without Pain, Quickly.

No wonder Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor sells so well. You see it is different from any other remedy you have ever used. Does not merely relieve the pain temporarily, but is guaranteed to remove the meanest, sorest corn or callous no matter how long it has bothered you. Get a 25c. bottle of "Putnam's" to-day and prove it. The name tells the story — Putnam's Painless Corn and Wart Extractor, which is sold by druggists.

PARALYZED LIMBS

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Hensburger, 39 Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: 'Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work, and now feel better than I did for 20 years.'

WATER BILLS

Consumers are given notice that in order to take advantage of discounts on water bills they must be paid on or before Monday, January 15th.

Cold, Cold, Cold And More Of It

The January thaw has evidently been postponed. We are having decidedly sharp winter weather, instead. Last night the despondent thermometer registered 4 below zero. Yesterday morning it was 8 below, and the indications are that the temperature will be considerably lower to-night. Mr. Walter Peters says that the records show that last year a this date we were favoured with an average of mild weather.

Ordination

At St. Peter's

The Rev. Mr. Egan, sub-Deacon, of the Archdiocese of Toronto, was ordained Deacon in the St. Peter's Cathedral by His Lordship Bishop O'Connor, this morning. At nine o'clock to-morrow morning His Lordship will ordain the Rev. Mr. Shaley, Deacon, also of the Archdiocese of Toronto.

To Serve Lunch

On The Train

It will be welcome news to the fans who intend accompanying the Peterborough Hockey Club to Belleville to-morrow, that the Peterborough Lunch has made arrangements to supply refreshments on the train both going and coming. Special cars will be attached to accommodate those who will be able to get refreshments on the train and go direct to the rink on arrival in Belleville.

NEW PETERBORO' FARED

IN THE ESTIMATES

Peterborough does not figure very conspicuously in the Dominion estimates presented in the House of Commons yesterday. The record is simple this: "Peterborough, post office addition, $3,500." "Peterborough, wharf, $13,000." The Toronto World, however, states that the "Trent Canal appropriation is $1,800,000, as against $2,500,000 for the year 1911." The estimates of nearly ten millions—$10,998,477—over the main estimates of Hon. Mr. Fielding, presented last year.

MANITOBA BOUNDARIE

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.—The Premier's announcement that he will bring down before Easter the correspondence that he will respecting the extension of the boundaries of Manitoba will be introduced at an early date, but meanwhile he declines to give any definition of his proposals, or to say whether the claims of conflicting claims of Manitoba and Ontario have been adjusted. It is, however, announced that a commission will be appointed to enquire into the boundary claims of British Columbia. The Auditor General's report has been issued, the only feature of interest is the one million dollars for advertising, printing and lithographing, while for local expenses a quarter of a million was expended.

LAID TO REST

The funeral of the late Mrs. David Campbell, of Toronto, a former resident of Peterborough, took place yesterday at Keene and was largely attended. Rev. Mr. Johnson of Keene officiated and the pall bearers were nephews of the deceased and Mr. George Latimer, a cousin. Among those who attended the funeral was Mr. George Nursey, of Lindsay.

INTERESTING LECTURE

At a meeting of the Ladies' Literary Society of St. Peter's, to-night at 8 o'clock, Mr. V. J. McGerry, the young lawyer of the firm of Peck, Kerr and McElderry, will deliver an exceptionally interesting lecture entitled "The Life and Works of Fr. Tesqua," in which he will deal with the early history of this section and also present the circumstances of his martyrdom. There will be musical and singing.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES

CHEESE TOAST.

Toast some thin slices of bread a light brown, and spread lightly with butter. Make a cup of cream sauce and add enough grated cheese to give a flavour to your taste, about half a cupful will be about right. Season with a little mustard, salt, pepper and paprika and when the cheese is melted pour over the toast and serve.

BAKED SCRAPED SQUASH.

Butter a baking dish and fill it with cooked Hubbard squash. Dot with butter, sprinkle sugar over the top and bake until tender.

prominent jewelers in this city, established 1870, have decided to give up business and have placed the entire stock in the hands of the Toronto Gold & Silver Sales Co., to be disposed of.

We have received instructions to sell the stock at 50c on the dollar, invoice price. As we have contracted to dispose of the entire stock within thirty days, values will cut no figure. Is it not reasonable then, that we can sell you goods at one-third their selling price?

I Am No Kellar or Conjuror

I cannot wave my hand in the air and produce a gold watch or a diamond ring, but what I can do and so could you, if you were in this business:—

When I get a stock of nice clean merchandise and am instructed to sell at 50c on the dollar, I can give you a genuine bargain at one third the original selling price.

I am going to sell every dollar's worth of goods in this store, and I will give them to you at prices that will make friends for me and send me business every day that I am here.

H. LIGHT, Sales Manager

Every article in the store has a coloured tag on. The price is marked in plain figures; you can look around yourself, our salespeople will not annoy you.
If you do not wish to buy you are welcome just the same. Every visitor means a customer some time.
This is not an ordinary every-day bargain sale, don't forget that. It is a sale that takes place very rarely, a real RETIRING SALE, so don't miss it whatever you do.

SATURDAY, the 13th Instant, is the Opening of this Bang-up, Crowd-bringing Sale

W. A. SANDERSON & CO.'S

Store, 367 George St., Peterboro'

Do Not Allow Anything To Keep You Away From This Sale. It Means Dollars and Cents to You.

P. S.—On account of the limited time we have to dispose of this stock, and the very low prices at which we will sell the goods, we will not be able to exchange anything, so be careful in Choosing.

SCOTO-CANADIAN CURLING NOTES

In connection with the Scottish curlers' visit to Canada (they arrive in Peterborough on Sunday, Jan. 21), by Mr. Andrew Blair, Drumclair, Scotland, the hon. secretary and treasurer of the Scoto-Canadian Curling Association, has received the following letter from Mr. Blair:

"Here we are waiting to greet you on board, to pray you, a short curling breakfast;

We don't be sleeping, for every one's saying

Here's to the maple entwined with the heather,
Emblems of sadness no fashion can cover;
When can bonds
May their friendship ne'er fail!
That's the Bens Orchard mark.

Scotland's response to the sentiments will be delighted to join you one more:

Nine cheers have passed since we met
Three years have gone since you bid us
The ice has thickened o'er the curling pond
Full many a stone has been sent
Our dear old friends, boys, as lads play
And all join in singing this rousing refrain:

Here's to the maple, etc.

Friends and brothers, with maple entwined,
There be the emblems we curlers hold dear,
Friends and brothers that's "Scotland for ever,"
Chorus together now, never cease a grief.
Evil dissension can never come a
While thistle and maple entwined.
Curlers brothers now, hand in hand,
The Thistle, Our King, and The Dear Maple Leaf,
Here's to the maple, etc.

Rev. H. J. Keith Has Decided To Retain Pastorate Of Knox Church

Annual Meeting of the Church Which Was Held Last Evening Shows Encouraging Growth---A Unique Scheme for Meeting the Interest Account.

The decision of Rev. H. J. Keith to retain the pastorate of Knox Church, and the announcement of a unique scheme for meeting the interest account of the church building fund, were the two outstanding features in connection with the annual meeting of Knox Church, which was held in the Sunday School room last night. A large number of church officials, and members were present at the meeting. After devotional exercises, led by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Keith was unanimously elected chairman.

Will Retain Peterborough Pastorate.

In reference to the call from St. Paul's Church, Port Hope, Rev. Mr. Keith clearly explained his position as regards the matter, which was to the effect that he had nothing whatever to do with the recent approaches of the Port Hope church officials.

On Friday evening a deputation, consisting of eight men from St. Paul's church journeyed to this city, and interviewed Rev. Mr. Keith, with a view to securing his services to replace Rev. Mr. Abraham, who has been removed to Guelph. The proposition which the Port Hope deputation offered to Rev. Mr. Keith was, in many respects, an attractive one, and one that did not involve such large responsibilities as that involved in the Peterborough charge. On Saturday evening a large delegation, representing the various organizations of Knox Church, waited upon Mr. Keith, and assured him of their confidence, and urgent desire for him to continue as pastor of Knox Church. After carefully considering the matter Mr. Keith decided to accede to the wishes of the members of his congregation, and with that end in view, mailed a reply to the Port Hope authorities.

Salary Increased.

Prior to this statement Rev. Mr. Keith was agreeably surprised by an announcement made by Dr. McCullough, stating that he was in receipt of a letter from a friend who desired that his name be not divulged. The writer of the letter expressed his anxiety lest Mr. Keith should decide to accept the Port Hope call, and went on to say that should the management of Knox Church be successful in retaining Mr. Keith, he (the writer) would contribute one hundred dollars for two consecutive years, to be added to the pastor's salary. This was followed by an additional two hundred dollars to the pastor's salary, made by the Board of Management.

A resolution was passed, carrying with it the thanks of the Board to the anonymous donor of one hundred dollars to the minister's salary. This was moved by Mr. J. Muir, and seconded by K. Denoon.

A Unique Scheme.

An honour roll of one hundred men who will assume responsibility for the interest incurred by the buiding fund received considerable attention at the hands of the Board. Mr. Shurter and Mr. Keith lucidly explained the nature of the proposition. It is estimated that about one thousand dollars yearly is needed to cover the interest fund. Not only that, it obtains as being a burden to the congregation in its present form. The idea of the honour roll is to eliminate this by getting one hundred men, to contribuate ten dollars per annum, if two payments, to be applied to this fund. Already about twenty-five names have been placed on the roll, and indications are that very little difficulty will be experienced in securing the rest. Mr. Keith stated that the idea of segregating the interest fund had been obtained from an outside source, and, since its inception, he had yet to hear of a dissenting voice.

Minor Business.

The matter of appointing a Secretary, Treasurer and Chairman for the Board of Management was left in the hands of the Board.

Mr. Huffman was appointed as representative of the Charity Board of the city.

Mr. Watt was appointed treasurer of the Missionary funds.

Mr. F. Reid and H. Young were appointed auditors.

The question of procuring copies of the "Record," the official church organ, for distribution, was left in the hands of Mr. Routley for another year.

The action of the Board in sending a letter of thanks to Mr. R. Waddell and Mrs. Waddell for their generous donation of $1,000 to the Knox Church Building Fund was endorsed.

Reports Received.

The Treasurer's report of the Sunday School, showed that organization to be in a flourishing condition. The total receipts for the year were $408.43. Contributions to missions amounted to $48.75.

The Young People's Guild showed a balance on hand of $14.19.

The Treasurer of the Brotherhood reported that the work of auditing the books had not been completed, but he had every reason to believe that they would have a substantial balance.

A most encouraging report was that of the Ladies' Aid Society. The total receipts for the year were $583.29, expenditure $567.91; balance on hand $25.38.

The Treasurer of the missionary funds reported the sum of $299.16, as total receipts. The figures for the previous year were $245.

Total receipts reported by the Building Committee were $8,091 for the year. Total paid out, $7,755.96.

Mission Band, total receipts including life membership, $28.56.

Treasurer of the Board of Managers' report was a very flourishing one. Total collections were $2,665. Balance in bank, $48.42.

Rev. Mr. Keith gave a brief summary of the work accomplished during the past year, by the church. Many new members had been added during the year, this result being due in a large measure to the evangelistic campaign, which was conducted by Rev. Mr. Woodside of Owen Sound, during the beginning of the year. The total membership was in the neighbourhood of five hundred members. The mid-week services held in the homes of the members were also productive of much good.

These reports were adopted.

Mr. A. McKenzie, chairman Building committee, gave a brief summary of the work in connection with that department. Two years ago he had been called upon to accept the position of chairman of the committee, and was glad to say that the work was now completed. In conclusion, Mr. McKenzie moved that the congregation take over the affairs of the Building committee as there was no further need for the services of that body.

The motion to dissolve the Building committee was carried unanimously.

Mr. W. Byers and Mr. H. McCannon were appointed treasurers of the Interest Fund and Treasurers' Building Account respectively.

The following gentlemen were elected to the Board of Managers. Messrs. J. W. Byers, R. Mulligan, K. Denoon and Dr. McCullough.

A vote of thanks was extended to the choir, the Treasurers of the Official Boards and to the caretaker, Mr. Barrell respectively, after which the meeting was brought to a close.

Refreshments, provided by the Ladies' Aid, were then partaken of, and a social hour indulged in.

HAS AMAZED THE WORLD

It has been well said that the most conservative nation in existence has amazed the world by the revolution that has taken place against the Manchu rulers and the establishment of a republic.

If the civilised countries of the world only but knew the condition to which this most ancient civilisation has sunk in the regions that are never in contact with western industry, art and commerce, the surprise would be greater still.

To supply what the civilised world needs so much at the present moment a daring young English journalist has traveled across China on foot. His name, Edwin J. Dingle, has up to the present been little known on the London press, but it is safe to say that in the future it will challenge a place with those of the leaders in the profession.

On this side of the Atlantic this young journalist would probably be called a "cub" reporter, something like Winston Churchill when he made the famous trip "London to Ladysmith via Pretoria."

Mr. Dingle conceived the idea of walking across the wildest and most unknown provinces of western China in order to see what would happen to him.

He had no official papers to command respect, and he could not speak a word of Chinese when he started. Naturally, he had adventures, and he tells them modestly, but entertainingly.

From Shanghai, 1,500 miles up the Yangtze river he went by boat, in itself an exciting trip, especially through the gorges. From the Yangtze gorges he walked 1,600 miles through a beautiful and perilous mountain region, bordering on Thibet to the frontier of British Burma. Later wanderings through interior China brought the total to 6,700 miles traveled in that country. Some of the places visited have been untrodden by Europeans.

PREMONITIONS OF CIVIL STRIFE.

Mr. Dingle went through several dangerous uprisings, for everywhere he found premonitions of civil war and of the present reform movement. He lived with the Chinese, ate their food, slept in their vermin-infested beds, was taken ill in remote Yunnan, lay for days at the point of death, remained at Tong-chuan-fu for months recovering his health, and had been in China two years by the time this book was completed. It is not strange that he has some fresh and unhackneyed things to tell about the Chinese and their life in the far interior provinces, especially Sse-chwan and Yun-nan.

The hardships of travel in the interior of China are enough to appall any but the stoutest heart and the strongest stomach. Mr. Dingle expresses the belief that nowhere in the world unless perhaps in parts of remote Russia, are the dirt, disease and discomforts of the inns equal to those of Sze-chwan and Yun-nan. Here is a description of how he slept:

WHAT THE AVERAGE INN BED IS LIKE.

"Over the bedstead, usually composed of four planks of varying lengths and thickness, placed across two trestles, I used first to place my oilskin, then my pu-kai, and that little creeper which rhymes with bug did not disturb me much. Rats ran round and over me in profusion, and, of course, the best room being invariably nearest the pig styes, there were the usual stenches. The floor was Mother Earth, which in wet weather became mud."

The intense curiosity of the people concerning the barbarian who had come among them, with the utter impossibility of securing privacy anywhere, was another source of annoyance, sometimes of hardship. In the main the people were kindly disposed to the stranger. Though the reform movement was sometimes hard to discern, the determination to abolish the opium habit was strong even in Yunnan. In the capital of that province two years ago the officials did a daring thing. They brought 20,040 ounces of prepared opium to the execution ground and destroyed it all in the presence of an enormous crowd. In July, 1910, Mr. Dingle noted a "truly wonderful change." "In Sse-chwan, in April, 1909," he says, "I passed miles and miles of poppy along the main road—to-day there is none to be seen. It is to be hoped that Great Britain will do her part as faithfully as China is doing hers."

Yet the wretchedness of the poor in Yun-nan is still terrible—made temporarily worse by the loss of the opium trade. Mr. Dingle asked his English-speaking "boy" to find out whether girls were still sold publicly in Chaotong.

THE SELLING OF GIRLS.

"Have got plenty," exclaimed the boy, in describing this wholesale selling of female children into slavery. "I know, I know; you wanchee makee buy. Can do! You wanchee catch one piecee small baby, can catchee, two, three tael. Wanchee one piecee very much tall, can catchee fifty dollar."

"This wholesale disposal of young girls," says the author, "is one of the chief sorrows of the district. And well it might be, for thousands of children are disposed of in the course of a year for a few taels by heartless parents, who watch them being carried away, like so much merchandise, to be converted into silver, in many cases in this poverty-stricken district merely to satisfy the craving for opium of some sodden wretch of a man who calls himself a father. Time and time again, long after I myself passed through Chau-tong, did I see little girls from 8 to 10 years of age being conveyed by pack-horse to the capital, balanced in baskets on either side of the animal.

"Babies in Yun-nan, for the great majority, are not coaxed, not tossed up and down and petted, not soothed, not humored. There are none to kiss away their tears; they have no toys and dream no young dreams, but are brought straight into the iron realities of life. They are reared in cruelty and ghastliness and moral filth; and become men and women when they should be children.

"In the particular district of which I speak it is not an uncommon sight to see little children being torn to pieces by dogs, the scavengers of the empire, perhaps by the very dogs that had been their playmates from birth. I have been riding many times and found that my horse had stepped on a human skull, and near by were the bones that the dogs had left as the remains of the corpse."

In this desert of wretchedness Mr. Dingle found the work of the missionaries to be almost the only oasis. When his arm was broken by falling from a pony and malarial fever had made him delirious, though he still had to drag himself along the almost impassable road, his life was saved by reaching the mission at Tong-chuan-fu. He has many interesting things to tell about the missionaries, though he found the native mind sadly confused by the conflict between different Christian sects.

LYING ALMOST UNIVERSAL.

Mr. Dingle reluctantly admits that lying "seems to be absolutely universal" in China. "I have found the Chinaman — I speak of the common people, for in my travels I have not mixed much with the rich—the greatest liar on earth. And yet in business —above the petty bargaining business —we have as the antithesis that the Chinaman's word is his bond. I would rather trust the Chinaman merely on his word than the Jap with a signed contract." Thus he goes on depicting the strange contradictions in the Chinese character, until at last he has to confess that he finds it more impossible at the end of two years to make a safe general verdict than when he first started on his travels.

Winter Camping For Boys

WINTER CAMPING FOR BOYS.

Winter is the best time of the entire year to begin the study of woodcraft. At this time there is just as much fun and recreation to be found in camp-life as in summer.

All nature is simplified tenfold. The earth in general is mantled in snow, and every animal that treads the forest-trails must leave behind him a record of his travels. Indeed, the woods are fully as interesting as at any other season, and a deal easier to understand.

Many of the pests that go to annoy the summer camper are absent. The only real annoyance we have to contend with is cold, and Nature furnishes us plenty of fuel with which we may easily subdue its rigors.

In pitching our winter camp, we must reverse many of the rules that hold good in summer. Instead of seeking a site atop a knoll or upon some exposed level, we search for a sheltered nook with a rise behind and at the sides also, if possible. At any rate we must find a spot where we can get the back of our tent to what breeze there is stirring, and have a windbreak in front.

The shelter itself (which may be a slab or brush lean-to, or a canvas tent) should be open at the front, and sloping back and downward. Whatever it may happen to be constructed of, it should conform pretty much to the design of the timber cruisers' tent. A very good substitute can be made by simply doubling an old A tent and adding a few stays and loops; only, in this case, what were once the ends becomes the sides of the open front.

The fire is of as much or greater importance than a shelter in a winter camp. It should be built outside and close to the front of the tent, and backed with rocks or green logs, so as to throw its heat directly into the shelter instead of wasting it upon the surrounding atmosphere. Through the night a brisk fire is necessary, and for this reason it is best to divide the night hours into watches. If there are eight boys, split the sleeping time from 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. into four periods of two and one-half hours each. Let the watchers make sure the fire never dies out.

The best woods for an all-night fire are hickory, birch, dogwood, locust, cherry, ash, and slippery elm. I am strongly in favour of using rocks as a backing for the camp fire, but if these are unobtainable logs of balsam, box-elder, sassafras, poplar, sycamore, or tamarack will take their place. In fact, logs are generally employed for this purpose. They are propped up with stakes and the spaces between are plastered with clay or mud.

Though you will need much wood, yet it is not necessary to destroy any live trees; use dead trees and old logs.

When you begin your chopping, see that no branch or trailing vine is in a position to impede your strokes, as the tiniest obstruction might cause a dangerous slip. Do not attempt to throw your full strength into each stroke, but rather let the weight of the axe do the work. The main thing is to place your stroke carefully, so as to bring out a big chip at each swing.

Clear off the space for the tent, if the ground happens to be covered with snow. Then build a rousing fire in the cleared spot and let it burn for a couple of hours. This will thaw out the earth and make the tent several degrees more comfortable.

Bedding may be made of straw, fir browse, or dead leaves. A rubber blanket or a strip of canvas can be laid next the ground to protect the bedding. If a large enough ground cloth to cover the entire floor space is provided, it will make the interior almost luxurious. String a rope between the tent-poles for a drying-line.

After camp is made and the first meal cooked and eaten, most boys will want to turn their attention to tracking or stalking, and then, in time, to a few good, stirring camp games, to keep the blood warm.

Trailing is one of the best sports I know for a day when the earth is snowed in. It originated with Indian children years ago. Two boys, representing pioneers, take a thirty minutes' start. Then the rest of the boys, representing Indians, take up the trail and endeavour to overtake the leaders.

In this game the pioneers can make good use of all the blind leads, back-trackings, side-jumps, etc., they have become familiar with in their study of animal tracks. Back-tracking is a trick common to deer and foxes. Make a plain straight trail, then return, stepping entirely in your first footprints. Then, at some advantageous point, take a long side-leap and make off again.

Another favourite trick is to circle until you see your own trail. Follow this for a short distance, then make one of the long side-jump. The double loop, blind leads, and the jumble are puzzlers.

The pioneer should always walk straight-footed, rather than to toe out. He can travel with less fatigue and it simplifies back-tracking.

The pursuers must stick to the trail, and are not allowed to scatter in their search.

This is only one of many games that suggest themselves. The morning devoted to tracking and the study of wood animals and woodcraft; the afternoons given to good, red-blooded games of some sort; the evenings to camp-stories and camp-songs, and the nights to sound sleep, with a faithful watcher to keep the fire going—here is the ideal winter camp; and a strong rival it is to the best summer camp ever planned.—Woman's Home Companion.

A "WHITE HOPE"

NEW YORK, JAN. 10.—And now comes one Charles Millage, a Frenchman, with predictions of a real "white hope," and a Frenchman at that. The forecast of Mr. Millage deserves more than passing attention, for it concerns one of the world's greatest fighters, young Carpentier, the French champion. Carpentier, says Mr. Millage, is the coming "white hope."

If young Carpentier continues to grow as a champion and mows down everything while growing, then Jack Johnson may well look to his laurels. The English welterweight champion was the latest victim of Carpentier, and Harry Lewis' measure has also been taken by this phenom.

Carpentier is now 19 years old and has been fighting since he discarded his baby clothes. He has held the featherweight, lightweight and welterweight championships and has successfully defended them. His real boxing began two years ago when he was a skinny little chap in knickerbockers, with thin arms and legs and narrow chest. But Carpentier is growing fast. When he fought Young Josepha he had a hard struggle to make the weight and when the fight was over he then and there decided to let the welterweight class go. He became a middleweight and it is hard for him to make the 158 pounds now. He is growing at the rate of an inch a month in height and is developing wonderfully. When he has attained his full growth he will be over six feet tall and will weigh over 200 pounds. He is now the fastest and cleverest fighter in all Europe. If he retains his speed and forcefulness, young Carpentier is truly a "white hope."

WILL BE CHAMPION.

Marcel Moreau, the French middleweight champion, who came here under the management of Mr. Millage, has trained Carpentier, and he asserts that his protege will, in time, be the world's champion heavyweight. This assertion coming from Moreau should also carry weight, for Moreau has a great record in his own country. He has fought 45 battles and won 36 of them on a knockout. He is said to be clever, and yet he rushes and mixes it whenever the opportunity offers, just like Bat Nelson. Although unscarred, Moreau looks like a fighter. His face is the face of the fighter, with high cheek bones, heavy jaw, quick, watchful eye and a general air of quiet determination and aggressiveness. When stripped you see a man built for fighting. His legs are light below the knee, strong but light above. His waist is strong and muscular, his shoulders big and broad, and the muscles of his arms, back and shoulders unusually heavy in proportion. His muscles are not knotty, but large and smooth. He does not carry an ounce of superfluous flesh.

AFTER PAPKE.

Moreau comes to America with the idea of fighting Billy Papke, who is still regarded in France as the middleweight champion. Moreau declares that he can whip Papke and that he came here for that express purpose. Until Papke decides to give him a bout, however, Moreau will train quietly in New York, and may probably take on a few of the middleweights now cavorting round these diggings.

While on the subject of matters foreign, let me comment on the latest from London—the tabooing of the "kidney punch."

The so-called "kidney punch" that is being used to-day is no punch at all. There are few of the present-day fighters that know much about the kidneys and the so-called punch. George Dawson, boxing instructor of the Chicago Athletic Club, is one of the few that really has an effective kidney punch. Dawson was once the lightweight champion and he often put this punch over. He would wait for his man and swing his left, then draw away to make his opponent miss, and coming in again, as his opponent turned sideways from the force of his ineffective swing, he would plant his right mitt squarely on the kidney with great force. After landing the blow, to get away cleverly. The alleged kidney punch of to-day, however, is nothing more than a slap with the ends of the fingers or the heel of the glove, and it should be barred for the reason that it is not good boxing nor scientific, and it might so injure a kidney that an after ailment would follow. Blows that have a bearing on the present moment only should be permitted in contests. England is right; takes the kidney punch, as well as the semblance of kidney punch as it is to-day.

WEAR LONG HAIR.

Why will the modern scrapper persist in wearing long hair? Perhaps the only answer is that it is the fashion to have a heavy hirsute adornment and one may as well be dead as be out of style. This being a stranger to the barber business is overdone by our chamois pushers. It has been carried to extremes. Annoying to the fighter himself and to his opponent it also gets on the nerves of the spectator to have a scrapper continually stepping to shove back his long locks. It makes the fighter lose interest in the work in hand and likewise the ringsider who pays to see the milling. In the time of old John L. Sullivan and men before him a fighter who wore his hair long was exceptional. They had no time in those days to brush the hair out of their eyes. They made no pretenses at looking pretty. They were fighters pure and simple and not fashion plates like many of the so-called hitters of to-day. One of these old-timers, John Wills, a heavyweight of Chicago, appeared in a local ring the other night, and before he had made his public appearance he had his hair clipped, and clipped close, too. It reminded one of the good old days. And, when Willie got in the ring and defeated Andy Morris, of Boston, one of the new school fighters, there were many of the old boys who sat around and yelled themselves hoarse. Morris' hair was long and the contrast was noticeable. Get wise, boys.

International Skating Club

NEW YORK, JAN. 10.—Irving Brokaw, who was the champion figure skater in America in 1906, is forming an international skating club, the principal object of which is to cultivate in this country the continental or international form, and so make it possible in the near future for Americans to compete with the Swedes, Germans, Russians, Austrians and English.

"The hockey craze has killed real artistic figure skating in this country," said Mr. Brokaw. "Hockey is a splendid game, but it is a pity that it should have resulted in figure skating becoming a lost art in America. It is noteworthy that the systematic study of the art did not begin in Europe until the visit of Jackson Haines, the celebrated American figure skater, about forty years ago. Haines really taught Europe artistic skating. By holding yearly competitions Europe perfected the art and standardised the style. To-day America is the only important country not represented in the International Skating Union of Europe. Americans have their own style and cannot enjoy the pleasure of competing with foreigners. We must change our ideals and go with the majority.

INTERNATIONAL RULES.

"If we examine the international rules we find them similar to those for good American form except that they go somewhat further and endeavour to emphasize the importance of good form and proper carriage of the balance foot, which is at the present time too little considered in American skating.

"Other things being equal, the skater abroad who skates largest wins. A comparison of the two different styles shows that on account of our figures being made smaller and there being many so-called 'kick' moves, it is difficult to keep the body in easy and graceful position. Besides, too much stress has been laid on correct marks in the ice of late, to the exclusion of good form and graceful carriage and movement. If we hope to keep abreast of the times and keep up the interest in the art and draw recruits to this interesting sport, we must adopt some standard of form to go by and adopt a set of figured which are alike interesting for spectators and contestants.

"Why is such great interest taken in international contests? It appears to me simply everybody knows what is necessary to be done months beforehand.

"Now, what do we propose to do in our new club? We propose to add the compulsory figures of the European programme to our own, and drop completely the cross-cuts, or axells, for they are 'kick' turns—ungainly and awkward. As for our grapevines, spins and pirouettes, we will require some of them to be skated in the five-minute, 'free-skating' period which we will adopt from the international programme.

NOT ANTAGONISTIC.

"Now, I don't want skaters to think that we are insurgents or at all antagonistic to present organizations. We cannot stand still in the art of skating. We are not going to call the new body an association, but a club. We want to popularize figure skating, of which very little is really known in America. We want to unite figure skaters all over the world, and will invite famous skaters of this country and abroad to become honorary members. In this way we hope to induce well-known skaters from the other side to visit America, and will assure a more hearty welcome for Americans abroad."

Mr. Brokaw only recently returned from Sweden, France and Austria, where Ulrich Salchow, of Stockholm, ten times European champion; Gustav Hugel, of Vienna; Dr. Gilbert Fuchs, of Munich, and Henry Gresadder, of London, former European champions, were among those who are giving Mr. Brokaw active assistance.

NUT PUDDING.

Take two eggs, half a cup of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, half a cup of water, and enough flour to make a thin batter. Stir well together. Add a teaspoonful of baking powder mixed with a little flour. Then stir in half a cup of chopped walnut meats mixed with a teaspoonful of flour. Bake in a buttered dish for half an hour and serve with the following sauce:

Take one cup of sugar, a level tablespoonful of cornstarch, or flour, one teaspoonful of butter and a little nutmeg. Add a cup of cold water. Stir well and put over the fire. Continue to stir until smooth. When done add a teaspoonful of vinegar.

ORANGE PUDDING.

Soak a quarter of a pound of macaroons in a scant pint of milk. Beat four eggs with a scant half cup of sugar. Mix and beat all together until smooth, then add the juice of two oranges and grated rind of one. Pour into a buttered pudding mold and boil for 30 minutes. Serve with hard sauce.

All Aboard For Belleville
Big Crowd Going Down

Hockey Excursion Will Attract Many Fans to Bay of Quinte City To-morrow---Special Train Will Leave G. T. R. Station at 4:30 O'clock, Returning After the Game.

The hockey excursion to Belleville to-morrow will leave the Grand Trunk station sharp at 4.30 o'clock, arriving in nice time for the game. The probabilities are that a big crowd of fans will make the journey to the Bay of Quinte town, as there is great interest in Peterborough over the result of the battle. It is highly important that Peterborough should grab to-morrow night's fixture, and the presence of a good crowd of supporters will be of invaluable interest to the team. Little is known here of Belleville's line-up, but it is said that the team is a strong one, and that the Petes will have their hands full to-morrow. In any event it will be a game well worth seeing, as Belleville always were an awkward proposition on their own ice. A cheap excursion rate has been secured of $1.75 for the return trip, the best rate yet for an excursion to Belleville. Children will be carried for 90 cents. The train will leave for home immediately after the game. The Peterborough team will line up as follows:

Goal—Derocher.
Point—Bearss.
Cover—Bond.
Rover—Giroux.
Centre—Park, (Capt.)

It is expected that Harvey Sproule will referee the game.

Lindsay Warder Comments
On Tuesday's O. H. A. Game
Bouquets For Coughlin

Here are some of the comments of the Lindsay Warder on Tuesday night's Junior O.H.A. game:

It was a good exhibition, but without endeavouring to trump any excuse for the defeat, it might be said that the Sucogville seven did not put up nearly as speedy a game as they did against the Port Hope aggregation in Lindsay. Owing to Capt. Callaghan being under the ban until Saturday night, the local forward line was materially weakened. The forwards missed "Cal's" fast rushes and the defence missed his effective back checking. McIntyre showed up well, but the local forwards failed to work together. Dennison put up a heady hockey game, while McConnell at cover point was one of the best men on the ice. Henley in goal, starred, sharing equal honours with the Peterborough guardian of the nets. He put up a splendid game and saved his team mates from a larger score. The same can be said of young Dwyer, who appeared between the nets for the Porridge eaters. He had the horse shoes.

Joy reigns supreme in Burnhamville to-day as a result of the victory, for if there is one thing the electric city people like better than defeating one team from their old rival town, Lindsay, it is defeating two teams. As a result of the two victories, Peterborough's stock has gone up and the red feather is being worn in the hat.

By far the best man on the Peterborough line-up was Jerry Coughlin, who played a wing position. Coughlin is fast and effective, so speedy in fact that he has probably played his last junior game this season. It is understood that Coughlin will play in the intermediate ranks hereafter. Hall at centre was also very much in the limelight and put up a splendid game. The defence was strong and managed to shunt the Lindsay forwards off into the corners of the rink. It was useless for one player to attempt to score unassisted and combination was a necessity in the goal getting. The Midgets fell down lamentably in their combination, while the Petes played a triple and four-man combination effectively throughout the game.

The juvenile Petes have won two home games. How will they shape up in their foreign games?

Peterborough juniors are fast and no mistake, but how about the bunch from Cobourg? They held Peterborough down to a score of 9 to 8 at the porridge city, and appear to have some team.

A new rule was in vogue last evening, when the goal umpire was allowed to coach the Peterborough team while acting in his official capacity.

There was no stopping that man Coughlin, who made an end to end rush at least every two minutes.

The Petes are certainly sure of a trimming when they land in Lindsay on Monday evening.

It is conceded by Peterborough experts that the Midgets will win the district as Coughlin will play intermediate from now on and Cobourg have lost Freenon, their star man, for accompanying Callaghan to Oshawa.

Thanks to Oshawa for their kindness in having Callaghan "fired" because he refused to play for them. It is a long road that has no turn. Lindsay may get back at Oshawa before long, when Mr. Graham, their goal-tender, is asked to tell of his whereabouts during the past year.

The Peterborough rooters certainly showed a good sporting spirit, as they cheered loudly every time Lindsay scored and also when they appeared on the ice.

The game was lost in the first half due to the absence of Callaghan, which put the entire forward line at sea, but in the second half they steadied down and played real hockey.

All the Midgets require is a little more combination and the district is theirs.

T. A. S. EXPECT TO OPEN SEASON WITH VICTORY

Goal—McFadden.
Point—Meagher.
Cover—Lancefield.
Rover—McPhee.
Centre—Halpin.

This will be the line-up of the T. A. S. team against Campbellford at Brock Street Rink to-night, in the opening game of the Trent Valley League. The ice is in great shape, and the game should be fast from start to finish. Campbellford visitors are coming up on a special train with a big crowd of fans and are looking for a victory. The T. A. S. team, however, is in fine shape and President Grady expects to start the season with a win to-night. Some new faces will be seen on the T. A. S. line-up, and also some old ones. The game is called for 8.15 o'clock.

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

Juniors to Practise.

The Peterborough Junior O. H. A. team will practise to-morrow (Friday) night at 7 o'clock at Brock Street rink. A full attendance of players is requested. The Young Petes have the hardest game of the season before them at Lindsay on Monday, and it is important that every player should be out to-morrow night.

To Go on the Road.

The Peterborough Juniors, after cleaning up Cobourg and Lindsay, at Peterborough, have now to go on the road, and will make the circuit of the district before playing the final game at home with Port Hope. On Monday next they play in Lindsay, on Thursday, in Port Hope, and the following Monday in Cobourg. Upon the result of these games away from home, depends the championship of the district.

To Wear Junior Uniforms.

Owing to an accident in the factory the new uniforms of the Peterborough Intermediate team will not arrive in time for to-morrow night's game, and it will be necessary to use the junior uniforms for this game. The members of the Junior team are asked to be at the rink early this evening in order to get their jerseys out of their lockers for use to-morrow.

The Bank League.

The Dominion-Montreal team easily defeated the Ottawa-Union team in a Bank League game at Brock St. Rink yesterday, by 10 goals to 1. The half-time score was 6 to 1. The winners had considerably the better of the play as the score indicates. Cook and Elliott were the stars of the winners, while Corkery was the best of the losing combination. H. W. Harper refereed satisfactorily.

Mercantile League.

The Lock-Works and the Bell Telephone Company are the opposing teams in the Mercantile League fixture at Brock Street Rink at seven o'clock on Saturday evening.

Lakefield Wants Game.

The Lakefield Hockey Club would like to arrange exhibition games with any good Peterborough team. Address all communications to H. T. Armstrong, secretary.

Curling Notes

Six rinks of the Campbellford Curling Club will accompany the Trent Valley Hockey team of that town to this city to-night, and will engage in a friendly game with the local aggregation.

The ice is in excellent condition at present, as is also the enthusiasm of the curlers. Five schedule games were pulled off last night, with the following results:

W. Koster	T. Hooper
J. Stanley	W. P. Adamson
D. B. Dennison	G. L. Hay
J. H. Ferguson	W. McIlroy
Skip . . .10	Skip . . .12

J. Read	W. F. McKnight
J. Wolstenholme	A. Archibald
R. J. Soden	R. Cameron
R. Neil	Dr. Wightman
Skip . . . 9	Skip . . .12

In view of the fact that the Campbellford curlers will be in the city to-night there will be no schedule games.

SPRING TRAINING TRIP

TORONTO, JAN. 10.—President J. J. McCaffery of the Toronto Ball Club returned to-day from his trip to Baltimore and New York.

The team will report at Washington on Saturday, March 16, and go direct to Macon, Ga., where they will stay for two weeks, leaving March 30 by easy stages for the north playing exhibition games until the opening of the championship season on Thursday, April 18. The itinerary of the team is as follows:

Saturday, March 16—Report in Washington; leave Washington at 10.45 p. m. for Macon.

Stay two weeks in Macon. Leave March 30.

April 1 and 2—Atlanta, Ga.
April 3 and 4—Spartansburg, S. C.
April 5 and 6—Richmond, Va.
April 8 and 9—Petersburg, Va.
April 10 and 11—Norfolk, Va.
April 12—Harrisburg, Pa.
April 13 and 14—Wilkesbarre, Pa.
April 15 and 16—Scranton, Pa.
April 17—Trenton, N. J.
April 18—New York, N.Y., for the opening of the International League season on this date at Jersey City.

Washington to Macon, 736 miles.
Macon to Atlanta, 88 miles.
Atlanta to Spartansburg, 192 miles.
Spartansburg to Richmond, 358 miles.
Richmond to Petersburg, 23 miles.
Petersburg to Norfolk, 82 miles.
Norfolk to Harrisburg, 209 miles.
Harrisburg to Wilkesbarre, 117 miles.
Wilkesbarre to Scranton, 19 miles
Scranton to New York, 146 miles
Total, 1,969 miles.

Last year the Toronto team traveled over 2,500 miles, going across country to Louisville for one game.

There will be 20 players taken south, all experienced, tried men. No youngsters will be along as last year. Contracts will be sent out by the Toronto Club to all players, including Tim Jordan and George Winter, who jumped the team last year.

Mr. McCaffery spent a day in New York with Tim Jordan and Dick Rudolph, and both will be aboard the Toronto special car from Washington to Macon on March 16. Wherever he went the Toronto president was besieged with the enquiry::

"Have you sold Tim Jordan?"

The next person to mention the subject will be in Mr. McCaffery's bad books. The answer is that the Toronto Club hasn't sold Jordan and doesn't intend to sell him.

Mr. McCaffery made no deals for new players nor sold none while away, but some deals are under consideration.

CONTRACTED HEAVY COLD
Was In Bed Two Months.

DOCTORS DID NOT SEEM TO DO HER ANY GOOD.

A cold, however slight, should never be neglected, for if it is not treated in time it will, in all possibility, lead to bronchitis, pneumonia, asthma, or some other serious throat or lung troubles.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup contains the lung healing virtues of the Norway Pine tree, which, combined with other absorbent, expectorant and soothing medicines, makes it without a doubt the best remedy for all coughs and colds.

Miss N. McCumber, St. Martin's N.B., writes:—"In January last I contracted a heavy cold which kept me in bed nearly two months, and the doctors didn't seem to be able to do me any good. I tried several proprietary medicines, but all in vain. One day a friend advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and when I had taken three bottles I was completely cured, and I feel as well to-day as I ever did, and I am sure my lungs are once more sound, thanks to that wonderful remedy."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

Jack Johnson

A despatch from Salt Lake City, Utah, to-day, says: It seems certain to-day that there will be no finish fight for the world's championship in Nevada next summer. The signing of the articles between Jack Johnson and Jim Flynn has aroused the people, and a demand will be made upon Governor Odie to call a special session of the Legislature to annul the law making finish fights possible.

Metropolis, Nev., which offered a site for an arena and other inducements to Promoter Jack Curley, wired him to-day that these offers have been withdrawn. Curley proposes to pull the battle off at Wendover, not at Windward, as announced. Heavyweight battles kill the boxing game everywhere. As long as the little fellows climb in and give their exhibitions of speed and skill there's no kick, but when the big sluggers take a whirl, then there is trouble on the map. The proposed heavyweight but ere between Flynn and Kubiak, tough only a 10-round affair, is causing some local opposition.

JOHNSON IN NEW YORK.

Jack Johnson, negro heavyweight champion, will be seen in a 10-round b out inNew York before many days. In the terms of his match with Jim Flynn the negro is permitted to participate in a contest before the bout wih Flynn next July.

Johnson is anxious to show in New York, and the McMahon brothers, who own the Empire and Olympic Clubs in Harlem, have offered Johnson $15,000 to show his prowess against either Al Palzar or Tom Kennedy before the Empire A. C.

JUST FOUR MEN HOLD WORLD'S PUGILISTIC TITLES

BY TOMMY CLARK

A glimpse into pugilism reveals the fact that there are just four bona fide holders of world's championship titles. They are Jack Johnson, heavyweight; Ad Wolgast, lightweight; Abe Attell, featherweight; and Johnny Coulon, bantamweight. The first two won their titles by conquest, while the latter boys claimed theirs and successfully defended them against all comers for years. There are no holders for the light heavyweight, middleweght, or welterweight classes, while the paperweight division has been abolished.

When Jack Johnson announced recently that he had retired there were any number of claimants for his honours, among them Joe Jeannette, Sam Langford, Sam McVey, all three coloured, and Jim Flynn, the "white hope," who put a crimp in the championship aspirations of Carl Morris in New York a short time ago. It may be stated right here that Johnson has no intention of quitting the fighting game. Jack will soon arrive in New York, and according to information furnished the writer, the champion's big bank roll that he received after his battle with Jeffries is now very small.

Johnson, it is said, lost a great deal of money in a realty concern, and a big part has been lost in speculation. Johnson is fond of games of chance and misses no opportunity of gratifying his desires in that direction.

The knowledge that he is about broke and must fight again will doubtless stir up things in the heavyweight division.

Johnson is the greatest heavyweight that ever stepped into the ring. He possesses all the sterling qualities that go to make up a champion. Johnson is a past master of boxing, can hit, is a great ring general, can take punishment, and has a cool head. When he is in good shape there is not a man in sight who has a chance of taking away his honours.

Matters in the middleweight division are in bad shape, and the confusion dates back to the time of the death of Stanley Ketchel. When he was living he was the boss of the 158 pound men, but after his taking off there was a plague of claimants. Billy Papke seemed to be the best man entitled to the distinction, but his showing in several battles was that of a third rater. His performances not only disgusted the fight fans but also completly disgusted himself. He then quit. A Paris promoter recently signed him up for five nights. He has seen his best days, so cannot be classed as an aspirant to the honours. Frank Klaus of Pittsburg recently put in a bid for the title. He is about the best before the public to-day, but not a wonder by any means.

There is no light heavyweight champion. Tommy Burns won his title from Jack O'Brien, but failed to defend it after his defeat by Johnson. Langford also claimed it, but could not make the weight.

No welterweight champion wears championship crown. Honey Mellody claims it because he whipped Joe Walcott, but Honey has been belted around considerably since then. Mike Gibbons, the sensational St. Paul fighter, who recently deeated Walter Coffey and Willie Lewis, would be in line for the honours, but I have been informed that he cannot make the weight and be strong.

No one will dispute Ad Wolgast's lightweight honours. The little Michigan whirlwind is one of the busiest little "pugs" we have ever had. He will be out of the ring for some months now on account of an operation for appendicitis which he went under on the eve of his battle with Freddie Welsh last Thanksgiving Day. Whether he will be as strong as ever is a matter of doubt.

Should Wolgast retire from the ring there would be a great scramble for his title. One of the bones of contention would be the weight question. Some of the best of the so-called lightweights, notably Packy McFarland and Matt Wells, cannot do 133 ringside. Some of the others, Freddie Welsh and Knockout Brown, for instance, insist on ringside weight, and the result may mean a deadlock so far as high-class matches are concerned. And through it all the public will feel that it is listening to a discussion from which the real champion probably, through misfortune, has been eliminated.

Among the featherweights Abe Attell is supreme. The little fellow is one of the marvels of the ring. He claimed the title after Terry McGovern passed it up. When Young Corbett defeated the latter at Hartford, Conn., some years ago he did not win the featherweight title. Corbett weighed in around 126 pounds, and 122 pounds is the real featherweight limit. Attell has had to go out of his class many times to get fights and has been very successful. Abie is now getting along in years, and many youngsters are popping up, so the great little Hebrew fighter may have to lose his honours in the near future.

Johnny Coulon is surely entitled to the bantamweight honours. The little Chicago fighter is one of the greatest little men that ever stepped into a ring. After Jem Bowker of England passed up the title, Johnny claimed it and has successfully defended it ever since.

UPSETS IN THE PUGILISTIC GAME.

There is no sport in which surprises are furnished more rapidly than in boxing bouts. Those who follow the "dope" sheet in boxing matches are very liable to be fooled at any time and upsets come when least expected. You sometimes hear about boxing matches being "fixed," but when you get right down to cold facts it will be found that few fakes go through, even though there might be an understanding. About 1896 two well-known boxers were supposed to box a pre-arranged affair in Chicago, but when it came to hostilities one of them hit a little harder than the other thought was on the cards and a genuine fight resulted, there being a real knockout and by the unexpected one. When Jack McCormick knocked out Kid McCoy he upset all the "dope," and when Young Corbett defeated Terrible Terry McGovern at Hartford, Conn., he tore big holes into the bank rolls of Terry's backers.

When Jimmy Clabby was in Australia last year he was matched to box Gus Devitt for the welterweight championship of Australia. Devitt hailed from New Zealand and had a good reputation, especially for hitting ability. They were matched at Brisbane on Christmas Day morning, and Clabby was anxious to get moving pictures of the same to take back to the States with him. All arrangements had been made for the moving pictures, and it was understood that Jimmy would not try to stop the other fellow inside of six rounds, which would be ample to have a good showing for the pictures. There was nothing wrong about the affair at all except that Clabby figured he would take no chances until the sixth round, when he would win whenever the chance offered.

It was a beautiful morning, with a bright sun and very warm, just right for moving pictures, and a big crowd was in attendance. Devitt had a former American boxer for a second, and this chap instructed Devitt to throw all science to the winds and rush clabby from the call of time. They started at 10.30 a.m., and in forty seconds it was all over. Devitt rushed like a young bull and began swinging his arms in all directions. Clabby caught him a right cross on the chin as he rushed in and down went Devitt. He was up at the count of nine and started rushing again, and swinging. As he came in Clabby sidestepped and shot another to the chin and Mr. Devitt went down for the count of ten. The picture man had just started as the men shook hands and had only forty seconds of boxing. Clabby afterwards was asked why he didn't wait a round or two before ending the battle. "Gee, that guy was liable to put me away if he landed one of those haymakers," said Jimmy, "and then the pictures would be no good at all."

English experimenters have found that above a temperature of 39 deg. salty solutions are less corrosive of iron and steel than pure water, while below that temperature the reverse is the case.

FEED AND CARE OF DUCKS

All sorts of mixing and all sorts of fussing have been recommended in feeding young ducks, in times past. The biggest and best breeders of the present day, however, do very little fussing, and the food mixtures are of the plainest kind. I have found a mixture of two-thirds wheat bran and one-third corn meal, with a handful of fine gravel or coarse sand mixed in, for the first two or three days, sufficient for all their needs. If skim or whole milk is easy to get, it may be used to moisten this mixture to a crumbly consistency; otherwise either hot or cold water will answer. I frequently break raw eggs into the meal, in the proportion of two eggs to one quart of the dry grain. This must be thoroughly mixed in order that it may not be too pasty or sticky. After the first three days I omit the sand or gravel, and by the fifth day begin to feed a slight proportion of beef scraps. This proportion may be gradually increased until, at two weeks old, they are getting five per cent of the beef scrap; at three weeks old their food should be one-half bran, one-half corn meal, and about seven per cent of the whole mixture beef scraps. Gradually increase the animal matter until at five weeks they are having fifteen per cent. This proportion may be carried until killing time, which under ordinary conditions, should be at ten weeks, when they should weigh from ten to twelve pounds per pair.

Early hatched ducklings should have brooder heat for practically the whole ten weeks. At least they will require houses that are slightly warmed even after feathering, or too much of the food will have to go toward making heat instead of flesh. After the warm spring months come the birds will require less heat, and after the first of May probably fourteen or twenty days will be all the brooder heat they will need. After that time a house dry and free from draughts will meet every requirement. It must be kept sweet and clean, however, and it becomes necessary to keep continually at the cleaning.

Dry planer shavings make the best litter for the floor for both old and young stock. Sawdust is fairly good, but mixes too readily with the food of the young birds. Straw and gravel are both bad, as they become wet quickly and are slow to dry. Whatever the material used, it must be kept dry or disaster will follow. Keep drinking water, grit and shells by the young birds at all hours. Have the water supply so they can get at it night and day. This will save undue thirst and the loss of many birds by tramping and wetting which comes after being shut away from the water for any length of time. Standing in a brooder building any moonlight night one can see a constant procession of little birds going to and from the water fountain, and this in itself a proof of the need of it being there.

While the per capita consumption of tea in the United States is about stationary, that of coffee is steadily increasing.

THE FORTUNE

A Short Story

Geo. Forest, called from railroad construction work in Texas by the death of his uncle, stepped from the train onto the platform of the little Brampton station.

"It's good to be home again," he told himself, "although I've hardly been here two weeks in the past five years. Still, it's home, the only real home I've ever known, and I'm glad to get back."

The pleasant-faced old station-master hurried up to him and slapped him heartily on the back.

"Glad to see you again, George," the station master declared. "I don't suppose you're going to be long here? I sympathize with you in your Uncle Crawford's death, George," he continued.

"Well, really," the young man replied, "you know Uncle Tim Crawford and I never got along very well together, and I must confess that I heard of his death without a twinge of regret. I'm only here now because I'm his only living relative, and he ought to have a relation at the funeral. And, furthermore, his lawyers seemed to want me badly. As to being here long, I only wish I could stay. This is my home, you know, and there's no thing I'd like better than to settle right here."

As George walked slowly up the main street of the town, numerous others of his boyhood friends and acquaintances met him and told him heartily that they were glad to see him back. Everyone greeted him as they had always done, simply and yet with sincerity.

"It's good to be here where there's no toadying to me," George told himself. "They still think I'm as poor as I was when I left here five years ago. It's certainly good to get away from the toadying with which everyone tries to ingratiate himself with me."

At his uncle's house the latter's attorneys read the will to him. Then, to George's intense surprise, he found that his uncle was a millionaire and had deeded his entire property to his nephew. George was a millionaire, many times wealthier than he had ever hoped to become.

"That means good-by to my home here," he told himself bitterly. "When the people here find out how wealthy I am they'll change towards me."

As George sat on the steps on his uncle's home thinking about this part of the affair, the station master wandered up and familiarly seated himself on the steps beside George. The latter told himself that he knew just how the station master's attitude would change when he told him about the fortune. Instead of that, George got the surprise of his life.

"I don't suppose you'll live here now that you got all that money," suggested the station master.

"You knew about my uncle's fortune?" gasped George.

"Sure," the station master replied. "We knew when he made it in a lucky strike in some mining stock about four years ago, and he told everyone he was going to leave it to you. I suppose you heard nothing about it because you didn't correspond with anyone here. We're glad you got it, George, because we like you."

"Everyone knew it when I came in the village to-day?"

"Yes, we all knew it—that was why the lawyers wrote for you. But where you going to live, George? Going to travel."

"Not on your life!" cried George, jumping up. "I'm going to settle here among my real, true friends—at home!"

RECIPES FOR HOUSEWIVES

SPICE CAKE.

Cream one-half cup butter and one and a half cups sugar. Add two tablespoons molasses, yokes of two eggs, one-half cup of sour milk, two and a half cups flour sifted with one teaspoon of soda, one-half teaspoon each of cloves and cinnamon, and one cupful of raisins and one-half cupful of nuts. Then put in the well-beaten whites of the two eggs and bake.

HERMITS.

Cream together one and one-half cups of sugar and two heaping teaspoons of butter. Add two well-beaten eggs and three tablespoons of milk and then one cup of flour sifted with one teaspoon each of cinnamon, nutmeg, ginger and soda. Chop one cupful each of seeded raisins and nuts, flour and add to the above mixture. Roll to about a quarter of an inch thick, cut with a biscuit cutter and bake in hot oven.

WALNUT COOKIES.

Cream two tablespoons of butter and half a cup of powdered sugar, add slowly four teaspoons of water, sift in a small cupful of flour and one-fourth of a cupful of walnuts chopped very fine. Have some buttered paper in the bottom of a dripping pan and spread this cake mixture on it as thin as possible. Bake and as soon as it comes from the oven cut it in little squares.

GINGER COOKIES.

Mix together one cupful of sugar, one tablespoon of ginger, one teaspoon of soda mixed with two tablespoons of warm water, and one-half cupful of melted butter. Sift in enough flour to make a soft dough, roll to about a third of an inch thick. Cut with a round cutter and bake in a moderate oven.

JAM CAKE.

~~One-half~~ A cupful of butter, two cupfuls of brown sugar. Add the yolks of two eggs, one-half cupful of molasses, one-half cupful of milk or water, two teaspoons of baking powder sifted with three cups of flour. Two tablespoons blackberry or raspberry jam, one cupful each of floured raisins and currants, and two teaspoons of mixed spices. Pour in a greased cake pan and bake in a moderate oven.

YULETIDE COOKIES.

Pour half a cup of boiling water over one cup and a half of sugar, add half a teaspoon of soda and when the sugar is melted pour it on six cups of flour which has been creamed with three-fourths of a cup of butter. Roll out thin and cut in fancy shapes. Bake in a hot oven.

AN EXPERT.

"My own knowledge," said Handwriting Expert Rogers to a reporter, "shone out by contrast with the ignorance of the other side. The opposing lawyer in his benighted cross-examination of me really made me think of the Cleveland huckster.

"This huckster was giving evidence in a damage suit against an automobilist.

"'The auto,' he stated confidently, 'was going over a hundred miles an hour.'

"'But that's nearly two miles a minute,' said the judge.

"'No, your honour,' the huckster contradicted.

"'Look here, my man,' said the judge, 'you know how many minutes there are in an hour, don't you?'

"The huckster hesitated, then said frankly:

"'Well, yer honour, I hain't had much education—let's have your reckonin' of it.'"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Will The Street Railway Extension To East City Be Across Hunter St. Bridge?—Mr. Munro's Views

Examiner Reporter Interviews the Manager of the Peterboro Radial Railway re the Much Talked of Extension—Mr. Munro Thinks a Solution Easy—The Matter Only Requires a Little Effort on Part of City Council.

The East City railway extension was the subject of an interesting discussion this morning, when an Examiner reporter interviewed Mr. W. H. Munro, manager of the P. L. and P. Company, on the matter.

"We are decidedly anxious to extend our line to East City," said Mr. Munro. "We are anxious, furthermore, to have the line of extension across the Hunter street bridge."

When asked as to his opinion of a belt line, proposed to run across Hunter street bridge, south on Burnham street, east on James street, and north on Rogers street, tapping the northern part of East City, and recrossing on the Hunter St. bridge, Mr. Munro thought the idea an unpopular one, inasmuch as a belt line is never desirable. He proposed that in the event of a favourable opportunity for extension being presented, that a "T," similar to the Charlotte street line, be formed; crossing on Hunter street, the south spur to run on Burnham street to James and east on James to a point taking in that section. He thought that if the line was exended along burnham street it would accommodate the citizens east on James street it would be more central than if extended on Ingleburn avenue, and if extended on the next street south, which would mean that the cars would have a heavy grade on Burnham street to climb, and, in addition to this, draw back, would leave the people residing on James street, and north of it, to have to walk further, while there would be nothing, practically, but the lake on the south side of the line.

The north spur could be extended north on Rogers street, or any street deemed advisable, as being central, and which would give equal accommodation to the citizens residing north on Hunter street.

Mr. Munro was decidedly in favour of Mayor Bradburn's idea of moving the Hunter street bridge down to Sherbrooke or Dalhousie streets, but he thought that at the time that idea was offered, the Mayor had not taken into consideration, the proposition of a swing in the bridge, and, in view of the report circulating re the extension of navigation up the river, which appears to be very probable, it would be necessary to take that matter into consideration. Regarding this matter, Mr. Munro said the as a private citizen, he was of the opinion that in the event of a swing having to be put in the bridge, it would be better to arrange with the C. P. R. to have a foot bridge across their present bridge. He thought that this should serve the purpose, as all business delivery was more convenient to Hunter street.

The Public Are Mistaken.

Returning to the East City extension of the railway, Mr. Munro thought the general public had the opinion that the Street Railway Co. were greedy and always after the big end of the wedge. He said they were entirely wrong, and their idea was apparently the result of ignorance of the facts. He said, if they would take into consideration the fact that the Street Railway was an incorporated body, doing business on business principles, and not merely from a philanthropic point of view, they would easily see that the Company could not go to an expense which would leave them in a position unable to pay dividends. He explained that from a good business point of view, the Company had to look after its own interests. If they extend their line to East City, they must do so under circumstances that will allow hem to pay dividends; otherwise it would be a worse than useless proposition. He said, further, that there was not enough discussion of this all-important subject. A few citizens begin writing letters to the papers, stating the cost of a bridge to be $100,000.00, when, as a matter of fact, they have not the slightest idea what a bridge would cost, and this discourages those concerned, from taking up the matter. People read these letters, and, without considering their source, take it for granted that a bridge is going to cost that amount, and give the matter up in despair; when the proper thing to do would be for the City Council to go into the matter, consult the railway officials, get estimates on the proposed bridge, and begin the matter from a business standpoint, and do no guessing when it comes to figures.

Mr. Munro pointed out clearly that the Company was desirous of extending their line to East City, and he also intimated that any other route than the Hunter street bridge, should not be considered as an alternative, as it is the main line, so to speak, from the business part of the city. The continuation of C. P. R. and P. R. R. putting a bridge across where the C. P. R. bridge is, is especially undesirable, as it is too far south for a "T" and further, the C. P. R. Co. are an uninterested party, bearing no part of the cost, being satisfied with their present bridge.

"Banish the thought of an East City belt line," said Mr. Munro; "it is most undesirable. People don't want to have to get on a car and ride all over town before getting to their destination. With a 'T' they can go direct. There would be two distinct lines running to East City, on the 'T' principle".

Mr. Munro made it quite clear that the building of the bridge was the only difficulty in the path of the Railway Company, and intimated that if the matter was gone into from a good business point of view, a solution could be found without any great difficulty. He said he was unable to say as to what percentage of the cost of a bridge the Company would bear, until the cost of the bridge, in round figures, was set forth, from an official source.

As regards the Byersville extension of the railway, Mr. Munro stated that the route would be out Albert street, as the city had requested. He thought that this was undesirable on account of the G. T. R. Co. having all the land on the north side of that street, and on the other hand, if they ran ou Chamberlain street, they would accommodate the people from both north and south. As it is, there being no cross streets from Chamberlain to Albert street, the people living on Chamberlain street will have to walk a considerable distance.

ORDINATION CEREMONY AT ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL

Rev. Fathers Egan and Staley of the Archdiocese of Toronto are Ordained by His Lordship Bishop O'Connor—An Impressive Ceremony.

An interesting and inspiring event took place at 9 o'clock this morning, in St. Peter's Cathedral, when the Rev. Mr. J. T. Egan and the Rev. Mr. M. Staley, Deacons, both of the Archdiocese of Toronto, were ordained priests by his Lordship Bishop O'Connor.

The ordination of a priest is one of the most solemn and impressive ceremonies of the Catholic Church. The Bishop who ordains the candidate celebrates Mass clothed in full Pontificals—Amice, Alb, Cincture, Cross, Tunic, Dalmatic, Maniple, Stole and Chasuble. These are emblematic of the sacred power which, in obedience to the divine commission, he confers upon the supplicant for ordination. Having previously received Tonsure, the four minor orders—Porter, Lector, Exorcist and Acolyte, also the sacred orders of sub-deaconship and deaconship, and after being duly examined concerning his conduct and morals, his knowledge of the sacred scripture, theology, etc., the candidate is arrayed in the vestments of a deacon. The Bishop proceeds with the Mass as far as the Tract, when having taken his seat the ordination commences.

After the main portion of the ordination ceremony the Bishop continues Mass as far as the offertory, and the priest receives Holy Communion. In the continued ceremony the priest promises reverence and obedience to the Bishop and his successors, and receives the Bishop's blessing. The Mass is then concluded.

There were present with Fr. Staley, his father and two brothers, and, with Father Egan, one brother. The Rev. Dr. Kidd, Administrator of the Archdiocese of Toronto, the Rev. Fr. John O'Brien, of Lakefield, and the Rev. Fr. Scanlan, of Grafton, were also present at the ceremony.

Many Local Exhibitors Among The Prizewinners Peterboro Poultry Show

Peterboro is Rapidly Coming Into its Own as a Poultry Centre—Work of Judging the Fowl a Formidable one

This is get-away day for the exhibitors at the poultry show. The work of dismantling is being pursued relentlessly at the Market Hall and by tonight, one of the best shows ever held under the auspices of the Peterborough Poultry Association will have passed into history.

Mr. J. T. C. Lang, when interviewed by the Examiner this morning as to the results of the show, expressed himself as being thoroughly pleased with the outcome. While the attendance was not a record one, it was extremely gratifying to the directors, to see so many interested poultry fanciers from this district. The competition was keen, but thanks to the good work propagated by the Association, the local exhibitors were able to hold their own, and as a result a large number of prizes went to local exhibitors.

The work of Mr. J. E. Bennett, of Toronto, who acted as judge, appealed to all as being satisfactory, and not a dissenting voice was heard as to his rulings. This was particularly creditable in view of the fact that there are between four and five thousand birds, representative of quality, at the show. Therefore, the task of selecting the blue ribbon winners from this vast assemblage was no easy one.

It was particularly pleasing to the has affected the poultry situation todirectors to observe the change which day as compared with that of a few years ago. In those days two or three prominent poultry men from a distance could ship a hundred birds in here and annex the big end of the prizes, but this year's show has demonstrated that this is a thing of the past. The poultry raisers of this district are becoming educated to the benefits to be derived from the introduction of better strains, and are breeding extensively with that end in view. The result has been to raise the standard of poultry excellenc to a pitch where it can compete with the best.

2000 Are Turned Out Of Homes In The Cold

NEW YORK, JAN. 12.—Two thousand dwellers in the Bowery tenements were turned out of their homes this morning in zero weather, when a fire caused by upsetting grease destroyed three buildings. The loss will be twenty thousand dollars. The fire tied up railway traffic and for a time looked as if it might wipe out a large part of the famous Bowery.

Fire On The Pretorian Catastrophe Averted

GLASGOW, SCOTLAND, JAN. 12—A terrible catastrophe on the Allan Line steamer Pretorian, arriving here this morning from Philadelphia was averted only by the presence of mind, courage and hard work of the officers, crew and passengers, as when out in mid ocean, flames broke out in the upper deck of the smoke room and for hours threatened to spread over the whole ship. Life boats were got ready to launch in temperature below zero. Finally the flames were overcome after destroying most of the rooms and fittings on the upper deck. The danger and sufferings were intense.

Johnny Dyment Passed Away

Well Known Barrie Sportsman is Dead

Special to The Examiner:

BARRIE, ONT., JAN 12.— Johnny Dyment, the well known and wealthy horseman, died this morning, all efforts to remove the blood formation on the brain proving unavailing. He was unconscious for three days. For the past ten years he was manager and trainer of the racing stables of his uncle, the late N. Dyment, and up to his death continued that capacity for S. Dyment. He for years attended all important racing meets. In hockey circles he was also well known having been on the Ontario executive for two years and president of the local organization for the same length of time. His widow survives him with one son. The manufacturing plants owned by Dyments are all closed until after the funeral.

THE WEATHER

At the present time there is a feeling of decided sharpness in the outdoor atmosphere. A cold wave now extends from the far west to the Atlantic, and zero readings are general. Lowest temperature last night locally was 15 degrees below. Later in the morning it went down another notch: at noon, still below zero. W. P.

TRAGIC END OF MR. F. J. CAMERON

Well Known Surveyor Dies as a Result of Exposure

The many friends of Mr. Fred J. Cameron, Ontario Land Surveyor, and the citizens of Peterborough generally, were shocked this morning when the news quickly spread over the city that he had been found in a dying condition in North Monaghan early this morning, and passed away two hours later as the result of exposure. It is not certain how Mr. Cameron came to be where he was found. He was discovered on the Drain road, North Monaghan, about two miles from the city at 6 o'clock this morning, by William Mallen. The latter was on his way to his work when he came upon Mr. Cameron lying on the road a short distance away from the Mallen home. He was alive, but his hands and feet were badly frozen. He was carried into the house and Mr. Mallen, with the assistance of Bruce Johnston and other neighbours, tried without avail to bring him around. In spite of their efforts he passed away about 8 o'clock before medical assistance had arrived.

The deceased was a well known resident of Peterborough. He was recognized as one of the most capable and cleverest land surveyors in the Province, and his services were much in demand. Although born in Scotland, he had been a resident of Peterborough nearly all his life and had a host of friends and acquaintances here. He was about forty-eight years of age, and is survived by a wife and seven small children. One brother residing in the United States and two sisters, are also left to mourn his loss.

VENDIBLE JUSTICE.

We in the province of Ontario, think that we are badly served in the administration of justice. But we don't do any worse than let justice sleep; we don't buy it and sell it. A year or so ago we sent to the gallows an apparently irresponsible boy of 17, who in a moment of frenzy, assaulted an old woman and caused her death. In Massachusetts, a minister of the gospel, an educated man, a moral leader, deliberately planned, and carried out, the poisoning of a girl that stood in the way of his marrying a wealthier woman. He did it in cold blood and without doubt as to his guilt, for he has confessed the fact. Now, frantic efforts are being made to cheat the gallows of its due. We are told that the movement to "save the life of Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson is to be "financed" by the father of the girl, to marry whom, Richeson murdered another girl. Why "financed?" What is the need of money in an appeal to the governor for clemency. A dollar or two to pay railway fare and a dinner at a hotel would be all that is needed. Is justice, or the defeat of justice, to be bought? We think the administration of justice in Ontario limps badly, but we are far from such conditions as these.

CANADA'S BANKS.

On December 1st the 20 chartered banks of Canada were operating 3438 branches in all. Of this number 12 are situated in Newfoundland and 56 elsewhere, outside of Canada, leaving 3360 within the confines of the Dominion. Ontario claims 1620 or nearly 40 per cent., while Quebec, 800; Nova Scotia 113, New Brunswick 74, and Prince Edward Island 14, make a total of 1619 in the east or 63 per cent. of the whole. The three prairie provinces domicile 729 in all. Manitoba with 189. Alberta with 219 and Saskatchewan with 391. British Columbia claims 208, while three are located in the Yukon and one in the North West Territories. It is interesting to note that with an average of six to each branch there were 15,380 people engaged in the banking business in Canada, outside of the head offices. That is about one-fifth of one per cent. of the population of the Dominion. The ratio of bank branches to population was 2,800 and each branch serves an average of 1402 square miles of territory. According to the Financial Post's computation the largest population served by a single branch bank is in Prince Edward Island of 6,604, while the largest area served is 1930 square miles in British Columbia. The table, by province, is as follows:

	Population per Branch	Area Sq. miles per Branch
Ontario	2,474	217
Quebec	5,038	572
Nova Scotia	4,337	182
New Brunswick	4,755	376
Prince Ed. Island	6,604	143
Manitoba	2,412	385
Alberta	1,714	1,555
Saskatchewan	1,630	779
British Columbia	1,830	1,900

SIR JAMES RECANTS.

The anxiey of the Toronto Mail and Empire to injure a political leader, has landed it in a ridiculous stultification. At Dundas, Mr. Rowell, Liberal leader, criticised the proposal of Sir James Whitney to bury the Hydro-Electric scheme into a government department and so destroy the chief ability of the Commission. The Mail and Empire thus scores Mr. Rowell:

"Apparently, Mr. Rowell has either little understanding of, or little regard for, the people's will in this matter. The question of placing the hydro-electric power service in charge of a minister with a portfolio, especially pertaining to that branch of the public business, was definitely submitted to the people in the recent election campaign. In his address to the electors, Sir James Whitney said that this was one of the issues in respect to which he desired to know the sense of the people. The people gave him their answer. The overwhelming majority they sent to support him in the House are instructed by the people to assist the Government to give effect to its proposals. . . . Mr. Rowell would have shown more respect for the popular will if he had discarded his campaign speech and given his hearers at Dundas something more in season. By insisting that the Government disobey the instructions of the people he puts himself in the ranks of what he and his political associates call high Toryism. A leader who argues with the people after they have spoken must have a natural instinct for Opposition, and in the Opposition Mr. Rowell is likely to keep himself and his followers."

On the news page of the Mail and Empire, in the same issue in which announced that Sir James Whitney had dropped the proposal to place the Hydro-Electric Commission under a government department, a step for which he had a mandate from the people. That is, Sir James himself set at nought "the popular will," flouted the "instructions of the people." In condemning Mr. Rowell, the Mail and Empire much more severely condemned Sir James Whitney. Sir James performed a grand back-down. He evidently thought the proposal of his high-handed action to destroy the utility of the hydro-electric commission, by making it a subject to the political influences of a government department, would be swallowed, as have apparently been other autocratic actions; but he found that public opinion was against him, and that, as voiced by Mr. Rowell, it must be heeded, and he yielded to it—wisely—and without any discredit to himself. Milton tells us that it is no discredit to a man to acknowledge himself mistaken—it only shows that he is wiser to-day than he was yesterday.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The cuttings of railways with impacted snow are not the only cuttings that bother the railways. The cut in dividends, resulting from expensive operation, is the serious matter.

Pierre Payette of Montreal, died at the age of 103 years. His case proves, in his case, at least, that the simple life prolongs life. He has always been poor and never had a chance to weaken his vitality by luxurious living.

	Toronto.	Buffalo
Hogs	$6.75	$6.85
Cattle	$6.90	$8.10
Lambs	$6.80	$7.25

This is a nice tid-bit for rural readers.

Intemperance is the curse of Canada, and the weather man is the worst of the lot. He sends the frost and sub-zero shivers in chunks. He should distribute them gently. We shall probably see the cold snap succeeded by a thaw—the annual January thaw—another extreme.

Toronto is paying the penalty of jerry-building. The generality of houses in the city are so flimsily constructed that the people have to keep their water taps running continuously to prevent freezing and bursting. So much water is thus used that a water famine is threatened. It pays to build solidly and safely. A single plumber's bill would more than pay the interest on the extra amount required to make houses frost proof.

Mr. Beattie, M.P., and Mr. Marshall, M.P., (Conservative), are claiming credit for the grants to Port Stanley harbour. As the plans were prepared, the contracts let, and the money appropriated by the Laurier Government, these two gentlemen cannot be reproached with an excess of modesty. It will be found that many other things than those cited by the London Advertiser, and claimed as creditable by the Borden government supporters, are due to the initiation of Liberal supporters of the late government.

TEN MILLIONS FOR ROADS.

(Montreal Herald)

Readers of the Herald will take a special gratification in the announcement made by Sir Lomer Gouin (Premier of Quebec) that a fund of ten million dollars is to be put at the disposition of the Province of Quebec for the construction of modern highways. So far as we know the Herald was the first to advocate the definite adoption of this policy, and to urge it upon the favourable attention of the Cabinet. So far as roads go, Quebec might as well be in the seventeenth century. Twentieth century progress, in the guise of the motor touring car, stops at our borders. The moment a car leaves the city streets—and they are none too good—it has to make the best of its way over roads that are still designed, in the main, for no higher purpose than to let the farmer get his load to market with the minimum of comfort and expense. Anything to compare with the state roads across the border we have not. But we ought to have. And if this fund of ten millions is wisely administered, we easily can have. The minister who is to have charge of its expenditure will have it in his power to bring the municipalities into joint action along selected routes. From Montreal to Sherbrooke, thence to Quebec, and back to Montreal, perhaps including Joliette, there should be, and there can be, as fine a series of main highways as the world can offer. Every year we are without such a convenience is a year wasted. Sir Lomer Gouin and his colleagues are to be congratulated upon having gone at the problem boldly. It was the only way. The terms indicated would seem to be very tempting to the municipalities. They can get a great deal for a very little, the rest coming out of the bounty of the Province. Once the bill passes, what is wanted is a minister who, with a capable staff, will crowd the work along.

The Examiner has advocated the adpotion by the Provincial Government of Ontario of a larger policy, of a deeper and more substantial interest in good roads in this province. And not specially, as the Herald does, in the interests of automobile traffic. Good roads for one vehicle, would be good for any other vehicle. We want good roads in the interests of the people, generally, especially in the interests of the merchants and farmers. The more easy we make it for the farmer to reach his market the better it is for the merchant. If the government of the Province of Ontario would take a public-spirited and progressive step, like the Province of Quebec has done, or is proposing to do, the condition of the Province, in this regard, would be revolutionized. We are a wealthy Province. We have an overflowing revenue, and money could not be better spent than in obtaining one of the first requisites, indeed, one of the first evidences, of a higher civilization—facilities of intercourse, by the best facilities for travel. The Province of Ontario has devoted millions to aid in the construction of steam railways. Nobody objects to this: it was necessary in the provision of facilities for travel in the interests of the people. On the same grounds, the Province would be justified in taking over the building of trunk lines of highways in every county of the Province, and in devoting a large proportion of the provincial revenue for this purpose. This would benefit, but not relieve the municipalities of their duty. The statute labour on these trunk roads could be commuted, and the proceeds applied to the improvement of connecting highways. The benefit thus generally distributed would, in the whole, be far greater than those derived from the construction of railways. Indeed, general prevalence of good roads would increase the advantages, of our railways, represented by ease of access to them. We need some earnest, comprehensive, and systematic policy adopted towards our provincial highways. As the Herald points out, so far as roads go, Ontario, as well as Quebec, "might as well be in the seventeenth century". Our highways compared with those of England, Scotland and Ireland, are no roads at all. In these countries the highways are better, smoother, and more useful than the streets of Peterborough. We are behind the times in road-making, and there is no reason, except not doing it, why our highways should not be the best on the continent. What seems to be needed is the more active interest of the Provincial Government in the promotion of the good roads movement. We have very properly spent many millions in building the provincial railway in Northern Ontario, but we are losing a great part of the benefit by neglecting to provide highways that would make the railway a real factor in the development, in prosperity of the country. So in older Ontario the money spent to aid railways is wasted, to a very large extent, in default of spending money liberally to provide good highways, to give access to our railways. Good roads, generally distributed over Ontario, would save the farmers and the general public many times more than enough ot pay Shylock interest upon their cost.

Relation Of Hydro-Electric To Government And Municipalities

Mr. Rowell is on impregnable ground when he declares that the Hydro-Electric Commission is a business body, occupying the position of a trustee toward the municipalities of this Province, who have combined to obtain through it a supply of electric energy. If Sir James Whitney destroys the Commission, and places the entire control and management of this great public undertaking—for the financial success or failure of which the municipalities must pay in lower or higher rates for power—under a department of the Government, where it will be subject to the spoils and patronage system, he will, as Mr. Rowell well says, do a great wrong to the people of Ontario.

It is very well known that at the inception of the Hydro-Electre project the Government deliberately decided that the municipalities embarking in the scheme, must take all the financial risk. Upon that basis the enterprise was launched. It was a non-partisan project, supported by many Liberals and opposed by many Conservatives. Mr. Beck, the chief figure in the work of the Commission, was thwarted and criticized in greater measure by opponents within his own party than by opponents in the Liberal ranks. It was not as a Conservative that he became connected with the project of building public power lines in Ontario, but as a non-partisan representative of the municipalities. The Globe does not believe that Mr. Beck had any part in the famous scheme of Sir James Whitney to destroy the Commission and substitute for it a partisan administration. It is probable that Mr. Beck would be pleased to see the Premier's decision reversed, so that the work might continue upon a non-partisan basis.

The municipalities interested should make a united official protest against the contemplated action. If Sir James Whitney desires to establish a department of the Government for the administration of the Hydro-Electric power project along political lines the first step toward that end should be the cancellation of all municipal liabilities and the assumption by the Province of the financial risks of the enterprise. Even were he to do that the Premier would still be seriously injuring the policy of public operation of public utilities, because in our belief successful operation is more probable on a non-partisan basis.

Sir James Whitney's proposal is in essence an attempt to substitute political control of a business enterprise, for the financial success or failure of which he takes no responsibility. Nothing more illogical has ever been proposed by this most illogical of Canada's public men.—Globe.

WAS SICK THIRTY YEARS

Bowie, Tex.—The remarkable case of Mrs. S. J. Embry who lives near here is attracting attention, on account of her restoration to health after many years of suffering. She tells of it in a letter as follows:

"During the past thirty years I have suffered greatly from nervous troubles and my health was badly run down. Lately I learned of your cod liver and iron tonic, Vinol, and began taking it.

"I have used several bottles and improved so fast that I at once recommended it to two friends who were in poor health. My case was complicated, but Vinol did wonders for me. Every woman who suffers from nervousness and weakness should take Vinol and recover her health."

It is plain that a remedy that will overcome a chronic rundown condition like this is just what weak and sickly men, women and children everywhere need. If you wont to be strong and healthy again, take Vinol, on our positive promise to give back your money if you are not satisfied. RAPIDLY GROWING INDUSTRY

Big Pay Roll of the Russel Motor Car Company

It will, perhaps, be a surprise to many people to know that the Works of the Russell Motor Car Company have grown as rapidly during the last few years as they have. The pay roll of this establishment in West Toronto for the month of November was over $60,000.00, and, as the demand for the Company's product is on the increase, it means that the pay roll of this establishment in the western part of the city will approximate three quarters of a million for its fiscal year.

Toronto Telegram: Plans have been filed for a diversion of the C. P. R. line from Montreal to Toronto, which will mean the sidetracking of Peterborough to some extent.

The Telegram learns that the proposal is to start the diversion near Tweed and run down to Belleville and from there to Toronto along the lake shore. The section along the lake shore will be between the G.T.R. and C.N.R. for most of the way, taking in the towns which both these lines are close to, but do not actually enter.

Drop Rough Section.

The section of the C.P.R. east of Myrtle through Peterborough to Smith's Falls has long been regarded by the public as a "rough road." The main line to Montreal now goes through the roughest section of Eastern Ontario. From Montreal the line is double tracked to Smith's Falls, and it is understood that the construction of the proposed diversion of the road will be double tracked from Smith's Falls to Toronto.

Plans for the entry into Belleville have been filed. Plans are also in course of preparation for filing in the registry offices of the various counties through which the new line will be built.

By JOHN MARCH

He went out to the steps to listen, and turned his dark, anxious face to the grey mass of drifting clouds hovering above the house like a great brooding human trouble. Little soft gusts of homeless night winds cooled his forehead and the fever in his veins, and in a measure calmed the tumult of doubt and confusion in his busy brain.

Hark! There were low voices and delayed footsteps in the stone passages. Felix was speaking, and the doctor was punctuating his sentences with little running comments. "I'll come with you to the gate," he heard Felix say, and they passed on and were out of earshot before Dr. Hunter spoke again.

"I say, Fleming," he said, as if the thought had just darted into his mind, "who's the young fellow I picked up on the road all nerve and fire and fine feeling?"

"His name is Farley, Sir Thomas Hargrave's secretary. He was with me when I found Anthony. Why?"

"Because—well, it seems a strange thing for a man of my years to say, but that boy just beginning life is perfectly familiar to me. Blame it!" he muttered, taking off his hat, and wiping his head with a yellow bandana, "I can't for the life of me understand, unless—Look here, Fleming, when I was a young fellow walking the hospitals I lodged at Notting Hill for six months, and shared the sitting room with this boy's double, and I can assure you never until to-night have my salad days been so vividly recalled. There are those some wonderful eyes—I used to fancy the fellow's soul was sitting behind those great dark windows patiently waiting for something the world could not and would not give—there's the same oval clean-shaven face and mobile mouth, now weak, now obstinately tenacious, the same temperament, too, artistic and sensitive. My friend—he would be about my age now—was a musician, he was great on the violin, he had a valuable instrument, a Guarnarius or a Cremona, a genuine thing whatever it was; he used just to cuddle the thing under his chin, lay his cheek on it, and the old masterpiece quivered and throbbed with melody.

"Jervois earned a goodish bit in those days by playing in the orchestra of various London theatres. I lost sight of him when he went to America, although I believe he visited Europe once or twice afterwards as a celebrated violinist."

"What was his name? I didn't catch it'"

"Jervois," he said, "Miles Jervois. Whether he is dead or alive, whether he ever married or lived a bachelor, like myself, I can't remember; all I know is that this young Farley is a reverberation of him, an echo of thirty years ago or more."

"Assuming that this Miles Jervois had a son in existence, in all probability he is no more like his father than the man in the moon. Faithful family likenesses more often skip a generation or two, and perhaps once in a lifetime you'll meet with a queer unaccountable riddle like this one."

"Where does he come from?" the doctor asked.

"New York."

"Ah! I wonder if he has heard the name of Jervois?"

"I'll ask him," Felix said, wringing the doctor's hand; "good-night."

He lingered a moment at the gate, and looked down the road in the direction of the Hall, an absent, far-away expression in his eyes.

"By Jove!" he muttered, awakening from his short reverie and striding towards the house. "Farley's on tenterhooks in the parlour, of course."

He found him standing in the entry paler than usual, listless and depressed.

"Come in here," he said, putting a hand on his shoulder and guiding him back to the parlour.

They stood upon the hearthrug, Paul with one foot on the steel fender, an elbow on the chimney-piece, and Felix with his hands under his coat tails.

"He's not dead," Paul said, "or you wouldn' look as you do."

"Dead!" he repeated. "No, nor ye, I trust, likely to die."

Paul's lip quivered, his forehead contracted ,tracing a vertical line between his black eyebrows.

"I wish I had come to you before," Felix said, "I might have guessed you were brooding alone, and dwelling on the ugliest aspect of the case. By the way, what business have you with an upright thing at the top of your nose?" he added, trying to smooth out the offending crease with his broad thumb.

"How is Anthony?"

"Capital!" Felix answered with energetic warmth. "That is to say, we've got the bullet and he stood the operation well. It's a clean flesh wound, and so far as one can judge, there is small danger of complications. If all goes well he will be able to be moved in a week or ten days."

"I suppose Miss Fleming is with him?"

"Yes, and Mrs. Pilgrim. Rose has gone to Weyborne Lodge for his valet; he may be of use in the night."

"Won't you have a trained nurse?" Paul asked.

"To-morrow, perhaps. I shall do whatever Lady Hargrave wishes. She has advised and superintended Anthony's domestic arrangements ever since he was a motherless little chap of seven. I hope to goodness they won't get wind of this at the Hall to-night. Lady Hargrave may just as well have her night's rest undisturbed. I shall go for her the first thing after breakfast."

"And Miss Hargrave?" Paul suggested.

Felix Fleming's face hardened.

"That young person's caprices do not concern me," he returned harshly. What can Judith have said or done to have taken the hope, the zest, the desire to live from a promising, prosperous young life like Anthony's?"

"Is she so much to blame?" he asked. "What of myself?"

Felix looked him over from head to foot, at the great earnest eyes awaiting his verdict, and wondered whether after all there were not extenuating circumstances to be advanced on Judith's behalf.

"I'm not going to censure you, Farley," he said, smiling. "I've heard enough to feel convinced that it was all plain, fair sailing on your part. Anyway, as it is, you've had a bad quarter of an hour, and probably suffered more than Judith would in a year."

"I am not so sure of that," Paul said slowly. "It was Miss Judith's intention to treat the past as a bad dream. I am satisfied she fully meant to ask Pelham's forgiveness and engage herself to him, if he were still willing. Just think of it, Mr. Fleming, as she remarked, it was not a pleasant thing to do."

"She told you this herself?"

"She came to me in the library after dinner this evening to——"

"To see if you were in the mood to propose," Felix supplied sarcastically.

"No, to discuss the unpleasant position of affairs . We reasoned the thing out together, and eventually she saw the folly, the uselessness, the cruelty of her attitude towards Pelham. She was anxious to rectify the wrong and be back again on the old familiar footing."

"You persuaded her to this?"

"Hardly; perhaps something of what I said helped to influence her decision. At all events, I am confident that had Pelham's patience held out a few hours or a day longer, had he faced the situation with more resolution and not reached the cross-roads so soon, there would have been an end to the estrangement between them. Everything was in his favour had he known it. To-morrow would have brought him health, hope, and happiness, and brought it exactly in the way he craved."

Felix Flemings's hand descended heavily on Paul's shoulder.

"You're a good fellow ,Farley!" he exclaimed, his grey eyes sparkling, "a downright good fellow. I like you," he said, impulsively. "I like you—body, soul, and character."

They both laughed, and shook hands with a long, hearty, lingering clasp.

"We'll have a wedding up yonder as soon as old Anthony is well enough," Felix remarked, an anticipatory festive smile lifting the ends of his moustache, as he hunted about for his pipe.

"I hope so," Paul rejoined fervently.

Felix looked at him sideways, and suppressed a chuckle.

"I don't fear that," he said watching Felix light his pipe. "If I read Miss Judith aright, I think this shock will steady her self-balancing power, but really I think I shall feel a certain relief when she is safely married. I would so much rather be domiciled where there were no unmarried daughters; there would be less strain on both employer and employed."

"Don't smoke that rubbish," Felix said, watching him open his cigarette case to make a another selection; "have a pipe, a nice, clean, wholesome pipe. I've a drawer full of perfectly new ones; you are welcome to all or any—it's not a case of Hobson's choice."

He took a bunch of keys from his coat pocket and unlocked a narrow walnut cabinet.

"Which will you have?" he asked, "meerchaum, cherry wood, briar, or churchwarden clay?"

"That little cherry wood, with the silver band," he said, taking the pipe in his hand, and examining it critically.

"Somehow, it's rather a wonder to me, Farley, you didn't reciprocate Miss Hargrave's feelings," Felix said, rummaging the drawer, and tossing his tobacco pouch to his friend. "She's considered a remarkably pretty girl, and she's really a nice girl, too!"

"Yes, she's pretty, very, in a way, but if she wants unalloyed admiration she must not remain in the same room with Miss Fleming, or, indeed, anywhere in her vicinity."

"You think my sister is prettier?"

"Miss Fleming is beautiful," he answered, sniffing at the pouch, "the most beautiful woman I have yet seen. Is this tobacco mild?"

"A mild Virginia, as mild as chopped lettuce leaves," he rejoined in a slow disjointed way, as if he had something more important in his mind that required consideration.

Paul filled his pipe, and looked up to find the Squire's eyes fixed on him with an expression in them he had never seen before. He coloured, tried to light the pipe, fidgetted, and laughed a little.

Doan's Kidney Pills

Are the Best Remedy In The World FOR BACKACHE.

Many people fail to understand the significance of a lame, weak, sore or aching back.

You overtax the kidneys—give them more work than they can possibly do—then they cry out in protest through the pain in the back.

Backache is simply kidneyache and the best remedy in the world for backache and all kidney troubles is Doan's Kidney Pills.

We have thousands of testimonials from all quarters of the globe to prove this. Here is one from a party who used them in England, but who is now a resident of Canada.

Mr. P. R. Glanville, Wycliffe, B.C. writes:—"When living in the 'Old Country,' three years ago, I suffered severely from pains in the back, and had to give up work. The pain was so bad that when I stooped down to pick anything up, I felt my back must break. I tried all sorts of remedies and several doctors, but all to no purpose. One day I read of Doan's Kidney Pills, and thought I might as well try them, and to my surprise, before I was half through one box the backache had entirely disappeared, and it has not caused me any trouble since. I always keep "Doan's" in the house and shall always recommend them to all sufferers."

Price 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

CASCARETS CLEANSE LIVER AND BOWELS

No Biliousness, Headache, Sick, Sour Stomach, Indigestion, Coated Tongue or Constipation

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give you a thorough cleansing inside and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then to keep their stomach, liver and bowels regulated, and never know a miserable moment. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good cleansing, too.

CONSOLATION.

Sometimes when those we trust our trust betray,
And, weary grown, we feel as though 'twere vain,
Our daily cross, augmented, up to take;
When slander's poisoned darts leave galling wounds
Upon the naked heart—at times like this;
When all without is dark and winter cold,
How sweet the thought, that Jesus understands,
Because He, too, hath tasted of Despair,
And, having suffered like, can feel for us,
Who in Gethsemane our vigil keep.

ORDER FLEET FOR HALIBUT FISHING

Mr. Geo. H. Collins, managing director of the Canadian Fish and Cold Storage Co., Prince Rupert, is at present in England, where he will call for tenders for building sixteen fishing vessels to be used in the waters of the Pacific adjacent to the plant next April.

The company will commence business and the vessels must be built and delivered by that time. The company is capitalized at $1,500,000, and the plant will cost when completed close on $400,000 and will be the largest of its kind in the world.

The buildings of the company at Prince Rupert are reinforced concrete built at one end of the harbour, and will be fitted up with the most modern machinery.

The storage capacity will be fourteen million pounds of fish with freezing capacity of 110 tons per day.

In an interview Mr. Collins said: With the completion of the G.T.P., fish from the Pacific Coast will be put in the eastern market three days quicker than now. This he explains by the fact that the greatest proportion of the fish is caught near Prince Rupert and thence has to be taken to Vancouver and Seattle for shipment.

The establishment will give employment to 300 men, none of whom will be Japanese. White men and Indians only will be employed.

The remaining directors of the company are: Andrew Kelly, President of the Western Canada Flour Mills, Winnipeg; James Carruthers of Montreal, grain exporter, and Grier Starrett, former manager of the New England Fish Company.

News For Those Interested in The Military World

The following is taken from the official circular No. 208 of appointments, promotions and retirements of Canadian militia for 1911. Dated at Ottawa, Dec. 5th, 1911, and which is promulgated to the militia by the Hon. Minister of Militia and Defence in Militia Council:

57th Regiment "Peterborough Rangers."—The period of tenure of appointment of Captain and brevet Major D. Walker as Assistant is extended to the 16th October, 1912.

Circular No. 198-208, containing general orders, dated Ottawa, Dec. 1st, 1911, contains a list of personnel of those who were awarded the Colonial Auxiliary Forces Long Service Medal, under the provisions of the Royal Warrant, dated 15th May, 1899 and General Order No. 128, in which is included Q. M. and Hon. Major V. Eastwood, 57th Regt. Infantry, Peterborough.

Militia orders dated Ottawa, Dec. 30, 1911, state that a pamphlet entitled, "How to Qualify," will shortly be published. It has been prepared with a view to guiding officers of the Cavalry and Infantry joining the Canadian Militia as to their means of qualifying on first appointment. It is hoped that this guide will be of assistance to Provisional Officers desirous of qualifying.

It is notified for general information that it has been decided to hold stretchers on medical charge in future, and, therefore, all stretchers now in ordinance charge should be transferred locally to Medical charge as soon as convenient.

The General Militia Orders also contains the following notice:

The members of the Militia Council and others employed at Headquarters sincerely thank the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the Canadian Forces for the numerous cards and kindly greetings that have been sent to them, which they warmly reciprocate. They wish their comrades, one and all, good luck, happiness and prosperity for the New Year and the years to come.

ANNUAL MEETING

Workingmen's Building and Saving Society Elects Officers

The annual meeting of the shareholders of the Peterborough Workingmen's Building and Savings Society was held last evening, in the Bank of Ottawa chambers.

The annual report was submitted, showing that the Company was exceedingly prosperous. The following were elected directors for the current year:

George Ball, S. W. English, James Garrow, James Lynch, Thos. B. McGrath, A. Murty, Jas. Murty, E. A. Peck, R. Sheehy.

Mr. James Drain was re-appointed auditor.

At a meeting of the directors, held subsequently, the following were elected officers:

J. B. McGrath—President.
James Lynch—Vice-President.
James Murty—Treasurer.

Fearful Headaches

Stomach Bad, No Appetite, Was Losing Weight and Strength

Wonderful Change When Health Was Restored by

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

Headache is a symptom and not a disease in itself. It acts as a danger signal to warn you of serious trouble.

By reading Mr. Donneral's letter you wil be satisfied that there is no treatment to be compared to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a means of building up the system and removing the cause of headaches, sleeplessness and indigestion.

Mr. Charles Donneral, Kleinburg, Ont., writes: "I wish to communicate to you the great cure which I received from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food For over two years I suffered from fearful headaches, my appetite was always poor, and the stomach bad. I took medicines from physicians, but the headaches persisted, and I was rarely free from them.

"Reading about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I began using it, with little idea that I would be benefitted. I had become thin and weak, but the very first box helped me, and with continued treatment I have been cured and feel like a new man. The headaches have disappeared, y appetite is good and digestion excellent. I write this letter in hope that other sufferers from headache may use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and be cured."

NEW FIRE, WATER AND LIGHT COMMITTEE INSPECT FIRE HALL

With Ald. Johnston Presiding Committee Had a Harmonious and Busy Session---Chief Howard Outlines Some of the Articles He Needs.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee met at the Fire Station last night, principally for the purpose of getting the new members of the Committee familiar with the hall, and its surroundings. There were present: Chairman, Ald. Johnston; Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Gordon, Morgan, Buller, Brown and Anderson.

Ald. Johnston stated that he called the meeting for the purpose of introducing the new members on the Committee to the affairs at the fire hall, so that when anything came up for discussion in connection with it at any future meeting, that they would be in a position to have a better idea of what was referred to, and also for the purpose of finishing up any business that had been left by the old Committee. There were also a few other little matters, such as the freezing of hydrants and removing snow from same, that he thought might be dealt with when the Committee was in session.

Referring to the matter of frozen hydrants, Chief Howard stated that he had been in communication with the Fire Underwriters' Association, and they had agreed that any time during the winter months, that the firemen had occasion to use a hydrant, the Chief was to notify the Fire Underwriters Association at once by telephone, and later inform them of full particulars by letter. The Chief said that this would relieve the Fire Department of any liability. As regards the snow around the hydrants, the Chief reported that it was the duty of the Board of Water Commissioners to see that the snow was kept shovelled away from the hydrants, and he had endeavoured to get in communication with Mr. T. F. Matthews, Chairman of the Board, to notify him to have the matter seen to, but so far, he had not been successful in getting in communication with him.

On motion of Mayor Bradburn, seconded by Ald. Morgan, a resolution was passed, whereby the Commissioners will be requested to have the snow cleared away.

Then the question of the number of hydrants in the city came up. Ald. Johnston thought it would be wisdom to have a chart made out, with the hydrants and lamps marked on. City Clerk Armstrong at this juncture, reported that a chart of this nature was at present in the making and would soon be available.

Chief Howard wanted a copy of it as soon as the same could be furnished. He pointed out that it was often the case, that when a light was reported out at a certain place, when he would go to inspect it he would discover that there was no lamp at that point at all.

The Mayor suggested that it might be possible to get a list of lights and locations of same, from the Peterborough Light and Power Co. The Chief replied that he had tried, but they had kept no record of the lights at all. The Chief stated that he would have his report ready in about a week, and it would be of material assistance to him to have one of these charts spoken of.

Lights in Middle of the Street.

The Chief said that about midsummer of last year, the Peterborough Light and Power Co. were asked on resolution, passed by the Fire, Water and Light Committee, to have all the street lamps placed in the middle of the streets. They began the work, but after placing a few lights, they began to lag and finally did not bother placing any more of the lights in that position, nor have they touched them since. He said that it had been proven conclusively that the middle of the streets was the proper place for the lights.

Mayor Bradburn suggested that the lamps in the vicinity of St. Peter's Cathedral be removed, and replaced by incandescent lights. Referring again to the placing of the lights in the middle of the street, the City Clerk stated that it had merely been a verbal contract between the city and the P. L. and P. Co., to have the lights placed there, and they were not obliged to do so.

Ald. Johnston thought that it would be well to get after them again, on the subject, whereupon Ald. Gordon offered that the Chairman, Ald. Johnston was the proper party to go and consult with the Company on the matter. Ald. Johnston said he would look into the matter immediately.

Ald. Brown stated that he had been requested to bring up the matter of lighting the market clerk's office. He said they wanted light there from 7 a.m. until 6 p.m. The matter was referred to the Board of Works.

The Chief's "Wants"

The Chief said there were a few little things he wanted, and he thought it was an opportune time to bring them to the attention of the Committee. First, he wanted a sleigh, to take the place of his buggy. He said that he had been obliged to ride around in the buggy all winter, so far, and it looked rather out of place, as well as being a very awkward means of conveyance in this weather, and he thought $65.00 or thereabouts, would purchase a sleigh, something after the style of a speed cutter, with a box in the rear, where he could carry a few tools and a chemical. He said that his wants had not been very extensive now for some time, and he thought that the Committee would be able to get a few necessary things for him.

Mayor Bradburn pointed out that to have a cutter of this style made to order, would mean that it would be a month and a half or more before it would be ready, and he thought this was a funny time to make such a request.

The Chief stated that this was the third time he had asked for it.

Ald. Gordon moved that the matter be referred to the Chairman to order, by tender, or buy outright, a cutter suitable for the Chief.

Ald. Buller suggested that the Chairman report back before placing the order. Ald. Gordon then changed his motion to that effect, and Ald. Johnston will, accordingly, get some manufacturing establishments to quote prices, and report same at the next meeting, which is proposed to be held in the course of a week or so.

Want No. 2.

The Chief next wanted a winter cap. It had been suggested to him that he have earlapels fastened to his straw hat, but he discovered that it had been too ancient to stand the renovation, and he was accordingly compelled to make the request. He thought he was entitled to a Persian lamb cap, when Chief Thompson had been furnished with one by the Board of Works. "The Fire, Water and Light Committee are surely as good as the Board of Works," commented the Chief. Ald. Buller said it didn't matter a cent whether the Chief of Police wore two hats, to the F. W. and L. Committee, however, he thought the Chief was entitled to a winter cap of some kind.

"Look at mine," suggested Ald. Buller.

"Oh, you have to wear that to be the people's candidate," retorted Ald. Gordon.

On motion of the Mayor, the Chairman was instructed to get quotations on caps, and report at the next meeting.

Hose Tester—Want No. 3.

The Chief then asked for a hose tester. He said that they had about 4,000 feet of hose, and there was only about 3,000 feet fit for use, and they had, at present, no way of testing them to see what they would stand. He explained that it was the bursting of the hose that kept the firemen from doing better work at the recent fire in East City, where the house was completely destroyed. He could get a hose tester for about $185.00 and he thought it was an absolute necessity.

Ald. Buller wanted to know if it was needed worse than a chemical engine, and the Chief replied that it was.

The Mayor said there was no use speaking of the matter at present, but it would be well to make a note of it, and when the Chairman was making his estimates, he could include that.

Ald. Johnston said that they did not want to refuse buying anything for the Fire Station equipment that was a necessity, but they did not want to spend a cent more than what was absolutely needed.

Record Book—Want No. 4.

The Chief next asked for a new Fire Record Book. The Chairman was authorized to purchase a new one.

In connection with the Fire Underwriters' Test, the Chief reported that it had been necessary to secure the service of four men to assist the firemen, and he asked that each be paid $1.50 for their work. The men were Messrs. T. Little, Alex. Calder, Mart Kennedy and Ed. Frink. On motion of Ald. Buller, seconded by Ald. Morgan, a resolution was passed authorizing the money to be paid.

The Chief asked that three or four new coal bags be added to the three at the Fire Station. He said they would cost about $1.25 each. Ald. Anderson moved, seconded by Mayor Bradburn, that the bags be purchased.

The next thing that the Chief wanted was the establishment of some sort of bargain between the F. W. and L. Committee and the Board of Works, regarding the use of hose for sewage purposes. He said that they had to lend some of their hose to the Board of Works and the men who handled them, not being accustomed to the work, had damaged the couplings, so that when the firemen went to use them, in a hurry, they met with difficulty. He suggested that some hose be either given or sold to the Board of Works, for the purpose.

The Mayor thought that they should have hose of their own, and moved that some hose be transferred over to the Board of Works, and the arrangements for the transfer to be made by the Chairman of the Committees.—Carried.

This constituted the evening's business, and the Committee then went on a tour of inspection of the Fire Station, and expressed themselves as exceptionally well pleased with the condition of things.

Wants to Buy a Farm

The Examiner has received the following self-explanatory letter and will gladly forward any information that may be sent in, to the writer:

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—As I would like to rent a farm some place in the Peterborough district, I thought I would drop a line to you and see if you have any listed with you. Or if you do have in the course of the next few weeks, kindly send me a description of the properties and oblige.

Yours truly,

P.S.—Any other business opening for a man with small capital might be considered.

WEEK OF PRAYER MEETINGS

The interest in the meetings in connection with the week of prayer has been steadily deepening night after night, notwithstanding the extreme cold. On Wednesday evening, Rev. Mr. Webb spoke to a good sized audience in St. Paul's church on the subject "Truth in the Inward Parts." His message was a very heart searching one and brought powerfully home to all who heard it the duty of absolute sincerity and truthfulness in the Christian life. A man must be true to himself. He must be true to his fellowmen and he must be true to his God.

Last night the service was held in Murray street Baptist church and was conducted by Rev. I. Couch. His text was taken from Jude, 1:21, "Keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life." He said in part, "During this year we should seek to keep ourselves in the love of God, so that our hearts and our principles may be in accord with what God loves and admires. To this end we will need to have regard to our faith, as faith is the foundation of pure love. There is every need to hold constant fellowship with Christ. This is our privilege and if we do this we will learn to know the Saviour and hence love Him. We should seek to keep our hearts warm in service to our fellowmen, and also ever have a personal concern for our own soul's salvation."

The meeting to-nigh twill be held in George street Methodist church.

GRATEFUL MOTHERS!

What Zam-Buk Did For Their Little Ones.

Thousands of mothers in Canada owe a debt of gratitude to Zam-Buk for its cure of their children, and hundreds of them are not slow to recognize the claim.

Mrs. J. Quiding, of Ninette, Man., says: "My little boy was suffering very badly from a form of skin disease over his eye. I applied Zam-Buk to the affected part, and in a very short time the sores were completely healed."

Mrs. F. Miners, of 311 Suffolk St., Guelph, Ont., says: "My little daughter Lorinda (5), contracted a skin disease. This first broke out like tiny water blisters, afterwards taking the form of dry scabs. These would disappear for a short time, and then reappear worse than ever.

"We tried Zam-Buk, and with each application the irritation and soreness went, greatly relieved and the child rested easier. Perseverance with Zam-Buk worked a complete cure."

All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. Refuse harmful substitutes.

WEDDING BELLS

ARCHER—BEATTIE.

Mr. Frederick Archer of Midland, was married at 4 p.m. on Jan. 10th, in the Knox church, to Miss Annie Victoria Beattie, of Midland, by the Rev. H. J. Keith, in the presence of witnesses.

A GREAT SCHOOL

For the past thirty years the Peterborough Business College has enjoyed an enviable reputation for thorough work, and it is now conceded by all to be the largest and most popular school in Eastern Ontario. It is usually referred to as Eastern Ontario's High Grade Business School. Thousands of young people who cannot attend in person, are preparing for better positions with higher salaries by taking advantage of our Home Study Department. Many others study for a time at home and then complete at the College. Any one who is desirous of success should write for particulars to the Peterborough Business College, Peterborough, Ont.

Fined $25.00 And Costs

Chas. Humber was represented by Mr. F. D. Kerr in police court this morning, charged with supplying liquor to his father, who is a blacklister. He was given ten days in which to pay a fine of $25.00 and costs for the offence.

Fred C. Carter, the Union Life Insurance agent who was arrested in Toronto and arraigned in police court a week ago, charged with the theft of $25 from the local branch of the Company, was remanded until Tuesday next. The supervisor requested that this remand be made until he further investigates the condition of affairs. He said that he had discovered that there was also a deficiency in the Company's Lindsay branch, and he wanted to dig into the matter further.

Horses Untied.

The same old story in the same old way. Sherman Killingbeck and Wm. Morton were fined $2.00 for leaving their horses untied on the streets. This offence is an old one, and the public have been warned innumerable times against this breach of the city by-laws but despite the warning and despite the fact that fines have frequently been imposed for the offence, it is still being committed.

The police authorities are determined to stamp this carelessness out, and a more vigilant watch will be kept on the teamsters in future. The authorities attribute half the runaways to this source and a final effort will be made to see that the law in this respect is enforced.

It is also found necessary to again warn the citizens against fast driving over the Hunter street bridge. The warning at the end of the bridge is being ignored every day, and the police are going to take action.

A WONDER WORKER

"It heals like magic," is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barbers' itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic, it prevents blood poisoning.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

The author-man was reading aloud to us the other night.

"There's an awfully clever parody on the 23rd Psalm somewhere in this magazine, that I want you people to hear," he said, as he consulted the table of contents.

"Excuse me," said the man-who-thinks, with a vigorous accent on the second word. "Anything but a parody for me, please. But don't let me keep the rest of the family from hearing it if they like. I'll take a stroll in the kitchen for a glass of water."

"Now what is the matter with you" queried the author-man, "Isn't this a new wrinkle?"

"No, it is not," said the man-who-thinks. "I've had too many beautiful things spoiled by parodies already, and I made up my mind some time ago that I'd never listen to another if I could help it."

Can you ditto the author-man's experience?

I certainly can, and I should think most people could.

A clever parody is a mighty clever piece of work. Unfortunately, its very cleverness is apt to make it unforgetable. If we could read, laugh, and forget, that would be all right, but how often can we do that?

We hear the parody once or twice, and from then on we can never hear the real thing without having its beauty or its sacredness stained or entirely obliterated, by the quick flashing recollections of the clever but silly imitation.

Several beautiful hymns have been spoiled for me in this way. To my dying day, I don't believe I shall be able to hear the splendid strains of the Lohengrin wedding march without singing over in my mind, "Here comes the bride, etc." For the sake of those fortunate enough to have missed that example of literary vandalism, I forbear to go on with the quotation.

Perhaps you are saying that I lack a sense of humour to take the matter so seriously. I wonder if I do. Really I don't think so. I can see the fun in a parody as well as any one, and laugh at it as heartily, but it seems to me the price is too high. There are so many things just as funny that don't have any string tied to them. Why not laugh at these, and not take away the beauty and solemnity worth while, for the sake of a little momentarily amusement.

Who will join the man-who-thinks and me in our resolutions not to read or listen to any more parodies on beautiful or sacred things?

Ruth Cameron

PUSH PETERBOROUGH

Everyone Can and Should Assist in the Work of Peterborough

Article No. 1

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—It is probably safe to say that every citizen of Peterborough—it is certainly safe to say that every worthy citizen of Peterborough—desires this city to continue to grow and prosper. A few observations, therefore, on how to assist in the work of advancement, and some information as to the advantages which the city possesses, may not be out of place.

The observations may not be of an original character and the information may be such as is known to many and easily accessible to all; yet the writing and the reading of what is written may not be labour lost.

A community may be compared to a family. A good reputation is a valuable asset for a family, and a good reputation is a valuable asset for a city. If the members of a family are continually carping at each other in public, and speak evilly of the family when talking to others, their reputation will suffer. Or, if one or two members of a family make a practise of doing this, it will be enough to seriously affect their reputation, and their influence and standing will suffer. This will curtail their opportunities for advancement and injure them, materially. So it is with a city. Carping in public at the city and its situation, improvements, services, and advancement; finding fault with these things—will cause those who hear, or read the carping and fault finding, to believe that the city is a mean-spirited, non-progressive one that it will be good to keep away from. Talking in this manner about the city to inhabitants of other municipalities will have this effect, for what one is told he will tell others, and a reputation will be established—a reputation that will hamper the city.

One citizen may believe, wrongly, or rightly, that some service is faulty, and if the fault, or supposed fault, has affected him in a personal way, he may make a grievance of it, to such an extent that he will frequently talk about it no matter where he is. Another may similarly see or think he sees, a fault in another service and follow a similar course. The result will be that those they talk to, especially if they are not conversant with the city's advantages, will think of it as a mismanaged, backward, non-progressive place, and pass on that impression to others.

This will seriously hamper the efforts of those who are endeavouring to build up the city, and will retard its advancement, and probably intensify the faults which the "knockers" have found.

Should, then, those who see defects and recognize lacks, not try to have them remedied, or supplied? Yes, they should. But there is more than one way of doing that. One is a scolding, fault-finding way, which counteracts the good-doing aimed at; the other is the appealing to civic pride—the pointing out the good work that has been done as a reason for improving it, or doing more,—referring to the advancement that calls for better things—and this way will be more effective, as well as helping to build up a good reputation for the city while aiming at securing further improvement.

And by the citizens always speaking well of the city it will have a good reputation, and a good reputation is not trash either for a citizen or a city.

A short time ago two business men who came from different cities were talking in the office of a hotel in a third city. No. 1 said that in his city they were going ahead—new industries being located, business brisk, taxes moderate, population increasing and the people pulling together to make it grow. No 2 said his city had a poor street car service, that business was not as good as it had been, that taxes were high, and the Council was negligent in several particulars. Yet, the street car service in the latter was as good, if not better, than in the former city, the taxes were lower, business was at least as brisk, and, in increase of population, it had grown twice as fast as the first city, owing to industrial advancement. Who would have thought so from listening to the two? The first one did not talk to an outsider of any faults he might know of in his city, and the second omitted reference to the good points of his. Which example is the better one to follow?

Pull together—that is the way to make a city grow. Talk it up, write it up, and, above all, work it up, and join with others cordially and energetically, who are trying to do the same. Cultivate a spirit of good feeling and civic pride, and a practice of abetting and aiding in the work of advancement.

Two things, thus far, for all citizens to remember—help the good reputation of your city, and pull together.

Yours truly,

Civis Sum.

MAKES HAIR GROW

McDermid and Jury, druggists, have an invigorator that will grow hair or money back.

The time to take care of your hair is when you have hair to take care of.

If your hair is getting thin, gradually falling out, it cannot be long before the spot appears.

The greatest remedy to stop the hair from falling is SALVIA, the Great American Hair Grower, first discovered in England. SALVIA furnishes nourishment to the hair roots and acts so quickly that people are amazed.

And remember, it destroys the Dandruff germ, the little pest that saps the life that should go to the hair from the roots.

SALVIA is sold by McDermid and Jury under a positive guarantee to cure Dandruff, stop Falling Hair and Itching Scalp in ten days, or money back. A large bottle costs 50c. The word "SALVIA" (Latin for sage) is on every bottle. Also sold at Payne's drug store.

DETECTIVE CONFESSES?

Special to The Examiner:

LOS ANGELES, JAN. 12.—Bert H. Franklin, detective, arrested during the McNamara trial, charged with attempting to bribe the jury has, according to morning papers, confessed all, and has made some startling implications against prominent people before the Grand Jury. Sensational arrests are expected.

TWO PEOPLE FROZEN TO DEATH

WINNIPEG, JAN. 12.—While walking from a neighbour's house to their home, one mile distant, last evening, Mrs. James Sidney and her daughter, residing ten miles from Biggar, Sask., lost their way and were frozen to death. The bodies were found to-day.

STRUCK WITH AXE

Quebec Man Dies as the Result of the Assault

QUEBEC, JAN. 12.—Joseph Cadrau died to-day as the result of being struck on the head several times with an axe by Oxtave Godbout in Billechasse, where Cadran had instructions to prevent anybody trespassing on certain ecclesiastical property, but Godbout insisted and used an axe. He is awaiting trial for murder.

THE GATLIN INSTITUTE OF TORONTO

The Gatlin Institute, 428 Jarvis street, Toronto, an institution for the treatment and cure of the drink habit, is the finest equipped institution of its kind in the Dominion of Canada. It is maintained along lines that afford the patient the strictest privacy. Is homelike and comfortable in every respect. The Gatlin Institute has been conducted for some eleven years with uninterrupted success, which is due to the fact that the cause of drink, and not the result, is treated. The Gatlin treatment is purely vegetable, taken internally, and harmless. Has no bad after effects, or hypodermic injections. The Gatlin system of treating alcoholism requires but three days' time to accomplish the most satisfactory results. The Institute accepts patients for treatment on the plain understanding that if the treatment proves to be a failure, the money paid is refunded, and this understanding, if desired, is made in writing. A book of particulars, contract, etc., can be obtained, mailed in a plain envelope, on application to Mr. A. Hargrave, Manager of the Gatlin Institute, 428 Jarvis St., Toronto. There is also a home treatment for those who are unable to attend the Institute.

Steadily Improving

The many friends in this city of Rev. Dr. Symonds, will be pleased to hear that he is steadily improving in health, and expects to return to his ministerial duties in Montreal at the end of this month.

TO CHECK A COLD

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortreed, B.C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

IGNORED THE ACT

Government Pays No Attention to Civil Service Rules

ESTIMATES ARE PASSED

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—Quite a substantial beginning was made in the passage of the main estimates under the head of civil government, with the exception of those of the Department of Ipterior being approved when the committee of supply rose and reported progress.

The only item that stirred up much debate was the increase in the salary of Col. Anderson, chief engineer of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, from $3,550 to $4,000. The Government was charged by the Opposition with riding a coach and six through the Civil Service Act in this regard. If a jump of several years statutory increases were to be made in his case, it was argued there were many other officials, who through long service and ability, were equally deserving of recognition.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in particular, twitted Hon. Mr. Foster with no longer being the watch dog of the treasury, to which Mr. Foster retorted that Sir Wilfrid would now have a chance to transform himself into a watch dog.

When the House went into committee of supply yesterday afternoon Hon. William Pugsley voiced an objection to the issue of $4 Dominion notes. They were easily mistaken for $1 notes and were generally disliked.

Hon. W. T. White agreed as to the objectionable nature of the notes and stated that within the last few days he had been considering the advisability of issuing a $5 Government note.

In answer to a question of Mr. Pugsley, the Finance Minister stated that the contract with the American Bank Note Co., for the printing of Government notes, would expire on Oct. 1, 1912. The Government was now considering advertising probably in the next week in Canada and Great Britain, for tenders for a five-year contract.

Hon. Col. Hughes got his civil government estimates through almost without a hitch. When Sir Wilfrid Laurier enquired what the Militia Department wanted with an architect, the Minister was able to retort that the gentleman in question had been secured from the Public Works Department before Sept. 21, and he did not think he could be held criminally or otherwise responsible for this appointment.

Hon. J. D. Hazen announced the intention to appoint a general inspector of the agencies of the Department of Marine and Fisheries at a salary of $2,400.

Hon. William Pugsley objected to the proposal to advance the salary of Col. W. P. Anderson, chief engineer of the Marine and Fisheries Department, from $3,550 to $4,000 as an evasion of the law, and liable to cause jealousy among other officials who were not permitted to take several years statutory increases at once.

Hon. J. D. Hazen thought there would be no jealousies as Col. Anderson had been in the service since 1875.

Hon. Geo. E. Foster declared that all general rules must have exceptions. He was just as strong as when he was in Opposition for keeping to the spirit of the law, but once in a while justice would be done by something that seemed to be not quite in compliance with the act.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier accused the Government of seeking a wilful violation of the Civil Service Act. "Let us have the law and adhere to it," he said. "There were good and efficient officers in every Department who might complain that they had been overlooked. It would be an opening of the door to this sort of thing.

A. C. Macdonell (South Toronto) introduced a bill to amend the Patent Act by raising the time limit within which a manufacturer in Canada of a patented article must be commenced from two to four years, and the time with an importation of the article is prohibited from one to two years.

The bill of Hon. J. D. Hazen to reduce the number of harbor commissioners of the City of Quebec from nine to three was read a second time.

Mr. Bordan introduced a bill to amend the Civil Service Act, founded on a resolution which was passed by the House, to permit the private secretary of a Minister to be appointed a clerk in subdivision B of the first or A or B of the second division, and paid a salary not exceeding the maximum in such subdivision.

Hon. F. D. Monk declared that $4,000 a year was a grossly inadequate salary for an official of the standing of Col. Anderson. No later than next session, a definite plan of remuneration of departmental engineers would be laid before the House.

Hon. J. D. Hazen declared that Col. Anderson had last summer been given greatly additional work by the late Minister of Marine, Hon. L. P. Brodeur, he being entrusted with the entire construction work of the lighthouse branch.

Dr. Clark (Red Deer) claimed that the Government was driving a coach and six through the civil service act.

Hon. J. D. Hazen cited the provision in the civil service act that the salary of a Deputy Minister should be $5,000, and added that the late Government had added $1,000 to the Deputy Minister of Naval Affairs, making his salary $6,000.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier declared that he was shocked and horrified to find the Minister of Marine and Fisheries taking refuge in the example of his predecessors.

Col. Anderson got his increase of $450 on a standing vote of 87 to 37.

Alleged Bank Robber Held.

Los Angeles, Jan. 12.—Charles Dean, under arrest as one of the men who robbed the Bank of Montreal at New Westminster, Canada, was arraigned yesterday on a statutory charge. Trial was set for Jan. 19 and bail fixed at $1,000. Dean was arraigned as C. W. Howard, which he asserted was his true name.

The arraignment was formally observed to prevent habaes corpus proceedings and to hold the prisoner until a Canadian officer arrives.

New Customs Building for Toronto?

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—The appropriation of $360,000 for a customs examining warehouse at Toronto is believed to be the first half of a sum with which the Government will erect an entirely new building on a site to be selected.

The plans have not yet been approved, but it is probable that the new buildings for Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa will be put upon uniform lines.

Edmunds Backs Richeson.

Boston, Jan. 12.—It is expected that within the next two weeks an appeal will be sent to Governor Foss and the executive council, in an effort to save the life of Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson. The fight for a commutation of the sentence will be financed by Moses Edmunds, father of Miss Violet Edmunds, the former fiance of Mr. Richeson.

Gave $6,600 For Calf.

North Eason, Mass., Jan. 12.—W. H. Pitchener of Oconomowoc, Wis., is the successful bidder for a calf born to Dolly Dimple, the most valuable cow in the world, which is the property of F. L. Ames of this town. The calf fetched $6,000 after spirited bidding.

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for women's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

GIVES NEW CONCEPTION OF THE EMPIRE

A new conception of the meaning of Empire is given to Canadians this week at the Grand Opera Houpe, where the Kinemacolor opened a brief return engagement yesterday, showing a continuation of the Coronation scenes in their original colours. One of the pictures thrown on the screen showed London being gradually hidden under the miles of stands and bunting, which paved the way for the ceremony.

The Northwest Mounted Police in camp was the first touch of Empire, their official reception and inspection by Lord Roberts was clearly shown. The procession passing Canning statue was a glittering array of gorgeous colour. Miles upon miles of British troops swung by, and the advance of the Life Guards and Lancers, wheeling into line as they neared the camera, evoked cheers from the audience. Men from India, Egypt, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Canada and all the far flung parts of the Empire could be seen passing the screen as though they were being looked at through a window. Fresh ideas of the extent of the territory of which Canada is but a portion, were gained.

The Garter Investiture of the Prince of Wales at Windsor might, perhaps, be designated as a series of living portraits, all of which are ably described by Mr. Sydney Herbert, whose trite remarks during the pictures as well as between reels, lend much to the enjoyment as well as to the instructiveness of the pictures.

The incidental music by Miss Florence Virkler is most appropriate and Miss Virkler's artistry cannot be questioned.

From an educational standpoint, no parent can afford to have their children miss the opportunity of seeing these wonderful pictures.

Matinees will be given to-day and to-morrow, at which school children will be admitted for ten cents. The engagement will close Saturday night.

GRAVE ATROCITIES

Special to The Examiner.

TIEN TSIN, CHINA, JAN. 12.—Word has been received here of the gravest atrocities committed by the Imperial troops at Hanchow, who have got beyond control of the officers. One report says that on capturing revolutionists, they are skinning them alive, and anybody without his queue is likely to be similarly treated. President Sen and his government have officially called the attention of Premier Yuan Shi Kai to this, but all in high places seem to be powerless to stop these atrocities on either side.

T. A. S. TEAM WON THE TRENT VALLEY OPENER

Defeated Campbellford Here Last Night by 10 Goals to 4---- Abstainers Were Always in Front and Won Contest Easily----Half-Time Score was 6 to 2.

The Trent Valley Hockey League was opened last night at Brock street rink when the local T.A.S. defeated Campbellford in a ragged game by 10 goals to 4. The Abstainers were always in front, leading at half time by 6 to 2 and the result of the game was never in doubt. The contest was very late in starting, owing to the tardy arrival of the Campbellford special and was subject to many delays when it was finally gotten under way—the final gong not sounding until 11.30 o'clock. Despite the zero weather there was a large attendance, the crowd including two hundred fans from Campbellford.

The team from down the ditch failed to show very much more than seven brilliant red and white uniforms, a similar number of hockey sticks and the ability to plug away. They had the common failing of village teams of chasing the rubber in a bunch, regardless of their positions, and as the T.A.S. developed the same policy, there were generally half a dozen men trying to take care of the puck at the same time. The result was that there were only a few streaks of spectacular play, these all coming from the T.A.S., who had the speed and scoring ability.

Referee McPhee failed to hold the game in hand and it soon got away from him, although he had the penalty box well filled all through. His vision on off-sides was bad and both teams scored on flagrantly forward passes. Not that he did not catch plenty, but the trouble was both teams were playing a sort of lacrosse game, and if the official had called them all the game mightn't have been over yet. There was considerable tripping and slashing, but no one was seriously hurt. T. Lancefield of the T.A.S. was hurled into the board in the first half and was so badly shaken up that he retired until the half. He was back in the game in the second half however.

Except for the last five minutes of the first half and a short period in the second the T.A.S. had it all over their visitors. The local team were faster skaters and better stick handlers than the red and white outfit and were infinitely better when in close to the nets. The Abstainers started out with five straight goals in the first half before Campbellford scored at all and they kept up this work all through the game.

The T.A.S. had a lot of speed and against a team which played the game a little more according to the regulation methods would make a much better showing. The defence with Doc. McFadden between the poles. Bill Meagher at point and E. Lancefield at cover, was steady and effective. McFadden stopped a number of shots in finished fashion, while Meagher and Lancefield checked in grand style. McPhee was the star of the forward line, displaying speed and fine stick handling, but he marred his work by frequent trips to the penalty box. O'Dette was brilliant in spasms and Halpin did some nice shooting and rushing. Lancefield at left wing was a hard worker.

Hockey Excursion To Lindsay On Monday

Big Crowd Will Accompany Junior O.H.A. Team to see the Most Important Game of the Season in the Junior Series--75c Will be the Return Fare with a 40c. Rate for Children.

The Peterborough Hockey Club is running an excursion to Lindsay on Monday night, when the Peterborough Juniors hook up with the Lindsay Midgets, in the return junior game. This match is about the most important of the season, and will have a big effect upon the championship of the district. The Petes are confident of success, and will go to Lindsay determined to add another victory to their list. The boys are in mid-season form now, and a practice to-night will put them right on edge for the big game. A crowd of fans have signified their intentions of going up with the team, the very cheap rate proving an inducement. A round-trip fare of 75 cents has ben secured for the trip, with a 40-cent rate for children. A special G. T. R. train will leave Peterborough sharp at 7 o'clock, returning immediately after the game.

The Campbellford Curlers Defeated By Thirteen Points

The ice sweepers from Campbellford went down to defeat by 13 points at Charlotte street rink last night. The games, which were four in number, were close and exciting, and the Campbellfordites were able to demonstrate to the local curlers that they were no mean competitors. A large following of curling enthusiasts watched the game from the gallery. Possibly the best contested game in the rink was between Skips Smith and Stevenson, and resulted in a tie, with a score of 11-11.

The final score was—Peterborough 50, Campbellford 37. The line-up was as follows:

Campbellford	Peterborough

Must Be Some Class To The Port Hope Team

Port Hope Guide: In a junior O.H.A. game last evening Cobourg defeated Port Hope 6 to 1. Port Hope was represented by seven young men, attired in hockey uniforms. They were provided with hockey sticks and a puck and the only thing they lacked was skill and ability to play the game. Forsyth was the only one of the forwards to make any attempt at hockey. He did play hard and it was due to his good work that the defeat was not twice as large. McMahon at cover, with more experience should make good.

Dow spent most of the time in the penalty box. It is not a difficult matter and certainly not clever to slash an opponent across the head or the ankles. Any person with sufficient strength could do that, but every time Dow was penalized he went to the box smiling and turned to the spectators as though he expected applause. But hockey enthusiasts do not applaud actions of this kind and if the local junior team wants support they must get down to business and play hockey. If the management could arrange to make about five changes it should prove an advantage.

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

Kingston's Juniors.

(Toronto Star)

"Where do you dig up all these new hockey players from?" Jim Sutherland, manager of Kingston Frontenacs, was asked, after his new 1911 team had defeated Belleville last night. "Well, I'll tell you," replied Jim, "we hadn't a man left of the old champions, this year, so on Jan. 1, Mr. Trotter and I just trotted down to the ponds away out in the outskirts of the town and looked over the bush-whackers, and corn-cutters down there, with and without skates, and most of them with shinneys, selected 30, held a practice, cut the number down to ten, held another practice, picked out seven, and here we are. Some of those lads didn't know whether shin pads went on their elbow or was a reinforcement for their trousers, and a glove was an object of worship. We may not win a championship, but we'll get out of the district anyway".

SUCCESSFUL BALL AT THE ARMOURIES

A most successful dance, the first of its kind to be held in the new armoury, was held last night in the band room of the armoury, under the auspices of No. 3 Company. There were 120 in attendance, and the event was a brilliant success. The dance which partially took the form of an at home, was held under the auspices of officers, non-coms., and men of No. 3 Company, the whole being presided over by Captain Carruthers, who has recently taken over the command of the company from Major Mills. The committee in charge of the proceedings was. Col.-Sgt. C. D. Sucee, Sgt. Roberts and Sgt. Derocher.

The dance commenced at 8 o'clock, and lasted until 1.30, with an intermission at 11.30 for luncheon, which was served in the spacious recreation room.

The folowing were the guests of the evening: Lieut.-Col. Clegg and Mrs. Clegg; Major J. Mills and Mrs. Mills; Hon. Major Davidson, Capt. Carruthers and Lieut. Comstock, of C. Company.

After luncheon was served, Lieut. Col. Clegg made a short speech, complimenting C Company, on the success of their ball.

Mr. H. Gamey was master of ceremonies, and the following were the members of the orchestra: Messrs. Tucker, Ellis and Bridge. The music rendered was very effective, and also appropriate for the occasion. There was a progressive euchre contest also held in connection with the ball, for those who did not dance.

WAS NOT A PRIEST ONLY A TEACHER

A priest of the city requests the Examiner to state that he has made inquiries in regard to Mr. Patrick Morgan, who is to visit the city, and is announced as an ex-priest of the Roman Catholic Church. He states as a fact that Mr. Morgan was never a priest of the church. He was a teacher in a Capuchin College in Wales, and was dismissed from his position, owing to his addiction to the drug habit.

IT GROWS HAIR

Here Are Facts We Want You to Prove at Our Risk.

Marvelous as it may seem, Rexall "93" Hair Tonic has grown hair on heads that were once bald. Of course in none of these cases were the hair roots dead, nor had the scalp taken on a glazed, shiny appearance.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic acts scientifically, destroying the germs which are usually responsible for baldness. It penetrates to the roots of the hair, stimulating and nourishing them. It is a most pleasant toilet requisite, is delicately perfumed, and will not gum or permanently stain the hair.

We want you to get a bottle of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic and use it as directed. If it does not relieve scalp irritation, remove dandruff, prevent the hair from falling out and promote an increased growth of hair, and in every way give entire satisfaction, simply come back and tell us, and without question or formality we will hand back to you every penny you paid us for it. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Sold only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

OBITUARY

MRS. GEORGE WOOD

At the ripe age of 84 years, Mrs. George Wood passed away this morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Adam Harvey, of 471 Albert St., after three weeks' illness.

The deceased came from Edinburgh, Scotland, in the year 1854, and was married in 1856 to Mr. George Wood, taking up residence in Otonabee, where she was well known and respected. During the last four years she has resided in Peterborough, and was a devoted member of the Presbyterian denomination.

Mrs. Wood is survived by four sons, Robert and Francis of Otonabee; George of New Ontario, and William, of Manitoba. Her husband predeceased her about 8 years ago.

The funeral will leave her son's residence, near Villiers, on Monday, at 2 o'clock, and proceed to Keene cemetery. Mr. McDonald of Keene, will officiate.

THE LOCAL DREDGING PLANTS

A fair indication of the progress that is being made by the Trent Canal may be had by reference to the number of dredges that are now employed on the work. Ten years ago, there was not more than one dredge on the entire canal. To-day there are at least six and even these do not appear to be sufficient to keep pace with the work of improving the channels and opening out new sections. Of course all the dredges operating on the canal are not owned by the Government. As a matter of fact, there is only one; the others are owned by the various contractors who are engaged in the work of making the Trent Canal a through water route from Georgian Bay to Trenton.

Two of the dredges operating on the Trent Canal are owned by the Randolph Macdonald Company. They are being used in connection with that firm's contract at Hastings. For the past year or more they have been very busy in deepening the channel of the River Trent from Rice Lake to Hastings. They will still have a great deal of work to do in improving navigation between Hastings and Healey's Falls.

Messrs Brown and Aylmer have a fine dredge which has been working for the past four years about a mile or so above the town of Campbellford. This dredge was built by Messrs Brown and Aylmer below Crow Bay, as it was impossible to get a dredge over Healey's Falls to the place of their operations.

The Government will shortly have a splendid new dredge that promises to be of great service in improving navigation on the Trent Canal. This dredge is being built by Mr. A. J. Grant, superintending engineer of the canal, and has been under construction, just below the lift lock, for the past few months. It will be the largest dredge on the canal and will be equipped with the most improved machinery. Mr. Jas. Hadcock, formerly of Welland, who is the foreman on the work of constructing the new dredge, has had a large force of men employed, and the machinery is now being installed. It is 110 feet in length, with a 28 ft. 6 in. beam. It is built throughout of British Columbia fir, and is being equipped with machinery supplied by Messrs Wm. Beatty and Sons, of Welland. It will have a Scotch boiler, 12 ft. 6 in. in length and 8 ft. in diameter, and will possess the most modern engines and hoisting machinery procurable. She will be equipped with a steel boom and her spuds or anchors will be operated by individual engines. The living quarters for the crew will be above and they will be fitted up in a style in keeping with the remainder of the dredge.

Of course a dredge is only a part of a dredging plant. A dredge in itself is of little use. She must have two, and perhaps four dump scows to assist her in her work. She must have at least one, and in some cases, two tugs to tow away the dump scows and assist in moving the plant from place to place. In fact a dredging plant cannot be assembled on a few thousand dollars, nor can it be operated on a few dollars per day. Dredging plants are big propositions, and there is reason to believe that there would not be as many dredging plants on the canal to-day, if it were not for the fact that the contractors realize that it is only a few years hence until they can be taken out into open waters.

GENERALLY SPEAKING

ELECTRIC RAILWAY.

Scarcely a month passes without some local paper coming forward with the announcement that surveyors are at work locating a line for an electric railroad from up and to, to so and so. If all the electric railroads had been built in this district, during the past six years, that it was announced would be built, including the Graham-Mann hot air line from Lindsay to goodness only knows where, there would not be a ten acre field in the five counties that would not be blocked out like a checker board, or would not resemble a transcontinental railway terminal.

The Fenelon Falls Gazette is the latest publication in this district to announce the construction of a new electric line. In a recent issue the Gazette says:

"An electric railway line between Lindsay and Minden is among the near probabilities. The line, it is understood, is to be built and equipped by English capitalists, who are taking preliminary steps towards its construction. The exact location of the road is not known, but it is likely to pass through Fenelon Falls, and possibly Coboconk."

We are not accusing the Gazette of publishing items of news, knowing them at the time not to be true. The Gazette is one of the most reliable weeklies in this district. It publishes this item in good faith and we would be only too glad to see the electric railway from Minden to Lindsay materialize. However, we are beginning to lose faith in these announcements. We have been reading them periodically for the past six or more years, and still we have failed to see the first sod turned on one of these projected lines.

Some few years ago, two promoters were fighting before a committee of the Ontario Legislature for a charter to build an electric line from Cobourg and Port Hope to Peterborough, and on to Young's Point, as well as to Lindsay. At the suggestion of the committee they joined forces, and one charter was given to the combined interests. But was any move made in the matter of building the road? None whatever.

The Peterborough Radial Railway have a franchise to build to Young's Point. Every six months or so, it is rumoured that they are going to commence immediately an extension of the line. But has any active work ever been done on extending the line to Young's Point? None whatever. This spring we will very likely again hear the rumour that MacKenzie and Mann are going to build an electric line from Port Hope to Peterborough, to act as a feeder to their C.N.R. line. Then there is the line from Cobourg to Harwood, using the old Peterborough and Cobourg railway right of way, and perhaps this is one of the best propositions yet suggested in the electric railway line in this district. Every summer when the tourist traffic is brisk and things are humming on Rice Lake, it is announced that this is going to be a sure thing next season. But the weeds still grew up undisturbed on the abandoned roadbed from Cobourg to Harwood, and the summer tourists from Cobourg still reach Rice Lake by the caravan route.

Even the village of Apsley, in the northern part of Peterborough County is occasionally excited by rumours of an electric line that is to bring the mineral and forest wealth of that neighbourhood tumbling down to Peterborough. But they are only rumours. In fact, the building of electric railroads furnishes the grandest theme for pipe dreams that one could possibly imagine.

THE AXE STILL FALLING.

The axe appears to be falling with a sickening thud along the line of the canal in Victoria and Haliburton. During the past week three faithful employees of the Trent Canal have been beheaded to make room for Conservative party friends. Mr. George F. Bruce, who since the opening of the Lake Simcoe-Balsam Lake Division of the canal, has been overseer thereon, has received notice of his dismissal. Mr. John Pearson, of Lindsay, who was a most competent official and who has been foreman on the Burnt River waters, is dismissed, as is also Mr. Peter Grosello, foreman of the Gull River waters. Both Mr. Pearson and Mr. Grosello have been identified with the management of the reservoir waters on the canal for many years, and their summary dismissal will be a distinct loss to the service. The Borden Government, however, appears to care nothing about the efficiency of the service. They are more concerned over supplying jobs for party friends.

LONG, FAITHFUL SERVICE.

Twenty-six years is a long time for one to hold the office of superintendent of a Sunday school, yet this is the wonderful record held by Mr. R. W. Clark, of Millbrook, who has just resigned the position of superintendent of the Methodist Sunday school of that village. Mr. Clark might have held the position for twenty-six years longer but for the fact that he caught the western fever, and is moving to Weyburn, Saskatchewan. During his tenure of office as superintendent, he has seen many pastors come and go, has seen families in the village grow up and scatter to many parts of the continent, and has seen many pillars of the Church pass to their eternal reward. His enthusiasm in Sunday school work never waned, and if he erred at all in his judgment, it was in not allowing others to assume a fair share of responsibility in connection with his school. Mr. Clark is undoubtedly one of the most capable Sunday school superintendents in the province, and he has been for many years a prominent figure at the Provincial Sabbath School Association Conventions, having held the highest office in the gift of the association. For the past 30 years, Mr. Clark has been in the dry goods business in Millbrook.

SHOULD LAND THIS.

A recent issue of a Cobourg paper says that a representative of a Montreal company, who propose opening five canning factories in this district, was in that town recently looking over available sites, and the prospects of starting a factory there. The company is a wealthy one, says the Cobourg paper, and propose putting up a factory costing anywhere from $20,000 to $30,000. What is more, they do not ask any concession from the town. This is an ideal sort of company. They really ask no concessions from the town. It is not every day that an industrial commissioner runs across promoters who propose locating a factory and wish no concessions from the municipality. As a matter of fact, as a rule they ask fixed assessment, free sites, power at less than cost, a loan of anywhere from ten to one hundred thousand dollars, and the city to guarantee their bonds for the balance of what might be necessary to start the institution on its first lap.

But speaking more seriously it might be well if the Peterborough City Council got busy on a canning factory proposition. Peterborough is splendidly located for the establishment of an institution of this kind. A canning factory in Peterborough, apart from the employment it would give to a large number of hands, would prove to be a boon to the truck farmers of the adjacent townships.

THE OVERHEAD BRIDGE.

An East City resident writes as follows:

The accident that occurred last week at the Quaker Oats Company's siding very fortunately had no serious results. It serves, however, to emphasize the great dangers that exist at this crossing to farmers and townspeople who are obliged to cross Hunter Street Bridge. Of course, there is a flagman constantly on duty, in order to minimize the danger that exists to pedestrians and vehicles, but even with this precaution, with the greatly increasing amount of shunting required at the Quaker Oats Company's plant, it appears to be only a matter of time until a serious accident occurs.

The only solution of this problem appears to be in the erection of an overhead bridge. This is an old subject, but now that a new City Council has assumed office it is the proper time to bring the matter up again, in the hope that something definite may be accomplished. The advocates of a new overhead bridge at Hunter Street should organize and have the question disposed of one way or another. They should not wait until the dying days of the present City Council. His Worship Mayor Bradburn, previous to his election by acclamation, announced that the Hunter Street Bridge question would receive his early attention. He should be held to his promise. There is no public work more urgently required in the city than a bridge at this point that will carry the street cars to Ashburnham, and that will permit of railway and streetcar traffic underneath it.

HOW THEY GET REVENGE.

There are many ways in which a rejected suitor endeavours to get even with the "girl who turned me down." Occasionally, the young man in a wild fit of heroism runs to the nearest mill pond and puts an end to his earthly existence. Of course he thinks that this will cause the fair, fickle, false female to suffer great mental agony, she will suffer the pangs of remorse for the remainder of her natural life, and on more than one occasion she will regret that she rejected the hand of her brave young hero.

There is the young man who, when he is unceremoniously turned down, swears everlasting seclusion from the society of women. He has soured on womankind—all are false, unsympathetic and ungrateful. His seclusion from their society will, through time, he imagines, prove a sort of tantalization to them all, and especially to the one who would not reciprocate his progression of love.

Then there is the Peterborough type of young man, who, upon being rejected by the pretty little maiden, hustles around and marries some other girl right away quick. His motive is revenge: and how his first sweetheart will pine herself away! At least so he thinks.

However, the Montreal method is by long odds the most unique on record. Its worst feature is, however, that it endangers not only the life of the young lady who may be involved in the affair, but of the residents of her particular locality as well. This plan of campaign is set out in a despatch from Montreal that appeared in the press during the past week, and reads as follows:

"Because he was rejected as a suitor by 15-year-old Denise Sarrazin, who said that she would never marry an Italian, Victor Ruceppi, aged 23, attempted to blow up the young girl's home with dynamite. The dynamite cartridge went through the lower storey of the house and exploded in the kitchen of the flat occupied by Jos. Commeau. No one was hurt. Ruceppi was arrested this morning and confessed. He will be arraigned to-day."

MILITARY MENTION

The 57th Regiment is to put in five days' training in camp this year, instead of undergoing the whole of its training in the Armouries, as they have done hitherto.

An order has been issued at Ottawa announcing that the annual training of all the city corps is to be divided into seven days at headquarters and five days in camp. According to the present system, one night's drill at the Armouries constitutes half a day. Thus the five days in camp will take ten night drills away from their regular training, and both the spring and fall drill seasons will be shortened accordingly.

The need of city regiments for training in camp has long been felt, and was pointed out as one of their principal weaknesses by General Sir John French in his report on the Canadian militia.

Of course it is not known just where the 57th Regiment will go under canvas, but it would not be surprising if the camp of instruction would be somewhere on the outskirts of the city.

Lieut. Garnet G. Greer, 3rd Dragoons, who is attending Toronto University, and who has been home for the Christmas vacation, returned to Toronto on Tuesday.

Lieut. J. H. McGill, of the Millbrook Squadron 3rd Dragoons, has just been elected Deputy Reeve of the Township of Cavan.

LITTLE WORRIES IN THE HOME

It is These That Bring Wrinkles and Make Women Look Prematurely Old

Almost every woman at the head of a home meets daily with many little worries in her household affairs. They may be too small to notice an hour afterwards, but it is these same constant little worries that make so many women look prematurely old. The effect may be noticed in sick or nervous headaches, fickle appetite, pain in the back or side, sallow complexion, and the coming of wrinkles, which every woman dreads. To those thus afflicted Dr. Williams' Pink Pills offer a speedy and certain cure, a restoration of colour to the cheeks, brightness to the eye, a healthy appetite and asense of freedom from weariness.

Among the thousands of Canadian women who have found new health and new strength through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is Mrs. W. C. Daerr, London, Ont., who says: "About two years ago I found myself so badly run down that it was almost impossible to perform my household duties. I fell off in flesh, was weak and very pale, had no appetite, feet constantly cold, and to further make my life miserable I was afflicted with these other ailments from which so many women suffer. I tried many kinds of medicine, but got no benefit, and began to feel that I was slipping into chronic invalidism. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and although I felt somewhat hopeless decided to do so. To my delight after taking the Pills a few weeks, I felt much better, and a further use of them brought me back to my old time health. I have since recommended the Pills to many others, and those who have used them have always been benefitted."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

(Copyright, 1910, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.)

The Birth of John the Baptist.—Luke 1, 57-80.

Golden Text—Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for He hath visited and redeemed His people.—Luke 1, 68.

(1.) Verse 57.—What effect did it have upon Elizabeth when she found out that she was to become a mother?

(2.) Why have all Christian wives who are about to become mothers, reason to rejoice and be inspired, as was the mother of John the Baptist?

(3) Verse 58.—If our hearts do not rejoice with those who are rejoicing, what does that suggest?

(5.) Verse 59—When should the religious education of a child commence and how should it be accomplished? (This is one of the questions that may be answered in writing by members of the class.)

(6.) Is there any public way to-day which we may profitably adopt in dedicating a child to God which in any way answers to circumcision?

(7.) Verses 60-63—What should be our chief consideration in naming a child?

(8.) Why did they name this child John?

(9.) Would it be folly or wisdom for us in these days to expect an angel to tell us the name to give to an infant? Why?

(10.) Why did they all marvel so much when the name of John was given to this babe?

(11.) Verse 64—What were the circumstances in connection with Zacharias losing his speech?

(12.) To what extent, if any, does doubt take away the speech of a good man to-day?

(13.) Can you mention an Old Testament character who because of doubt about his power of speech, caused God to be angry with him?

(14.) Verses 65-66—What did Zacharias probably discourse about, to create such fear in the community?

(16.) Verse 67—What is the difference between a man filled with the Holy Spirit and an ordinary man?

(17.) Are all persons who are filled with the Holy Spirit prophets?

(18.) Verses 67-74—What was the theme of Zacharias in his prophetic discourse?

(20.) Would you say that all the things that John foretold would have happened if the Jews had accepted Jesus, and why?

(21.) Verse 75—Are all those who accept Jesus able to live "in holiness and righteousness all the days of their lives"?

(22.) Verses 76-80—What was the character of John the Baptist, and what were the results of his work?

SHE GOT WHAT SHE WANTED

This Woman Had to Insist Strongly, but it Paid

Chicago, Ill.—"I suffered from a female weakness and stomach trouble, and I went to the store to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but the clerk did not want to let me have it—he said it was no good and wanted me to try something else, but knowing all about it I insisted and finally got it, and I am so glad I did, for it has cured me.

"I know of so many cases where women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I can say to every suffering woman if that medicine does not help her, there is nothing that will."—Mrs. JANEBERKI, 2040 Arch St., Chicago, Ill.

This is the age of substitution, and women who want a cure should insist upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound just as this woman did, and not accept something else on which the druggist can make a little more profit.

Women who are passing through this critical period or who are suffering from any of those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of the fact that for thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills. In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

By JOHN MARCH

"Of course I admire Miss Hargrave immensely, but I'm afraid I am not a marrying man," he said, hastily, throwing away the match with a hand that trembled slightly, "anyhow, I couldn't contemplate matrimony for many years to come; I expect by the time my prospects allow me to dwell on such a luxury as a wife Miss Hargrave and all the ladies in this neighbourhood will have long been settled in establishments of their own."

"You know your own business best, naturally," Felix said, the same penetrating gaze in his eyes, "and having got your knowledge, so to speak, at your fingers' ends, if we are to be intimate friends, you must also get with it wisdom, understanding, and discretion."

Paul looked at the eight-day clock, glanced at his boots, and then slowly raised his brilliant eyes to the squire's face.

"I should be a fool to pretend I did not comprehend your meaning," he said at last, laying aside the pipe and stroking the back of his head, "You are rightly anxious to safeguard your sister's interests. I have openly said I have no intention whatever of marrying. Neither do I purpose marring a promising career by tampering myself with a long indefinite engagement. Of course, I know as well as you that the difficulty with women is their feelings are apt to get interested sooner than ours, and instances have occurred where a woman has staked her happiness on a chance kiss, a careless whisper, even a look, and wasted the best years of her life, hoping against hope. On that score and that alone is there any responsibility attached to my coming to and fro. From the little you know of me, from what you have heard, and especially from the Hargrave episode, you must judge as to whether I am sufficiently circumspect, whether I come up to your standard as an honourable man and a gentleman. This is my first visit to the Manor House, and you must decide, Mr. Fleming, whether I am to repeat it."

Felix took the neglected pipe from the chimney-piece, looked at it with a half smile, insgrted his penknife into the bowl and knocked the tobacco out on the palm of his hand.

"The thing won't draw plugged like that," he said, refilling it.

"Thank you," Paul said, receiving the pipe and looking expectantly at his smiling meditative face.

"Look here, Farley," he said, after a moment's deliberation and passing the matches, "my sister Agnes is not a woman to give herself away unsought, and as to you. I shall trust you; trust you implicitly. For the first time in my life I've taken an odd erotic kind of liking to one of my own sex, and—well, there—I mean to let myself go! Rather comical though, isn't it?"

"The liking is mutual," he said, holding out his hand to say good-night, "I should have been in a bad way had you decided against me."

"Upon my soul, I couldn't do it, Farley," he laughed, refusing the proffered hand. "I'm going to walk back with you and do a bit of catechising. Hunter wants to know whether you've struck the name of Jervois in the other hemisphere?"

CHAPTER X.

The Masked Ball.

Inside the Larches there was a stirring scene.

Carriage after carriage had wound slowly along the drive and deposited their occupants before the ornamented portico. Gay chattering, handsomely-clad women stood in little groups of twos and threes on the crimson cloth spread over the flight of wide granite steps.

A few paces above, just where the firelight caught and mingled with the moonbeams, two gentlemen waited, each holding a flimsy black silk mask between their white-gloved fingers. Now and again they exchanged smiling civilities, and appeared vastly entertained by watching the animation of the women below them, and listening to the curious palpitating babel of voices, mixed with peals of laugher, the grinding and crunching of wheels, the rustle of stiff brocade ,and the frou-frou of silken gowns.

"There's the Hargrave carriage," the elder man said, as a plain, but elegant dark green barouche and pair came between the double row of Chinese lanterns and drew up in front of them.

"Are we late? Oh, there's a crowd now going in! Have you been here long? You must have walked quickly. We thought we should pass you on the road. We looked out for you all the way. Pity you two couldn't have squeezed in. Never mind, give me your arm, Hubert, and Mr. Farley will take Judith. I feel as excited as a girl at her first ball. Good gracious, listen! I'm sure that's Dan Godfrey's orchestral band from town."

"Yes it is; came down by the same train as I did this afternoon," Hubert Graham said, tucking her arm under his. "I expect this fling will cost our charming widow a pretty penny."

"Still, she's rich, isn't she, Hubert?"

"Fairly so," the barrister replied, with a pressure on the plump arm under his. "I wonder what these muddle-headed county magnates are thinking about to pass over such a price. Here's a palace, Patricia," he added, as they disappeared behind a velvet portiere, "for an impecunious landowner to hang up his hat in."

Judith Hargrave put a timid hand on Paul Farley's arm. Her cheeks were flushed to a lovely carmine and excitement had shaded her violet eyes to the colour of the sapphires sparkling beneath her gossamer silk mitten.

"Did you see Patty Primrose?" she asked, laughing; "that's how she appropriates and treats Mr. Graham directly he comes down. Gossip says he makes her an offer of marriage every time they meet, and the pantomime has been going on for the last twenty years."

"Indeed," he said, amused. "I've heard the longer the courting the truer the love, but perhaps to-night will witness the last appeal. I wonder if I may have the pleasure of this first waltz with you, Miss Judith?"

"But I am an engaged girl, Mr. Farley."

"That's the reason I want to make sure of you. This will be the last time I shall dance with you as Miss Hargrave. Moreover, I promised Mr. Pelham I would look after you."

"What is father waiting for?" she asked, turning back and compelling him to retrace a few steps.

"The Flemings," he said. "Doesn't the squire look gigantic in that cloak."

"Go on, you two," Sir Thomas shouted in his hearty homely fashion, addressing his secretary. "We'll wait while Fleming takes the wraps to the cloakroom.

Then went on obediently, arm-in-arm. Paul pulled aside the heavy crimson portiere, and they stood entranced on the threshold of the ballroom. It was a veritable fairyland of coloured lights, exotic plants, and luxuriant wealth of English and foreign hothouse flowers. The lofty ceiling was painted a turquoise blue, sprinkled with silver stars, and the walls were hidden by huge branches of the magnolia tree. The thick, green foliage shimmered in the subdued light; the great greenish, yellow solitary blossoms hung as if weighted by their beauty, expanding and exhaling big breaths of subtle fragrance through the warmth. Invisible birds twittered, then burst into marvellous rills of song, as if their little hearts would break with the joy of it all, until from behind the curtained gallery came the strain of one of Strauss's waltzes, throbbing, palpitating, and vibrating on the heavily perfumed air.

Paul stood enwrapt, his artistic nature responding a hundredfold to the delicate haunting witchery of the scene. A quiver of the little hand on his arm brought his soaring thoughts earthward, and he turned to find Judith pale, her eyes black with feeling, and one hand pressed over his heart.

"You are cold," he said, drawing her further into the room. "Shall we waltz this? The next time I dance it will be at your wedding, you know."

"The room is warm enough," she said, a catch in her voice; "it's the overpowering scent of all this profusion of flowers that's chilled me. I don't know why, but a heavy suffocating perfume of rare blooms always brings death to my mind. And the band, too, it's beautiful, it's inspiring, and fills one with a strange exultation, yet it makes me feel as if I were crying—crying inwardly."

"Nerves," he said, soothingly, slipping an arm around her waist, while she gathered the folds of her chiffon skirts into her hand. "I have much the same feeling on occasions when my beauty-loving nature has been probed and my whole being stirred to its lowest depths. But it's not wise to allow one's self to be haunted by evil forebodings, else one would be for even stitching for one's own shroud. We ought to remember, Miss Hargrave, that our past is dead, but our future as not yet born. We——"

"Where's your mask, Farley, and yours, Judith?" Felix demanded, towering above them, his eyes sparkling through the apertures in the concealing silk. "My friends, I can't permit you to be the only unmasked couple in the room."

"Mon Dieu! I forgot the rag," Paul said, with a laugh and a shrug. "May I see Miss Fleming's programme?" he asked, looking at her while he adjusted it.

She took the little piece of pink pasteboard from the bosom of her gown, and he scribbled his initials against almost every other dance, handing it back with a graceful bow. The Squire's long intercepting arm came across his sister's shoulder, and the tiny gilt-edged card, pencil, tassels and all, were swallowed by the broad expanse of a lavender kid palm.

"Come, I say, Farley," he exclaimed, studying it with some amusement. "This kind of thing attracts comment."

"Not necessarily, Mr. Fleming, when the dancers are masked."

"Perhaps not, but I imagine a ballroom reputation lies in a diversity of partners, and we'll lean to the safer side," he answered quietly, drawing a pencil through a few of the "F.P.'s" and inserting his own name on the same line. "Besides, Farley, I want you to forego a caper or two later and have a smoke outside with me."

"Oh, the abominable selfishness of men!" exclaimed a sweet, childish treble at the Squire's elbow. "It's too bad, Mr. Fleming, to entice away the younger dancing men, and, after all, you see the allurement merely ends in smoke. I do believe your pipe is paramount throughout every phase of your existence."

"I am wedded to my pipe, Mrs. Wycherly," he said pleasantly, gently drawing her programme from her grasp, and writing on it, "and, of course, you understand my wife stands first."

"Your wife," she repeated, with a dainty moue; "you often quote her, Mr. Fleming, nevertheless, it's a blessed accident for Mrs. Felix that she's only a myth."

"I'm afraid you are a little hard on a helpless, inoffensive bachelor," he said, good-naturedly, "but I must be content to hope the rest of your sex don't share your opinion, Mrs. Wycherly."

He laughed, passed her programme on to Paul, and looked admiringly down at her waving mass of corn-coloured hair. She seemed to resent the unruffled, easy, open gaze, and shot a venomous glance at him before she turned and smiled upon the two girls ,and glided swan-like almost imperceptibly, round to Paul's side.

"I should like to dance the fifteenth with you, if I may, Mr. Farley," she said in a pretty unassuming way, with wide beseeching, innocent eyes; "it's a country—a sort of barn dance; it will be such fun, a regular romp."

"Certainly," he said, but I have put my name down for more than one dance," he added politely.

"Oh, I'll be pleased, you know I will," she answered with a wonderful sweeping upward look that even the disfiguring mask could not detract or hide, "but you mustn't mind if you find I am in great request, because the majority of the men feel called upon to do the civil in my own house."

He bowed, and without a sound she was gone, her soft diaphanous gown lost among the whirl of dancers. For the second time Paul placed his arm around Judith Hargrave's waist when his eyes met those of the squire's over her head.

"Trust her not," he said, facetiously, with a low laugh of enjoyment. "She's fooling thee."

"Vessels large may venture more, but little boats should keep near the shore," he responded in the same light tone. "I'm only a little cockle-shell of a boat and I mean to hug the land," and they moved away gradually, drifting in among the motley crowd.

"Die Wacht am Rhein now," he whispered as they swayed to the rise and fall of the voluptuous music. She nodded as if she were afraid words would dissolve this one last dream of ecstacy, and thus they waltzed on in slow, rythmical motion, neither caring to break the silence, and Paul loth to disturb the wrapt look in her eyes.

"Do you like Mrs. Wycherly?" she asked when they stopped for a breathing space beneath the temporary bandstand.

"I can't say that I do," he said, guardedly.

"I wonder at that; she has such a fatal gift of beauty."

"Just so, but to my mind your friend Miss Fleming is the more beautiful. You can't compare them. Miss Agnes is a bright, fresh, lovely English girl, while the other strikes one as having obtained her diabolical beauty by means of sorcery by the assistance of a Familiar, or some such devilry."

"You like Agnes Fleming?"

"I more than like her; I—"

"Love at first sight," she said laughing to hide the quiver of her lips. "I would rather you married Agnes than Rowena Wycherly."

"Well, between you and me ,Miss Hargrave, I don't wish to marry either. I don't wish to marry anyone. I simply want the women to leave me severely alone, to boycott me, to send me to Coventry, to tabboo e, to hate the sight of me, to do, in fact ,anything that will serve to let me go my own way unmolested."

"Living under the same roof so many weeks," he said remorsefully, "we understand one another. We are too old and intimate friends to dream of taking an unpremeditated random shot to ourselves. It's a comfort sometimes to unburden one's mind where one is sure of a sympathetic listener. Come, one more turn, and then I will give that fellow over there with the monocle a chance."

She glanced up at him, and thought he was stouter, comlier, more at his ease than when he first made his appearance at Weyberne Hall. His smooth-shaven face had filled out, his wonderful eyes had lost the harrassed expression which she noticed spring into them upon the slightest provocation. He was dark, handsome, clever, interesting, all that her foolish heart desired, yet fate persisted in pushing Anthony to the fore, and the world marvelled she was not more elated, more distracted, and spoilt, with so much good fortune.

Mix 2 cups granulated sugar and 2 tablespoons FRY'S Cocoa. Stir in 1 cup milk, add one level tablespoonful of butter and boil very slowly from 20 minutes to a half hour—until it forms a ball when dropped into cold water. At this stage a few chopped nuts make a delicious addition. Remove from fire, add teaspoonful of vanille extract, beat until stiff, pour into pan, and when cool cut in squares. FRY'S Cocoa makes fudge of an exquisitely delicate and rich flavor. Try it.

AFTER TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience: "I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. Lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the spine was set in and the doctor told me that I had paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

A Woman's Strategy

(Short Story.)

"Beautiful view of the river from here," said the old gentleman in a pleasant voice. Dick Hammond was startled and blushed with confusion as he looked into the stranger's jovial face, for when you have been occupying a prison cell for three years it is quite a shock to find yourself addressed once more as an ordinary member of society, and it was only an hour since Hammond had left his cell in Sing Sing.

For almost an hour he had noticed this old gentleman, who seemed to follow him, and he had repeatedly tried to shake him off by hurrying his steps, but so far without success. And now he even tried to strike up a conversation.

"I suppose you are going to Tarrytown, too?"

"Yes," said Dick, curtly.

"Well, we might as well walk together, if you do not object."

Dick nodded.

The old gentleman introduced himself as Mr. Judson and said he was in business in New York. He was a very talkative person, apparently.

"I went up to Ossining this morning from my house in Tarrytown, because I expected to get an assistant from the bank there, but this young man did not quite suit me, and, as the weather was so fine and I was too late to go down to business today anyhow, I thought I would walk home."

After a moment's silence he said to Dick, with a pleasant laugh:

"I suppose you are not looking for a job, for if you are, I would make you an offer."

Dick Hammond laughed—the first time in three years.

"Do you know where I come from, Mr. Judson?" he asked. It was the longest sentence he had spoken all the way. "I come direct from Sing Sing, where I have been for three years. Let us talk of something else. We are near Tarrytown, now; perhaps you would rather not be seen in company with a convict."

"Now, don't talk like that, please. If you are willing to take the job in my office I will be glad to see you there to-morrow. The salary is rather small. Only $15 a week to start with, but as you are single, you can manage to get along on that for a while."

When he had been in the office four or five weeks Mr. Judson came out from his private office with some papers.

"Look here, Hammond," he said, "you know I have no stenographer at present, and I should like to have these lists typewritten. There is a public stenographer upstairs, Miss Austin, I think her name is. She has just opened her office and I don't think she has much to do, though she is a smart-looking girl who evidently is determined to succeed. We will give her all the assistance we can."

Two floors above he knocked at a door on which was the sign: "Miss Austin, Public Stenographer."

"Come in," a pleasant voice replied, and Dick opened the door and gave a gasp of surprise.

"Emily! you here!" he cried. "What does this mean?"

"Why, Dick, is it really you? You don't know how glad I am to see you again."

Forgetting everything else, Dick clasped her in his arms and kissed her again and again.

"But now tell me," he said, after a while, "how does this happen? Has your father lost his fortune?"

"Don't ask, Dick," she replied. "I am trying to forget I ever had money."

And Dick, just like a man, thought he guessed what had happened. He asked no more questions. That could wait. As matters stood he could offer her a home and save her from the drudgery of an office. He told her so and she nodded.

"I promised you to wait, Dick," she said, "but I did not think I should have so little to offer you."

"Little," he said. "As if your love were not worth all the millions of Wall Street."

When he left her he felt happier than for years, and of course he told his employer all about it as soon as he was back in the office.

"Now, that is good news, indeed," Mr. Judson exclaimed, "and I want to do my share. From now on your salary is $20 a week, if you promise to marry her before the end of this month."

Two weeks later the young people were quietly married by a justice of the peace. Judson was one of the witnesses, and as they left the office he slipped a $100 bill into Dick's hand and whispered that it was to be used for a wedding trip.

They had been married in the forenoon, and late in the afternoon they were sitting on the rocky shore of Lake Hopatcong, where they were to spend their honeymoon.

Dick was telling her how happy and glad he felt, but Emily looked rather thoughtful, as if she had something in her mind.

"I know you love me, Dick," she began. "Could you forgive me if I had not been quite frank with you?"

"Forgive you?"

"Oh, it is hard to tell you now, but I have not told you the truth. My father has not lost his fortune at all. I am as rich as ever. But let me tell you everything now."

Dick had jumped up and was about to say something.

"It was my idea," she interrupted. "I knew the date you were to be set free and I had long ago arranged everything with papa. You know he always liked you, Dick, and he likes you still. We knew you would never come to us again if we asked Mr. Judson, who is a kind of father's, to help. He will watch over you, follow you and offer you a position. Then when we saw you begin to pick up and grow to be a little like your old self, he sent for me to play my part. I never said in so many words that I was poor, Dick."

She rose quickly and looked at her husband, who stood silent and motionless.

"Oh, Dick, dear! Tell me you are not angry," she pleaded. "You don't believe I set a trap for you? I wanted so much to help you to get over it. Dick, tell me you don't hate me, because I love you too much to give you up."

There was a moment's silence, a moment full of suspense and fear to her — then Dick took her into his arms.—Allen Tymbault, in Buffalo Enquirer.

Spare The Rod And Spoil The Child

If Solomon could come back, his wisdom would be welcome in many parts of our official life, but perhaps nowhere more eagerly than in the Board of Education. The idiotic policy of forbidding school principals to inflict corporal punishment under any circumstances could not have been adopted save over his emphatic protest. The fruits of that policy are now seen in the effort to secure the creation of disciplinary schools in this borough and the collection of instances of insult and affront to women teachers by overgrown boys, which is now being made as a lever to get the money for such schools in which to deal with incorrigible boys.

There are some offences against decency for committing which in the street any man is promptly knocked down, or perhaps turned over to the police to be locked up. Precisely those offences are committed by big hulking boys in the public schools in the presence of young women teachers, because the boys know that the principal is forbidden to thrash them, and because under the compulsory education law they are not likely to be turned out of the schools. The thing is enough to make any decent man's blood boil when he hears the facts of even one case, and many a principal has been sorely tempted to punish the offence as it deserved and let the Board of Education deal with him after. If a few principals would do just that and make public the provocation for the thrashing, the rule against corporal punishment might be considerably modified.

This is not a plea for indiscriminate corporal punishment. Probably infirmities of temper are so great that it is wise to forbid class teachers to thrash children with whom they have had trouble, although there are instances in which that form of discipline would be salutary. But there can be no question of temper when a principal is called in after an outbreak to learn the facts and deal with them in his discretion. These particular offences, for which a sound thrashing is not only a proper punishment, but a deterrent from their repetition, are not a question to argue about. That young women teachers in our schools are made to endure them is an outrage upon the teachers and a disgrace to the city. They should be stopped in short order. A disciplinary school may be a remedy, but a disciplinary switch is a much prompter and more effective one, and permission for its application should be given forthwith.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Catarrhozone

Cures Permanently

BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, CATARRH

Throw medicine to the dogs. At best they are unpleasant, often useless. You are suffering from some disease of the throat, nose, or lungs. Doctors call it Bronchitis, Asthma, or Catarrh, or it is a slight or severe cold. Germs cause these diseases—they have a common root.

Catarrhozone destroys disease germs, but it does more, it heals disease tissue.

CATARRHOZONE is little drops of healing carried by air to the exact place where Catarrh exists. Observe, Catarrhozone not only destroys the cause, but immediately repairs the result of diseased condition.

Catarrhozone means little drops of healing carried by air and placed over the lungs, throat, and nasal passages.

Catarrhozone is endorsed by doctors, druggists, and by thousands of Canadian people who have used it.

Catarrhozone

Yes, Sir, it is taken in air.

"Little drops of healing" carried by air to weak places in the lungs, throat, and nasal passages.

Three sizes: 25c. 50c, and $1.00, at druggists, or by mail postpaid from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

WASTED AWAY TO A SHADOW

"Fruit-a-tives" saved me after 12 years Suffering

HULL, QUE. Dec. 24th, 1910.

"For the past twelve years, I had painful attacks of Dyspepsia. Finally, in March 1908, I suffered such tortures that I was compelled to stay in bed. I could not digest my food and everything I ate caused the most agonizing pain in my stomach. I also had a fearful attack of Constipation, and at times I had no movement of the bowels for two weeks.

These doctors attended me for two years and gave me all kinds of medicine but did me no good. My weight came down to only 80 pounds and everyone thought I was going to die. Finally I had the good fortune to buy 'Fruit-a-tives' and as soon as I began to take them, I felt better. I persisted in the treatment and to my great joy and to the astonishment of my friends, I improved.

Now I feel very well, weigh 115 pounds (and this is more than I ever weighed, even before my illness) I attribute my cure solely to 'Fruit-a-tives'."

MAY SELL TO HYDRO ELECTRIC

(Montreal Gazette.)

As a result of negotiations, which have been going on for some time and which were continued here to-day, the Electric Power Company, which controls practically all the electric power companies in Central Ontario, is likely to sell out to the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission. The price, it was announced this evening, will probably be settled by arbitration. Mr. Cecil B. Smith, after a conference with Hon. Adam Beck in Toronto on Tuesday, was in Montreal to-day conferring with local interests in the Electric Power Company. Among these is the Sun Life Assurance Company, which, it is understood, is the largest holder of the $4,000,000 bond issue of the company. The negotiations carried on during the day were reported to be favourable to the conclusion of a sale to the Hydro-Electric Commission, with the price to be fixed by arbitration.

The Electric Power Company, incorporated some four years ago with a capital of $4,000,000 and a bond issue of like amount, is the only large distributor of electric power in the area lying between Lindsay on the northwest, Oshawa on the southwest and Napanee on the east. It represents an amalgamation of a number of Trent Valley companies, which have been in the electric power business for some years, and it has a monopoly of electric power distribution in a number of prosperous cities and towns like Oshawa, Bowmanville, Cobourg, Peterborough, Lindsay, Belleville, Trenton, Napanee, Brighton, Campbellford, Colborne and Tweed. Arrangements were under way to extend its operations to Kingston. It has about 16,000 h.p. developed already, about 15,000 in process of development, and could develop up to 66,000. Its rates are low and the districts the company supplies are well satisfied with their service. The company is prosperous and the initiative in the present deal has come from the Hydro-Electric Commission, which desires to extend its field into Central Ontario, where the Electric Power Company is strongly entrenched. It was stated this evening by one of those interested in the company that the company had no desire to sell, but did not wish to stand in the way of the Hydro-Electric Commission's plans of extension. For that reason a friendly arrangement would probably be made for the company to sell its holdings, with the price to be left to arbitration.

Blood Poisoning Results From Digging Out Corns

To really make a corn go away, to remove it for all time, there is just one way. Paint on Putnam's Painless Corn and Wart Extractor, a soothing helpful remedy that separates the corn from the good flesh, lifts it out root and branch—does it quickly and without pain. The name tells the story. Putnam's Painless Corn and Wart Extractor price 25c. Look out for dangerous substitutes for "Putnam's," which is sold by druggists.

CHICKEN JELLY.

Cook a nice chicken in water enough to a little more than cover it, stewing it gently until the meat drops from the bones and the broth is reduced to about a pint; season it to taste with a little salt and pepper; strain and press the juices through a colander, then strain again through a coarse cloth; this will get all the strength of the juices. Set over the fire and cook again a few minutes. Turn it into an earthern vegetable dish, and let harden. If made in hot weather, keep in ice box; if in cold weather, set in a cold place. Eat cold in slices; nice made into sandwiches with thinly sliced and buttered bread. If liked, add the chopped meat of the fowl.

WAS TERRIBLY NERVOUS.

WOULD START AT THE LEAST NOISE.

Wherever there are people who are troubled with deranged nerves they will find that Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will restore the equilibrium of these deranged centres, and bring back the shattered nervous system to a perfect condition.

Miss Emma Read, Lakay, Ont., writes:—"I have great pleasure in writing to tell you about the great benefit I have received by using your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. About a year ago I was very badly run down and could hardly do my work. I tried different medicines but none of them did me any good. I was terribly nervous, and would start at the least noise, and even start in my sleep, which made me very weak. I used two boxes of your pills and I am now well and strong again."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25. For sale at all dealers, or will be mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Edison Phonograph

THE Amberola brings to your home not only all of the extreme pleasure to be derived from all of the very best of every kind of entertainment, but a further pleasure in the possession of an exquisitely designed and beautifully finished piece of furniture that will take its place in your home in harmony with your other precious possessions.

You have your choice of four finishes—Mahogany, Circassian Walnut, Golden Oak and Mission Oak. The Amberola is the only "concealed" horn instrument that is an Edison—Thomas A. Edison's highest development of his own invention, the Edison Phonograph. That means that it is the instrument with exactly the right volume of sound for the home, that has the sapphire reproducing point that does not scratch or wear the records and lasts forever—no changing needles; that it plays both Edison Amberol (four-and-one-half minute) Records and Edison Standard (two-minute) Records as well.

See and hear the Amberola and the many other styles of Edison Phonographs at an Edison dealer's today. Every Edison Phonograph has the definite Edison advantages. And there is an Edison at almost any price you wish to pay.

A Woman's Strategy

(Short Story.)

"Beautiful view of the river from here," said the old gentleman in a pleasant voice. Dick Hammond was startled and blushed with confusion as he looked into the stranger's jovial face, for when you have been occupying a prison cell for three years it is quite a shock to find yourself addressed once more as an ordinary member of society, and it was only an hour since Hammond had left his cell in Sing Sing.

For almost an hour he had noticed this old gentleman, who seemed to follow him, and he had repeatedly tried to shake him off by hurrying his steps, but so far without success. And now he even tried to strike up a conversation.

"I suppose you are going to Tarrytown, too?"

"Yes," said Dick, curtly.

"Well, we might as well walk together, if you do not object."

Dick nodded.

The old gentleman introduced himself as Mr. Judson and said he was in business in New York. He was a very talkative person, apparently.

"I went up to Ossining this morning from my home in Tarrytown, because I expected to get an assistant from the bank there, but this young man did not quite suit me, and, as the weather was so fine and I was too late to go down to business today anyhow, I thought I would walk home."

After a moment's silence he said to Dick, with a pleasant laugh:

"I suppose you are not looking for a job, for if you are, I would make you an offer."

Dick Hammond laughed—the first time in three years.

"Do you know where I come from, Mr. Judson?" he asked. It was the longest sentence he had spoken all the way. "I come direct from Sing Sing, where I have been for three years. Let us talk of something else. We are near Tarrytown, now; perhaps you would rather not be seen in company with a convict."

"Now, don't talk like that, please. If you are willing to take the job in my office I will be glad to see you there to-morrow. The salary is rather small. Only $15 a week to start with, but as you are single, you can manage to get along on that for a while."

When he had been in the office four or five weeks Mr. Judson came out from his private office with some papers.

"Look here, Hammond," he said, "you know I have no stenographer at present, and I should like to have these lists typewritten. There is a public stenographer upstairs, Miss Austin, I think her name is. She has just opened her office and I don't think she has much to do, though she is a smart-looking girl who evidently is determined to succeed. We will give her all the assistance we can."

Two floors above he knocked at a door on which was the sign: "Miss Austin, Public Stenographer."

"Come in," a pleasant voice replied, and Dick opened the door and gave a gasp of surprise.

"Emily! you here!" he cried. "What does this mean?"

"Why, Dick, is it really you? You don't know how glad I am to see you again."

Forgetting everything else, Dick clasped her in his arms and kissed her again and again.

"But now tell me," he said, after a while, "how does this happen? Has your father lost his fortune?"

"Don't ask, Dick," she replied. "I am trying to forget I ever had money."

And Dick, just like a man, thought he guessed what had happened. He asked no more questions. That could wait. As matters stood he could offer her a home and save her from the drudgery of an office. He told her so and she nodded.

"I promised you to wait, Dick," she said, "but I did not think I should have so little to offer you."

"Little," he said. "As if your love were not worth all the millions of Wall Street."

When he left her he felt happier than for years, and of course he told his employer all about it as soon as he was back in the office.

"Now, that is good news, indeed," Mr. Judson exclaimed, "and I want to do my share. From now on your salary is $20 a week, if you promise to marry her before the end of this month."

Two weeks later the young people were quietly married by a justice of the peace. Judson was one of the witnesses, and as they left the office he slipped a $100 bill into Dick's hand and whispered that it was to be used for a wedding trip.

They had been married in the forenoon, and late in the afternoon they were sitting on the rocky shore of Lake Hopatcong, where they were to spend their honeymoon.

Dick was telling her how happy and glad he felt, but Emily looked rather thoughtful, as if she had something in her mind.

"I know you love me, Dick," she began. "Could you forgive me if I had not been quite frank with you?"

"Forgive you?"

"Oh, it is hard to tell you now, but I have not told you the truth. My father has not lost his fortune at all. I am as rich as ever. But let me tell you everything now."

Dick had jumped up and was about to say something.

"It was my idea," she interrupted. "I knew the date you were to be set free and I had long ago arranged everything with papa. You know he always liked you, Dick, and he likes you still. We knew you would never come to us again, so we asked Mr. Judson, who is a friend of father's, to help. He was to watch over you, follow you and offer you a position. Then when we saw you begin to pick up and grow to be a little like your old self, he sent for me to play my part. I never said in so many words that I was poor, Dick."

She rose quickly and looked at her husband, who stood silent and motionless.

"Oh, Dick, dear! Tell me you are not angry," she pleaded. "You don't believe I set a trap for you? I wanted so much to help you to get over it. Dick, tell me you don't hate me, because I love you too much to give you up."

There was a moment's silence, a moment full of suspense and fear to her — then Dick took her into his arms.—Allen Tymbault, in Buffalo Enquirer.

Spare The Rod And Spoil The Child

If Solomon could come back, his wisdom would be welcome in many parts of our official life, but perhaps nowhere more eagerly than in the Board of Education. The idiotic policy of forbidding school principals to inflict corporal punishment under any circumstances could not have been adopted save over his emphatic protest. The fruits of that policy are now seen in the effort to secure the creation of disciplinary schools in this borough and the collection of instances of insult and affront to women teachers by overgrown boys, which is now being made as a lever to get the money for such schools in which to deal with incorrigible boys.

There are some offences against decency for committing which in the street any man is promptly knocked down, or perhaps turned over to the police to be locked up. Precisely those offences are committed by big hulking boys in the public schools in the presence of young women teachers, because the boys know that the principal is forbidden to thrash them, and because under the compulsory education law they are not likely to be turned out of the schools. The thing is enough to make any decent man's blood boil when he hears the facts of even one case, and many a principal has been sorely tempted to punish the offence as it deserved and let the Board of Education deal with him after. If a few principals would do just that and make public the provocation for the thrashing, the rule against corporal punishment might be considerably modified.

This is not a plea for indiscriminate corporal punishment. Probably infirmities of temper are so great that it is wise to forbid class teachers to thrash children with whom they have had trouble, although there are instances in which that form of discipline would be salutary. But there can be no question of temper when a principal is called in after an outbreak to learn the facts and deal with them in his discretion. These particular offences, for which a sound thrashing is not only a proper punishment, but a deterrent from their repetition, are not a question to argue about. That young women teachers in our schools are made to endure them is an outrage upon the teachers and a disgrace to the city. They should be stopped in short order. A disciplinary school may be a remedy, but a disciplinary switch is a much prompter and more effective one, and permission for its application should be given forthwith.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Catarrhozone

Cures Permanently

BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, CATARRH

Throw medicine to the dogs. At best they are unpleasant, often useless. You are suffering from some disease of the throat, nose, or lungs. Doctors call it Bronchitis, Asthma, or Catarrh, or it is a slight or severe cold. Germs cause these diseases—they have a common root.

CATARRHOZONE is little drops of healing carried by air to the exact place where Catarrh exists. Observe, Catarrhozone not only destroys the cause, but immediately repairs the result of diseased condition.

Catarrhozone means little drops of healing carried by air and placed over the lungs, throat, and nasal passages.

Catarrhozone is endorsed by doctors, druggists, and by thousands of Canadian people who have used it.

Catarrhozone

Yes, Sir, it is taken in air.

"Little drops of healing" carried by air to weak places in the lungs, throat, and nasal passages.

Three sizes: 25c. 50c. and $1.00, at druggists, or by mail postpaid from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

WASTED AWAY TO A SHADOW

"Fruit-a-tives" saved me after 12 years Suffering

HULL, QUE. Dec. 24th, 1910.

"For the past twelve years, I had painful attacks of Dyspepsia. Finally, in March 1908, I suffered such tortures that I was compelled to stay in bed. I could not digest my food and everything I ate caused the most agonizing pain in my stomach. I also had a fearful attack of Constipation, and at times I had no movement of the bowels for two weeks.

These doctors stranded me for two years and gave me all kinds of medicine but did me no good. My weight came down to only 85 pounds and everyone thought I was going to die. Finally I had the good fortune to buy 'Fruit-a-tives' and as soon as I began to take them, I felt better. I persisted in the treatment and to my great joy and to the astonishment of my friends, I improved.

Now I feel very well, weigh 115 pounds (and this is more than I ever weighed, even before my illness) I attribute my cure solely to 'Fruit-a-tives'."

MAY SELL TO HYDRO ELECTRIC

(Montreal Gazette.)

As a result of negotiations, which have been going on for some time and which were continued here to-day, the Electric Power Company, which controls practically all the electric power companies in Central Ontario, is likely to sell out to the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission. The price, it was announced this evening, will probably be settled by arbitration. Mr. Cecil B. Smith, after a conference with Hon. Adam Beck in Toronto on Tuesday, was in Montreal to-day conferring with local interests in the Electric Power Company. Among these is the Sun Life Assurance Company, which, it is understood, is the largest holder of the $4,000,000 bond issue of the company. The negotiations carried on during the day were reported to be favourable to the conclusion of a sale to the Hydro-Electric Commission, with the price to be fixed by arbitration.

The Electric Power Company, incorporated some four years ago with a capital of $4,000,000 and a bond issue of like amount, is the only large distributor of electric power in the area lying between Lindsay on the northwest, Oshawa on the southwest, and Napanee on the east. It represents an amalgamation of a number of Trent Valley companies, which have been in the electric power business for some years, and it has a monopoly of electric power distribution in a number of prosperous cities and towns like Oshawa, Bowmanville, Cobourg, Peterborough, Lindsay, Belleville, Trenton, Napanee, Brighton, Campbellford, Colborne and Tweed. Arrangements were under way to extend its operations to Kingston. It has about 16,000 h.p. developed already, about 15,000 in process of development, and could develop up to 66,000. Its rates are low and the districts the company supplies are well satisfied with their service. The company is prosperous and the initiative in the present deal has come from the Hydro-Electric Commission, which desires to extend its field into Central Ontario, where the Electric Power Company is strongly entrenched. It was stated this evening by one of those interested in the company that the company had no desire to sell, but did not wish to stand in the way of the Hydro-Electric Commission's plans of extension. For that reason a friendly arrangement would probably be made for the company to sell its holdings, with the price to be left to arbitration.

Blood Poisoning Results From Digging Out Corns

To really make a corn go away, to remove it for all time, there is just one way. Paint on Putnam's Painless Corn and Wart Extractor, a soothing helpful remedy that separates the corn from the good flesh, lifts it out root and branch—does it quickly and without pain. The name tells the story, Putnam's Painless Corn and Wart Extractor, price 25c. Look out for dangerous substitutes for "Putnam's," which is sold by druggists.

CHICKEN JELLY.

Cook a nice chicken in water enough to a little more than cover it, stewing it gently until the meat drops from the bones and the broth is reduced to about a pint; season it to taste with a little salt and pepper; strain and press the juices through a colander, then strain again through a coarse cloth; this will get all the strength of the juices. Set over the fire and cook again a few minutes. Turn it into an earthern vegetable dish, and let harden. If made in hot weather, keep in ice box; if in cold weather, set in a cold place. Eat cold in slices; nice made into sandwiches with thinly sliced and buttered bread. If liked, add the chopped meat of the fowl.

WAS TERRIBLY NERVOUS.

WOULD START AT THE LEAST NOISE.

Wherever there are people who are troubled with deranged nerves they will find that Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will restore the equilibrium of these deranged centres, and bring back the shattered nervous system to a perfect condition.

Miss Emma Read, Laskay, Ont., writes:—"I have great pleasure in writing to tell you about the great benefit I have received by using your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. About a year ago I was very badly run down and could hardly do my work. I tried different medicines but none of them did me any good. I was terribly nervous, and would start at the least noise, and even start in my sleep, which made me very weak. I used two boxes of your pills and I am now well and strong again."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25. For sale at all dealers, or will be mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE TELL-TALE GLOVE

An Adventure of Peter Crewe—"The Man with the Camera Eyes."

By Harold Carter.

(Copyright, 1911, by W. G. Chapman in the United States and Great Britain.)

The arrival in New York of Sir Moresby Blount was widely chronicled in the newspapers. Sir Moresby was a self-made Englishman, who, starting in life in the humble capacity of an itinerant vegetable vendor, had become, first a merchant prince, then a company promoter, finally a millionaire, having a mansion in Park Lane and interests in a dozen ventures all over the globe. Thousands of poor investors blessed him when his companies declared their annual dividends of twelve and fifteen per cent. In his coronation year the late king had knighted him. And now, immensely prosperous, pompous and self-sufficient, Sir Moresby had come to America "to hinterest meself in the development of your magnificent but unprogressive west," as he phrased it to the reporters who met him when the ship docked in New York harbor.

Mining ventures were the cause of Sir Moresby's visit to America. He purposed to develop "all the mineral resources of Harizona, including bismuth, copper, and hantimony." If Sir Moresby's h's were a trifle superfluous, his pocketbook was evidently in the right place. He was condescendingly affable to his visitors, and, after registering at the New Hague hotel, announced his intention of "doing" the town alone, in order to rediscover America.

His little, rat-like English secretary, who had accompanied him, afterward conducted the reporters to the magnificent offices in a Fifth avenue building, which had just been opened to accommodate the American branch of Sir Moresby's business, and where two dozen recently employed clerks were busily opening letters and filing applications for shares along the sides of the new mahogany table.

It was with astonishment, therefore, that, on opening my morning paper on the day after the millionaire's arrival, I saw, in great, black headlines, the announcement of his death.

He had gone out alone, to "rediscover America" on the preceding evening, and, when he did not return shortly before midnight, his secretary became alarmed and telephoned the police. Within two hours his body was brought into the morgue, dripping wet from the cold waters of the East river. The skull was fractured and the face beaten almost out of all recognition; but the clothes identified the man beyond all doubt. Sir Moresby had evidently been struck down from behind while prowling in the unsavory purlieus of the East side, robbed of money, watch and chain and jewelry, and flung into the stream, which washed him ashore opportunely in the vicinity of the police patrol station.

Hardly had I laid down the paper when there came a ring at my telephone. I took the receiver off the hook and heard the agitated voice of the general manager of the Salamander Life Insurance company, for which I acted as lawyer.

"Langton," he called, "have you seen the account of the murder of Sir Moresby Blount?"

"Yes," I called back. "What of it?"

"What of it? My God, Langton, he insured last month with our English branch for two hundred and fifty thousand dollars."

Ten minutes later the manager was in my office and urging me to look into the matter. There might be some mistake, he said. It might be suicide, in which case the policy would be invalidated. There might be some flaw in the policy, or the premiums might have lapsed. They had cabled to their English branch; meanwhile would I proceed to the New Hague hotel and see the dead man's secretary?

I summoned Peter Crewe over the telephone. If there were any mystery, Crewe could clear it up. With his wonderful optical powers, which had already helped me in solving many a mystery, I knew that I could have chosen no better confidant.

I met him by appointment at the door of his hotel. Crewe, however, was not disposed to see any prospect of helping the company.

"It looks like a clear case of murder, Langton," he said, "and between you and me I do not want to help them evade their responsibilities."

"But you'll come with me?" I urged.

"Gladly," said Crewe. "And if there is any legitimate way in which I can serve your interests you may count on me."

At the entrance to the New Hague hotel we ran into the little secretary, Randall, whom I recognized from his photograph, which had been published in the newspapers. I had expected that he would not be over-zealous in assisting me, but to my surprise he placed himself at my service in the most cordial manner.

"I have to go back to the morgue," he said, "and you had better come along with me. There is, I am sorry to say, no doubt but that the body is that of Sir Moresby. Even if I could not swear to the features—which I am prepared to—the clothes would prove the identity beyond all possibility of doubt."

It was no pleasant sight to see the millionaire, lately so self-sufficient, now compressed into that "narrow measure of a man." Crewe, standing beside me, looked hard upon the battered features. Then, reverently, but with a certain incongruity of action which surprised me, even at the time, he took one of the dead man's hands in his, turned it palm upward, and passed his own hands lightly and caressingly across it.

"You are satisfied as to the identity, Mr. Langton?" asked Randall, the secretary.

"I see no reason to doubt it," I answered. "I can assure you that the Salamander Life Insurance company is not likely to withhold payment upon the ground that proof of death is missing. The evidence of identity appears conclusive, and after the compliance with a few formalities the money will be turned over to the executors. And now, if your lawyer is at hand, I should like to go through the form of inspecting the dead man's papers."

"Of course, of course," said Randall, a little nervously, as I thought. "We can do no more good here; let us return to the New Hague hotel."

My purpose was merely to discover whether the dead man had paid his premiums regularly; the remainder of his affairs did not concern me. I found the insurance papers in good order, and that the policy had been made out "to estate." Randall, as the executor, would, therefore, receive the $250,000.

"Did Sir Moresby have a photograph?" asked Crewe, as we sat in the millionaire's rooms and looked through his belongings.

"He did not bring any to this country," said Randall. "But, of course, there are the newspaper snapshots," he added, "if you want one."

While we talked I perceived that Crewe was wandering, a little restlessly, around the room. Once or twice he halted and seemed to be inspecting some of the personal belongings of Sir Moresby closely. Upon a small table lay an old pair of gloves of thin kid, and unlined. What was my astonishment to see Crewe slip one of these into his pocket while Randall's back was turned.

There seemed no more to be done. I went away and reported to the general manager of the Salamander that payment ought to be made, subject to the two weeks of delay that the policy provided for. There seemed to be no mystery in the case at all.

I was therefore considerably surprised when Crewe telephoned me that afternoon to come over at once, but first to telephone the Salamander people to postpone payment for a couple of weeks. As this was to be done in any event I did not find it necessary to take up the subject with the general manager again, but went straight to Crewe's apartments, which were situated in a modest block upon Twenty-second street. I found him at the door, his hands dripping with purple dye.

"What on earth have you been doing?" I asked.

Then I perceived that a great bowl of the dye stood in the center of his table, in which floated Sir Moresby's glove, turned inside out and of an intense purple hue.

"Langton," he said, "we must have Randall watched ceaselessly until the moment of his departure for Arizona."

"How do you know he is going to Arizona?" I asked.

"Because Sir Moresby cannot go now," said Crewe;—the jest appeared a little out of place to me. "Can you have your company make out a check to him for the full amount and immediately telephone to the bank suspending payment?"

"It could be done," I said. "But unless there were urgent reason for such a course of action it would lead to most unpleasant complications."

"Nevertheless it is the only way," said Crewe. "Randall will loaf around New York until he gets the money. He won't disclose his hand until the ultimate moment. All our detective work must be done in the interval between the reception of the check and the presentation of it for payment. He will not wait an unnecessary moment after the check has been received."

"Do you mean to suggest that he murdered Sir Moresby for the insurance?" I queried.

"In a way—yes," said Crewe. "We must have detectives upon his trail every moment henceforward."

"The police—"

"Emphatically not," said Crewe. "A private agency, who will not be tempted to play up the sensational possibilities and will know enough to keep their mouths shut. It is essential that Randall shall suspect nothing. And I think that, on the day of payment, we shall arrest the gang of conspirators."

That was all I could get him to say. That same evening a couple of detectives were placed upon Randall's trail, with instructions to shadow him wherever he went. Meanwhile I arranged with the Salamander company to pay the check upon the fourteenth day, and immediately suspend payment.

"He will not get into touch with his confederates until the check has been actually received," said Crewe. "Nevertheless, if there is anything to be learned, it will be as well to have him shadowed."

But as we expected, nothing came of the shadowing. Randall attended the funeral of the dead man on the third day afterward, attired in deepest black and wearing an air of intense dejection. He gave up his apartments at the New Hague hotel and took cheaper lodging further up-town. Promptly every day at eleven he entered the gorgeous new suite of offices, where the clerks worked at the mahogany tables. The death of the millionaire had apparently not affected public confidence in the Arizona development scheme, for advertisements in heavy type continued to appear in the newspapers and subscriptions flowed in.

Upon the fourteenth day it was my duty to appear at the offices in person with the check for the insurance money, which I duly paid over to Randall. There was a furtive look in his eyes when he received it. Signing the receipt, he ushered me out of the place with affected bonhomie; then, turning as I waited for the elevator, I saw him catch his overcoat nervously from the hook on which it hung, and I knew, by some instinctive process of thought, that it was his intention never again to enter the sumptuous offices. A sudden conviction came over me that the whole affair was a gigantic fraud; that the Salamander had been victimized by a set of unscrupulous swindlers who had not hesitated at murder to achieve their ends; Randall, the head and front of the conspiracy, was yet only a pliant tool in their hands.

By prearrangement Crewe was to have been waiting for me at the foot of the elevator. It was a large building, containing some dozen floors, all packed with offices; beneath, three telephone girls were busy at their boards, while a number of small telephone booths accommodated those who wished to communicate with other parts of the town.

In place of Crewe I found awaiting me an inspector of the telephone company, wearing the distinctive hat of his office. I gazed at him; something about his appearance seemed familiar; suddenly I perceived that this was Crewe, but he had shaved off his mustache and his whole facial appearance seemed to be changed. He saw my recognition of him and gave me the slightest look of warning.

Crewe advanced toward the telephone boards and planted himself between two of the girls.

"You have a call from 867 Sixth avenue," he said. This was Randall's office number.

"For 3214 Harlem," one of the girls responded.

"Get me the street and number immediately," said Crewe. "Get into the booth," he continued to me in a whisper.

I had hardly slipped into the booth nearest me before I saw Randall step out of the elevator and, after glancing secretively around in order to make sure that he was not followed, hurry out into the street.

"I'm trying to get Central, sir," said the girl to Crewe.

"Hurry them up," said Crewe. A moment later Central responded.

"The number is 246 Willcox avenue," said the girl.

Without a word Crewe hurried into the street, where I joined him. He hailed a taxicab and we leaped in. Crewe gave the address that the girl had mentioned.

"Now, Langton," he said, as we leaned back, "the question is whether Randall will present that check for payment first or whether, as is more probable, he will go straight to his confederates. Undoubtedly all their plans are laid for a quick get-away. If he should go first to the bank we shall still be in time to apprehend the others, and undoubtedly we can summon Randall to meet us by extracting from them the password, or whatever sign they have agreed upon."

He called to the driver to make more speed and we drove through the slush, sending it flying in a muddy cloud on either side of us. Soon we had left the business section behind us and were speeding up Lexington avenue. The park appeared; we passed it and approached the Harlem district.

"You are armed?" I asked.

Crewe shook his head. "It will not be necessary," he answered. "When I spoke of confederates, Langton, I should have used the singular. As a matter of fact, Randall has only one confederate, an elderly man, and somewhat infirm. The shock of our appearance will be sufficient to disarm the pair of them."

At last we turned into Willcox avenue. No. 246 was a small tobacconist's shop, with a pool room at the back, in which a number of ill-favored persons were playing upon a half-dozen dirty tables. Crewe looked around him in some dismay.

"He's trickier than I thought," he said. "This place is only a way-station."

"Want a game, gentlemen?" asked the proprietor, coming forward with an ill-smelling cigar between his lips.

"I want a word with you," said Crewe, pulling him to one side. He looked through into the pool room; all the players were engaged and it seemed unlikely that we would be disturbed for a few minutes at least. Crewe took the fellow by the lapel of the coat.

"Did you convey that message to the old gentleman?" he asked.

The fellow started, but instantly regained his composure.

"What old gentleman?" he asked.

"None of that," said Crewe. "Things have gone wrong. Our friend cannot be here. Is everything packed?"

The man hesitated and looked around shiftily.

"I can't talk to you until Mr. Somers arrives," he said.

"Mr. Somers will not arrive," cried Crewe in exasperation. "Do you want to queer the whole game? Will you give him a telephone message from me?"

"What is it?" demanded the fellow, sourly.

"Tell him to take a taxi and meet us at the Grand Central, in the smoking room. Mr. Somers will be there. Stop! I must use your telephone a moment."

He went to the instrument and made as if to take down the receiver; then checked himself.

"See here, Mister," said the fellow, "I don't know you and I've got my orders strict. Now, if I send your message, will you step outside the store so that you won't overhear the number?"

"That sounds good enough," said Crewe. He took me by the arm and we went out of the shop, the proprietor watching us suspiciously until we had stepped across the threshold.

"Now, Langton," said Crewe, "he will undoubtedly call up the confederate, if only to voice suspicion of us. Quick! In here."

He thrust me into a store three numbers away, outside which was the sign, "Local and Long Distance Telephone." He hurried to the instrument and took down the receiver.

"Hello! Hello!" he called. "This is for police headquarters. A call has just been taken from 3214 Harlem. I want the number."

He waited one moment until the answer came, then seized me by the arm.

"We shall be just in time," he said. "It is a furnished room house on One Hundred and Fifty-third street."

It was only twelve blocks distant and a short turn around the block. We were panting and breathless when we arrived at a dingy house, with a sign, "Furnished Rooms," in a dirty window behind which bloomed a faded rubber plant.

"Have you any rooms?" asked Crewe. "My friend and I are transients; we want a good-sized apartment for a few days. The cost will not be material."

The woman wiped her hands upon a dirty apron and looked at us suspiciously.

"I'll have the front parlor on the second floor vacant this afternoon," she said. "If you'd step up maybe the gentleman would let you see it."

She turned and we prepared to follow her, when suddenly a taxicab stopped in front of the house and a man dashed out at full speed and was up the stairs with a bound. He was breathing heavily and his face was ashen gray as he espied us. We recognized him immediately, in spite of a pair of heavy spectacles and a newly shaven upper lip. It was Randall, the English secretary.

"Don't let them in," he shrieked, and precipitated himself upon us with such fury that we all three fell to the floor while the landlady screamed and waved her arms over us in a strange sort of benediction.

"It's no use, Randall," said Crewe. "The game's up. Better come upstairs quietly."

"Take that, curse you," screamed the secretary, and snapped a revolver in his face. By some miracle the ball failed to reach its destination; it buried itself in the woodwork of the door. Next moment we had disarmed and trussed the man. He confronted us malignantly, his face like putty, the breath hooting from between his lips.

"Come, Randall," said Crewe quietly, "it might be far worse than it is, you know. It might be murder."

"I wish to God it were," snapped the Englishman, vindictively.

"Now suppose you go ahead and we will follow you," said Crewe, pressing the revolver into the small of Randall's back. "Now, madam, will you kindly give your lungs a breathing space? It's no use calling 'police,' for we represent the central office."

"Silly old fool. I told him to keep his eyes peeled," he muttered. "Walk in, gentlemen," he continued, standing aside.

"After you," said Crewe, pushing him into the room. We followed into a plainly furnished apartment, containing a large bed, three chairs and a writing table. Several pieces of English baggage were upon the floor, packed ready for departure, and seated at the window, looking toward us with a heavy face of mingled fear and doubt, was an elderly gentleman whose expression seemed familiar to me, though I could not recall where I had seen him before.

Crewe stepped forward with a laugh and took the heavy face between his hands. Next moment he stepped back. In either hand was a false, blue-black whisker, which he had peeled from the skin.

"Langton," he said, mockingly, "allow me to present to you our esteemed friend, Sir Moresby Blount."

The expression upon the financier's face was comical to witness. All his dignity had deserted him, and he leaned back in the chair, breathing stertoriously, apparently in acute and craven fear.

"We nearly missed you, Randall," said Crewe, turning to the secretary. "Tell me one thing. Have you presented the check for payment?"

"No," Randall growled. "That was to have been the last thing done."

"I thought so," answered Crewe. "Payment has been stopped. You would have been arrested at the bank. We had you either way."

"Well what are you going to do?" asked Randall, biting his lips nervously.

The answer was supplied by the unceremonious bursting open of the door. A couple of policemen stood upon the threshold and, behind them, peering over their shoulders alternately, was the face of the landlady.

The trial of Blount and Randall was, of course, one of the causes celebres of the year. Having recovered the amount of its insurance the Salamander company decided not to put itself to the expense of a prosecution, since in any event the first claim upon the prisoners would have been that of the federal government. The Arizona development scheme proved to be a gigantic swindle. Blount was placed upon trial and sentenced to serve seven years in the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., while Randall, his tool, escaped with a sentence of three years.

It was disclosed at the trial that Blount had been implicated in a similar series of shady transactions in England. The crash of the Arizona scheme was followed by the collapse of seven of his banks in London and the provinces. If the English government presses for his extradition when he is set free by the American government, doubtless a further sentence will befall him.

It appears that, rendered desperate by the impending crash of his fortunes, Blount had conceived the desperate scheme of feigning death, in order to obtain the insurance money and start life anew in some other corner of the globe. The plan had been laid skilfully; the journey to America, where there was none to identify him positively, was a plot of genius. By arrangement a body had been removed from an undertaker's, mutilated and dressed in the financier's clothes, while he went into hiding until the Salamander company should pay the insurance.

"But what gave you the idea that he was alive?" I asked of Crewe. "How could you discover that the body was not that of Sir Moresby, when the features were mutilated?"

Crewe smiled. "It is so simple that I really hate to give the trick away," he said. "Perhaps you recollect the stained glove in my apartment?"

"Yes, and I wondered what on earth your object could be in dyeing it purple."

"The purple was a simple coal tar dye, used extensively for hardening and bringing out the salient forms of microscopic subjects," Crewe answered. "I knew the moment I had it in my hands that the body at the morgue could not be Sir Moresby's. The ridges on the thumbs and fingers were what are technically known as 'whorls.' The ridges on Sir Moresby's fingers, on the other hand, were elliptical. They had been well impriated into the soft kid and it was necessary only to turn the glove inside out and dye it in order to bring them out in marked detail."

BETRAYED BY A BABY'S CRY

Eavesdropping Woman On the Party Telephone Line Got a "Hot Shot" From Her Neighbor.

The telephone, be it affirmed unanimously, is a great institution. It becomes a greater institution when the wires are crossed and a man's wife hears him talking to "that blondined old cat." The possibilities of the telephone become more complicated when a party line is used.

Mrs. Blank has a party line. She and Mrs. Dash were talking and their conversation was not intended for other ears. There was nothing compromising, it may be parenthetically said, but as women on rare occasions do, they were gossiping about other women.

In the midst of the conversation the cry of a baby was conveyed simultaneously to the ears of Mrs. Blank and Mrs. Dash.

"Why, I didn't know you have a baby," exclaimed Mrs. Blank.

"And I didn't know you have one," said Mrs. Dash.

"I haven't."

"Neither have I."

"I see!" said Mrs. Blank, as a great light dawned. "Mrs. Skeeswee is on the same line I have, and she has a baby. But I'm sure she is not low down enough to eavesdrop."

The soft clink of a telephone receiver being hung up if with great care was heard.

"I know that nosey old hag has been listening to us," appended Mrs. Blank, "but I guess that shot will hold her for a while."—Louisville Times.

INCIDENT OF EASTER MORN

Little Happening, the Moral of Which is Fine Feathers Don't Make Fine Birds.

It was Easter morning, and although the air was crisp and cold, Fifth avenue was filled with its usual Easter crowd—women strutting along like peacocks, anxious that all might see their hats, their gowns; and men—martyrs to woman's pride and vanity. Each was conscious that their tailor and tailoress had done their duty well, that money—their money—is a power, and so it is—a power for good or evil.

An old, wrinkled, poorly-dressed woman, in an effort to pass through this crowd of Easter show birds, was jostled and pushed, and a basket of coal and pieces of wood she had been gathering was overturned and its contents scattered over the sidewalk.

Slowly, painfully she stooped and tried to gather up her coal and kindling while the gaily bedecked throng, never noticing her, passed on.

A big, husky workman saw the old lady and instantly began to assist her. After they had got all her coal and wood in the basket, the old lady, with tears in her eyes, said, "Thank you, sir." "It was no trouble, ma'am," he replied, "no trouble at all," and went on his way.

It was only a little thing. One small incident in the life of the big city with its "idle rich," but the moral is there.

"Fine feathers don't make fine birds."

But He Meant Well.

Drawing room manners do not necessarily imply a knowledge of elevator etiquette as laid down by the operator.

"There goes a man whose breeding came out in the wash even if it did look to be fast colors," he said. "Because there were ladies in the car he took off his hat, but he didn't know what to do with it after he got it off. He held it bottom side up as if about to take up a collection. If a man does not know that is not the way to hold the hat he might just about as well keep it on his head."

Magpie a Thieves' Accomplice.

Six thieves and a magpie have been run in by the Paris police. The bird, true to its instinct, was an active member of the gang. It did not purloin on its own account but its help was invaluable. The six thieves, all under sixteen, chose a sufficiently simple-minded tradesman, and entered his shop. The bird was perched on the wrist of one of the boys, and did tricks, bowed, danced, and chattered. The ingenuous shopkeeper was amused. Suddenly the magpie flew up and perched near the ceiling, out of reach. The boys and the shopkeeper started hunting for the bird—not all the boys, however, for one of them stopped behind, near the till, and emptied it. A whistle called the bird down, and bird and boys were off with their booty. The game seems to have succeeded upon only one trusting tradesman before the gang, including the magpie was captured.

Only one per cent. of the cablegrams sent over seas are concerned with family or private matters. The rest are commercial, journalistic or official.

Very Taking Platform.

Governor Dix, at a dinner in the Hotel Manhattan in New York, said of politics:

"Sneering at politics, the Gonsearts once said that no party could ever lose office if it gave the people free fireworks every night and free vaudeville every day.

"But I heard of a candidate in the south who went the Gonsearts one better.

"'Fellow citizens,' he shouted from the stump, 'my platform is just this: First, no pay for any elected candidate. Second, pensions for all voters.'"

KIT'S COLUMN

One would have thought that everybody knew the old fashioned rule for finding Leap Year, yet three or four readers write asking for information on this point. Divide the Annus Domini by 4, and when there is no remainder it is leap year. There is also the exception which proves the rule since the year 1900, for instance, was thus divisible yet it was not leap year. The explanation would entail certain abstruse calculations which the average reader might find dull, but a brief one is in order. The general rule concerning leap year is applied on twenty-four occasions in every century. While the method of computing it was not abolished, an exception was created in the case of every 100th year which was not to be so reckoned. This exception, however, only applies to three centuries in succession, the fourth still retaining its February of 29 days. The 19th century, for instance, contained twenty-four leap years in virtue of the rule. Nineteen hundred was not a leap year by reason of the exception, which also applied to the years 1700 and 1800, neither of which was a leap year. But by the operation of the counter exception referred to, the year 2000 will be a leap year. It seems, indeed, impossible to discuss any aspect of leap year without some reference to figures. Even in the amusing little comedy originally enacted by St. Bridget and St. Patrick in Ireland, St. Bridget makes some play upon figures in her argument with the patron saint of the Emerald Isle, nor could Patrick escape from their appeal. Far be it from me to suggest that St. Bridget was popping the question or even hinting at anything so indelicate; suffice it that the comedy of other days would not bear revival in these times of the problem play and decadent novel, when we would dismiss broad humour as "coarse" while hugging to our aesthetic souls much rottenness clothed in the guise of art—and under that poor abused title "artistic."

But we have little concern with that far era, the year 2000, when leap year will catch an elusive century in its grip, and when, no doubt, women will do both the proposing and the voting, unless, indeed, we are of the persuasion which assures for each of us rebirth into this world. I should like to return if only to see how far Canada has progressed. Also, probably with a liking to enjoy the privileges which will undoubtedly accrue to the women of that time. It might be one's unfortunate metier to play a man's role in a re-incarnation just when women are enjoying all the power, and one would have to go through hours of patient waiting at the church, or the terrible task of refusing some dear girl or other.

"'Tis a topsy turvy world, anyway," sings the old song, yet long acquaintance has made one fond of it, likewise a chequered career which has known its hours of grief and disappointment as well as of danger and adventure, but never a dull one.

We cannot ask more of life than to have known it in a supreme hour, to have tasted in it, immortal moments; to have seen the Vision.

We spoke of the Soothsayers the other day, but like birds in the spring of the year, new prophets are burgeoning. Years ending in 12 have been prolific in wars. We have seen Madame de Thebes forecast and the breath of battle fumes through it. But no particular war is stated. All is ambiguous. There is little danger of war in Europe while Franz Josef lives, in my opinion. The old Emperor of Austria holds the key of peace. When he dies unrest will come. However, nothing will do Madame but wreck, war and the ruin of Paris. The prophets differ. Raphael predicts death among the financial magnates of the United States, notably the greatest of all, scandals in high places, and a narrow escape for the president. Likewise the usual accidents by land and sea, and earthquakes in far places. His best word is for the working people in whose condition he sees much improvement.

Orion is strong on fires and explosions and cold snaps. Also on strikes and financial panic. Old Moore is weird as usual. He intimates that Mormonism will be re-christened, and "concubinage Solomonism" become a confirmed habit. Could this be termed a libel on Solomon? Zadkiel threatens with misfortunes many or few, the kaiser, the czar and Alfonso of Spain. Ireland will be in the thick of any fight that is going, as usual. The pope will get through another year anyway, and the kaiser, whose death was predicted in 1911, will hold his own. Ottawa had better look out. She will be visited by sickness, blindness—let us hope not political, and hysteria (likewise let us pray not political). Canada on the whole will do well (saving a financial panic towards the end of the year). Members of parliament are liable to catch severe colds, but with care the poor things may recover. Heavy birth mortality is predicted. I have the predictions for 1911 by me. Not one of the cases predicted the failure of reciprocity or the fall of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Not one of the cases gives out the faintest tip on the U.S. presidential elections. Old Moore predicts the deaths of a merchant king and a noble philanthropist, but as these prophecies refer to Britishers and their affairs, the great donator of libraries for the working man may consider himself safe for another year. Women, judges, clerks and writers are warned that death will be busy among them. Football is safe over here. But in England "a club will be much upset by a player coming to grief and affecting the chance of getting into the final." This, old Moore says, will occur in this month.

Well, accidents will happen even in the best regulated years, and it will be all the same to you and me in a century.

The Maharaja Gaekwar of Baroda has been the subject of many paragraphs at home and abroad since his abrupt court manners at the Durbar were made public. Somehow one suspects that in spite of his ample apology the Gaekwar had his tongue in his cheek that day he turned his back on his emperor and empress. In his book The West in the East, Price Collier gives a portrait of this prince's character which plainly shows his leanings to be anti-British and pro-American. He may have assumed that attitude for the benefit of the American, which Mr. Collier frankly admits, but it has long been known that the Gaekwar has no love for the British or their institutions. Like all the semi-independent Indian princes he is a difficult man to manage. He avers, and professes to believe, that the unsympathetic attitude of England in her dealings with India is the cause of the strained relations between the two—that is, allowing that they are strained. He was more contented under the rule of the late viceroy, Lord Minto (who came nearer to understanding the Indian situation than any English minister) — than under any other, and his fellow-countrymen, it is claimed, understand very well that the publib apology means little or nothing. One of the Gaekwar's greatest grievances is said to be this: that the Indian cannot travel freely in the English colonies under the English flag, that flag which, as Mrs. Annie Besant says in her recent book of lectures, "that he is asked to be proud of, and to shed his blood to defend." In plain words, any other Oriental save the Indian may journey freely in Canada. "A Japanese," I quote Mrs. Besant, "can go into British Columbia if he has fifty dollars in his pocket, but if one of the citizens of this great empire, an Indian, goes there, 200 dollars he must produce before he is allowed to come in."

This may be news to some of us. It opens up the question of how much the colonies can do to weld the empire more solidly together, for the Indian gives but little thought to the fact of self-government in the colonies. He looks across the seas to England. What comes in actually from the colonies, or what they withhold, he recognises as coming from or being withheld by England. A very great and serious question of the hour might be; Is self-government in the British colonies undermining the empire in India? To a proud prince such as the Maharaja Gaekwar of Baroda, a man who has travelled everywhere, who is highly educated and intelligent, and who has so far absorbed western ways as to be cited as co-respondent the other day in a London divorce case, it must be galling to remember that he must produce—like the Japanese who seeks employment in our country—a certain sum of money before he can travel through a land over which waves the flag he had been taught to serve and honour.

An organisation in which all Canadians—especially automobile makers and owners — should be interested is the Canadian Highway association, a society whose object it will be to promote and encourage the establishment of a continuous first class trunk highway, from Alberni, B.C., to Halifax, N.S., and to promote and organize Good Road clubs in all Canadian cities and towns. The membership is open to such automobile and commercial clubs as may seek to join, pledging definite assistance in the promotion of the Canadian Highway plan, as it is to individuals who wish to join under like conditions. Clubs and individuals seeking admission to this organization got up in such a worthy cause, are invited to make application in writing to the secretary, P. W. Luce, 614 Columbia street, New Westminster, B.C. The cause is a big one and the fees are trifling, the annual dues for clubs and associations being but one dollar per member, and for individual members two dollars. The department of public work is deeply interested; and plans for a Canadian Highway are already in course of construction. The association is national in its scope, and branches will be established in every part of the Dominion. We have a long line of Canadian clubs which no doubt will be the first to affiliate with this Highway association, since everywhere the Canadian club is recognised as a powerful force in the betterment of all things pertaining to our Dominion. Think what it would mean for Canada to have a national highway of her own. In his speech from the throne at the opening of the Canadian parliament last November, our royal governor-general spoke of the pressing need of good roads thus:

"The importance of providing our country with better highways is manifest. A bill will be introduced for the purpose of enabling the Dominion to co-operate with the provinces in the accomplishment of this desirable object."

As yet, we do not know the full enjoyment of automobile riding in this country. You who have motored over British roads in England, Scotland and Ireland, will remember the perfect joy of such travelling. May we soon have in our own splendid Canada, highways equal to the level, smooth roads over which some of us have toured in Devon and Cornwall and by crag and castle in the land of the leek.

Alas for the fairy story! "A mother" writes to me that the children did not care for them at Christmas. Poor little children, I am sorry for them. There is no doubt that the modern child fights shy of the fairy tale. They were written—at least the best of them were—before there was any such thing as electric light. The automobile was another nasty jar, and the aeroplane has broken Fairyland into fragments. The genii are not the men they were, and the giants have not left even their bones. An aeroplane can beat Queen Mab wings and all. And to finish it a prophet has arisen—though why a prophet? to declare that Cinderella's slippers were not made of glass after all, but of some soft material called in French "vair," which the original translator, owing to not being as well up in his languages as he ought to have been—mistook for "verre," and so translated it "glass." And who would ride in a glass coach drawn by mice—forsooth! when she could rush by in a glass motor or glide in an airship. Alas! "We are old, Father William, we are old."

I have just read of the death of the eldest son of Charles Dickens in New York. (These columns go to press nearly two weeks in advance of publication). Like his gifted father death called him suddenly. It seems hard indeed that he should die in this year of his father's centenary, and harder still to know that a New York banker and New York men are originators of a fund to relieve the condition of destitute heirs of Charles Dickens, a man whose good work in this world has made a better place of it, and whose influence for good, far from having departed with him, has increased yearly year by year and will increase. It would have seemed but fitting that England would look after the descendants of her glorious son, if only in view of the fact that British copyright laws are the cause of this poverty. Publishers have grown rich on the works of Dickens, who himself never realized a quarter their value on his works. It hurts ones pride as a Britisher that Americans with big hearted generosity should willingly undertake what we should have lovingly done. The Dickens stamp movement fell flat in this country, and was not too well taken up in England. The government has offered a pension of two dollars and fifty cents weekly to the dependent Dickens ladies. And now Dickens' eldest son lies dead in New York with not a friend near him save his secretary, and New Yorkers are getting up a fund probably with the idea of helping out the funeral expenses.

What are our Dickens' Fellowships doing? Are we going to take a thing like this lying down?

Ah—Wake up England, and take care of your people—your great authors, your poets, who frequently have starved to death, and the soldiers—so often left to beg—that have died for your flag. Are we to let the memory of Dickens go begging for recognition in a foreign land! It makes the cheek hot.

Multi-Millionaires

WASHINGTON, JAN. 11—There are fifty-one multi-millionaires in the United States, who own one-thirty-fifth of the entire wealth of the nation, and who couldn't have come by it honestly, according to Jeff Davis of Arkansas, in a speech in the Senate to-day. The fifty-one, with four thousand other small fry millionaires, own 87 per cent. of the nation's wealth, the Senator said.

Included in Davis' list were:

John D. Rockefeller	$400,000,000
Andrew Carnegie	300,000,000
W. W. Astor	300,000,0000
J. Pierpont Morgan	150,000,000
William Rockefeller	100,000,000
W. K. Vanderbilt	100,000,000
Mrs. Hetty Green	40,000,000
Mrs. W. Walker	35,000,000
H. C. Frick	80,000,000
D. O. Mills	80,000,000
Marshall Field, Jr.	75,000,000
Henry M. Flagler	75,000,000
J. J. Hill	60,000,000
J. D. Archbold	60,000,000
Oliver Payne	60,000,000
J. B. Haggins	50,000,000
James Henry Smith	50,000,000
Henry Phipps	50,000,000
Alfred G. Vanderbilt	40,000,000
George Gould	40,000,000
J. Ogden Armour	40,000,000
E. T. Gerry	40,000,000
Robert W. Goelet	40,000,000
J. H. Flagler	40,000,000
Claus Spreckles	40,000,000

Members of the list of fifty-one who died recently, but whose names were included because of the values of their estates, were: H. H. Rogers, Russell Sage, Henry O. Havemeyer and John W. Gates.

SEEN AND HEARD

TO KNOX HIMSELF.

A clever young woman who is a member of the Washington staff of a Cleveland paper had occasion to call on Mrs. Knox the other day on a matter of important news. Mrs. Knox was not at home, the man servant who answered the bell informed the journalists.

"Well, hasn't she a secretary, who can give me the information I am after?" persisted the newspaper woman.

"Certainly, madam," answered the footman, "this way please." Leading the way along the hall, he ushered her into the presence of a very important looking person.

"Are you Mrs. Knox's secretary?" asked the newspaper girl.

The man laughed. "I guess I am," he admitted. "I'm her husband, and I'm the Secretary of State. What can I do for you?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

KNEW THEM.

She inquired gushingly, "Oh, Colonel, don't you love Longfellow's poems?"

"Can't say I do," he replied. "Never read them, in fact. Consider all poetry absolute drivel."

"But," she persisted, "surely you cannot help admiring this verse of his out of 'The Day Is Done,' you know: 'And all the night shall be filled with music, and the cares which infest the day shall fold their tents like the Arabs and as silently steal away.'"

"By Jove!" he exclaimed, "there is something in that. I know those Arab beggars — they would simply steal anything."—Tit-Bits.

HORSE LAUGHS.

He was a raw recruit, just enrolled in a crack cavalry regiment and paying his first visit to the riding school.

"'Ere's yer horse," said the instructor.

"What's it got this strap around it for?" he asked, pointing to the girth.

"Well," explained the instructor, solemnly, "you see, all our horses 'ave a keen sense of humour, an' as they sometimes 'ave sudden fits of laughter when they see the recruits, we put bands round 'em to keep 'em from burstin' their sides!"—Tit-Bits.

JUMBLES.

Cream together half a cup of butter and one cup of sugar, and add one well-beaten egg and a tablespoonful of sweet milk; mix enough powdered cinnamon and nutmeg to half fill a teaspoon and grate as much yellow rind of lemon as you have of the spices; mix into the latter and then add a scant teaspoonful of baking powder, sifted with a cup and a half of flour; roll thin, using as much more flour as is needed, cut in strips, fold into circles and roll each piece in powdered sugar; bake in a hot oven to a delicate brown.

THOUGHT COLD WOULD TURN INTO CONSUMPTION

LEFT LUNG GOT VERY SORE, HEART DID NOT FEEL ANY TOO GOOD.

Mr. Robert McLarnon, Shawville, Que., writes:—"I am writing to tell you an experience I had with a bad cold and a bottle of your valuable medicine. I was up in the lumber camps teaming horses, and I caught a very bad cold. I thought it was going to turn into consumption, for my left lung got very sore and my heart did not feel any too good. I came home and tried some different remedies but they did me no good. A friend told me about Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so I tried it, and when I had taken two bottles my cold was gone. I think it is a great remedy, and will advise any one with a cold to use it. I can't praise it enough."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup contains all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree, which combined with Wild Cherry bark and other pectoral remedies, makes it one of the greatest known preparations for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, and all Throat and Lung Troubles.

Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

REPORT OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE ANNUAL MEETING OF SHAREHOLDERS

Tuesday, 9th January, 1912

The Forty-Fifth Annual Meeting of the Shareholders of The Canadian Bank of Commerce was held in the Banking House on Tuesday, 9th January, 1912, at 12 o'clock.

A great many Shareholders and others were present.

The President, Sir Edmund Walker, having taken the chair, Mr. A. St. L. Trenge was appointed to act as Secretary, and Messrs Edward Cronyn and H. L. Watt were appointed Scrutineers.

The President called upon the Secretary to read the Annual Report of the Directors, as follows:—

REPORT.

The Directors beg to present to the Shareholders the forty-fifth Annual Report, covering the year ending 30th November, 1911, together with the usual statement of Assets and Liabilities. The balance at credit of Profit and Loss Account brought forward from last year, was .. $ 310,204 08

The net profits for the year ending 30th November, after providing for all bad and doubtful debts, amounted to .. 2,305,409 42

Amount received from over-appropriations in connection with assets now realised, including the $350,000 appearing in the statement of 31st May, 1911 .. .. 809,000 00

Premium on New Stock 1,357,820 00

$4,473,433 48

This has been appropriated as follows:—

Dividends Nos. 96, 97, 98 and 99, at Ten per cent. per annum		$1,057,216 59
Written off Bank Premises		400,000 00
Transferred to Pension Fund (annual contribution) ..		55,000 00
Transferred to Rest	$1,400,000 00
Transferred to Rest, premium on new stock	1,357,820 00
		2,757,820 00
Balance carried forward		203,394 89
		$4,473,433 48

As is customary a careful re-valuation of all the Assets of the Bank has been made and all bad and doubtful debts have been fully provided for.

As made known to you in May last, your Directors decided to issue, at a premium of 90 per cent., $2,000,000 of the $5,000,000 new stock authorised in January, 1908. At the closing of the books $1,861,550 of this amount had been subscribed and $1,697,275 paid up. When the payments in this connection have been completed the paid-up capital of the Bank will stand at $12,000,000 and the Rest at $10,000,000.

The following branches have been opened during the year: In Ontario—Porcupine, South Porcupine, Bloor and Dufferin (Toronto); in the North-West Territories—The Pas; in Saskatchewan—Bengough, Biggar, Briercrest, Brooking, Cudworth, Edam, Mirror, Nutana, Radville, West Side (Saskatoon), Tilley, Willow Bunch; in Alberta—Beaver Lodge, Mount Royal (Calgary), Grouard; and in British Columbia — Chilliwack, Duncan, Golden, Kelowna, Salmon Arm and Vernon. The branches at Latchford and Porcupine, Ontario; Durban, Manitoba, and Brooking and Tilley, Saskatchewan, have been closed. Since the close of the year a branch has been opened at Powell Street, Vancouver, B.C.

The various offices of the Bank in Canada, the United States, Great Britain and Mexico, and the departments of the Head Office have been thoroughly inspected as usual during the year.

Your Directors wish again to express their appreciation of the efficiency and zeal with which the officers of the Bank continue to perform their respective duties.

B. E. WALKER,
President.

ALEXANDER LAIRD,
General Manager.

The motion for the adoption of the report was then put and carried. By-laws increasing the number of Directors of the Bank, in the event of the proposed union with the Eastern Townships Bank being carried out, also increasing the authorized capital stock of the Bank were then passed. Resolutions relative to the Pension Fund and providing for an alteration in the par value of the shares of the capital stock of the Bank were submitted and passed. The usual resolutions expressing the thanks of the shareholder to the President, Vice-President and Directors, and also to the General Manager, Assistant General Manager and other officers of the Bank were unanimously carried. Upon motion the meeting proceeded to elect Directors for the ensuing year, and then adjourned.

The scrutineers subsequently reported the following gentlemen to be elected as Directors for the ensuing year:—Sir Edmund Walker, C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L.; Hon. Geo. A. Cox, John Hoskin, K.C., LL.D., J. W. Flavelle, LL.D., A. Kingman, Hon. Sir Lyman Melvin Jones, Hon. W. C. Edwards, Z. A. Lash, K.C., LL.D., E. R. Wood, Sir John Morison Gibson, K.C.M.G., K.C., LL.D., William McMaster, Robert Stuart, George F. Galt, Alexander Laird.

At a meeting of the newly-elected Board of Directors, held subsequently, Sir Edmund Walker, C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L., was elected President, and Mr. Z. A. Lash, K.C., LL.D., Vice-President.

THE POULTRY WORLD

The problem of when and where to sell market poultry and eggs for the best prices is uppermost in the minds of many who feel that they do not get value received for what they send to market. At a meeting held a short time ago in Bradford County, Pennsylvania, the point was made that the buyers of poultry and eggs would take advantage of the sellers and pay them less for a shipment than it was really worth.

To satisfy curiosity, the writer visited nearby farms where considerable poultry was grown and, as he had expected, many of the fowls that should have weighed from 4 1-2 to 6 pounds each really averaged, live weight, from 2 1-2 to 4 1-2 pounds each.

Such poultry is fully half waste. A young fowl weighing 2 1-2 pounds, or even 3 pounds, would have on its carcass from 1 to 1 1-2 pounds of meat. If the fowl sold at 16 cents a pound, live weight, it would bring 40 cents; in other words, the purchaser would be paying 40 cents for 1 pound of poultry meat. Fowls that weigh 4 1-2 pounds and sell at five weight for 72 cents—or 16 cents a pound—will average 2 pounds waste, leaving 2 1-2 pounds of meat, which would cost the buyer about 30 cents a pound. If these fowls had been properly fed they would all have weighed at least 6 pounds at the time they were sold.

They would, therefore, have cost the purchaser 96 cents each, and there would have been 4 pounds of meat on the carcass, making the actual cost to the purchaser less than 24 cents a pound for the poultry meat.

Many of the fowls in this country are fed only enough to keep them alive and growing. In the poultry districts of Rhode Island young cockerels six months old will frequently weigh more than six pounds and will sell at live weight to the huckster for 34 cents a pound. These fowls are large and plump, being well worth the price paid for them.

Poultry have only a certain capacity, and when properly fed they will grow into full size in less than half the time required for them to reach the same weight if they are sparingly fed. While in Bradford County the writer interviewed a man who kept careful records of feeding expense and the cost of egg production. This man said that it cost him between 15 and 16 cents a head for feed to grow his young fowls to broilers weighing from 1 1-4 to 1 1-2 pounds and that his egg production for the past year had averaged eight cents in grain for each dozen eggs produced. He also said that it had cost him a few cents more than a dollar to feed each hen per year. The cost of feeding hens throughout the United States varies from $1 to $1.75 a hen, the difference in cost being due to the various kinds of grain and the prices they command in different localities. In Illinois and Kansas a hen can be fed at a much lower cost than in New York or the New England States.

With this information as to the exact cost of feeding a fowl to broiler size and of producing a dozen eggs we have evidence of care in feeding and in keeping records; and the production of 19 dozen eggs in a year from each hen proves conclusively that this farmer understands the principles of caring for and feeding his poultry to gain a profit therefrom.—The Country Gentleman.

MASH MIXTURES FOR LITTLE CHICKENS

1. Equal parts, by weight, of finely-ground corn, bran and shorts, mixed crumbly with sour skim-milk.

2. Hard boiled eggs, mixed, shell and all, with four times their weight of dry bread.

3. One pint corn, one half-pint bran, one teaspoonful of meat, one egg, one teaspoonful of soda. Mix with one half-pint of water and bake two hours. Crumble this up when feeding.

EGGS FOR HATCHING

The eggs for hatching should be as fresh as possible; and, for best results, incubator eggs especially should not be over ten days old. In cold weather, they should be gathered quite often during the day, to prevent their becoming chilled. They should be kept in a temperature of not over 70 nor below 40 degrees F. Eggs kept in a temperature of over 70 degrees will spoil rapidly. Some operators recommend turning the eggs every day while saving them for hatching, and others think it quite unnecessary. We believe it is best to turn them regularly twice a day.

Corn, barley and buckwheat are very fattening grains, the latter having a tendency to whiten the flesh. Sweet potatoes are sugary, and as such are fattening, but give a yellow tinge to the flesh.

of four conditions: Lack of sufficient lime in the food, indigestion, overfat, fright.

The French method of preparing poultry for market is acknowledged in some respects superior to others. The birds are made very fat ad plump, and are manipulated to increase plumpness. A few feathers are left on tail and neck. The skin is white and delicate. Each carcass is tied with a ribbon, and is shown back uppermost, instead of breast up, according to American ad English usage.

Capons, generally, are dressed by leaving the feathers on the neck from the head down two-thirds to the shoulders. They are also left on two first joints of wings, on tail, half-way up the back, and on legs from knee-joint two-thirds up the hips. All the rest of the feathers are taken off.

$3.50 Recipe Free, For Weak Kidneys

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say goodbye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the stitches and pains in the back; the growing muscle weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, K1810 Luck Building, Detroit Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

THE LITTLE THINGS

(By Arthur C. L. Clausen, Architect)

As sixty minutes make an hour, so a multitude of little things, each appropriate in its kind and location, make the perfect home. The entire planning and designing of a home might be treated under the head of "The Little Things."

For example: The swinging of a door might seem a trivial matter to the average home-builder, still how often a door hinged on the wrong side proves an annoyance? Doors should always swing into a room, in such a manner as to permit seeing the most part of the room when the door is standing straight in. For example: If a door is close to a side wall, when it is hinged to the side nearest the wall, in opening it one walks directly into the main part of the room. If the knob is on the side nearest the wall, one sees but little of the room, when opening it, and must go clear around the end of the door in order to get into the main part of the room.

Also, the location of wall furniture, such as pianos, davenports, beds, bureaus, etc., should be taken into consideration when planning the swing of the doors. For this reason, each room should be furnished in an imaginary way on the floor plans, before the location and swing of doors, and the location of wall lights is determined, and the carpenters should then be carefully watched to see that they follow the drawings.

For example: In a home recently built, one of the bedroom doors contained a large mirror. This door was shown so hinged, upon the floor plans, as to make it impossible for it to conflict with another door near by. The carpenter, when putting on the hinges, thought that he might improve on matters by hinging the door on the opposite side, with the result that almost the first time the door was opened the plate mirror struck the knob of the other door, and was shattered.

The proper location of all kitchen fixtures and furniture is an important matter, for nothing is more annoying than a poorly planned kitchen. At present, however, we will merely consider the location of the sink. A good light in the sink is very necessary, and for this reason it should be near a window, and the light fixture should also be where it shines directly into the sink. That it should be near a range is obvious. Few people consider the fact that it should also be near the door leading to the dining room. When one enters the kitchen, with arms laden with dishes, the destination is the sink board, where they are cleaned and scraped and tucked away in the dishpan. All sinks are white enameled these days, and for several years there has been a stopper sink upon the market, making the dishpan unnecessary. The stopper is placed and the sink itself becomes the receptacle in which the dishes are washed. A sink board on both sides of the sink if a convenience, but space will not always permit it. Whether it should be on the right or left hand side depends upon whether the dish-washer is right or left-handed. Most people being right-handed, the sink board is usually placed on the left side, for a dish when being washed is held in the left hand and washed with the right hand, and is then placed upon the left sink board by the left hand. The height of the sink rim from the floor is always a hard thing to determine. Thirty-four inches is the accepted standard, but for a short, stout servant, this is a little too high. When the servant is "built for speed" it is a little too low. When the wife does her own work, she should designate the height to suit herself.

Closets seldom fare well in the planning of a home. They are usually placed in odd corners, which could not be very well used for any other purpose. While it is not necessary to give them the consideration given to the important living room, still the fact should be borne in mind that closets are a necessity, and that it is very annoying to not have them of sufficient size, location and number to accommodate the family's needs. Each closet should be provided with two shelves, set high, and two hook strips. When a closet is very large, a tier of shallow drawers, four feet long, in which to lay garments full length, and not many garments to each drawer, is a splendid thing.

A unique idea to double the capacity of a closet is to place a row of hooks all around near the ceiling and then fasten smooth sticks resembling broomsticks to wooden hangers, so that many garments can be hung high out of the way by means of the sticks, which are permanently fastened to each hanger.

A coat closet should be provided on the first storey, and here is an appropriate place to have a half-length mirror in the door, for the benefit of the ladies, so that they will not have to put their hats on with the aid of reflection in the hanging pictures on the wall.—Vancouver world.

ABOUT EGGS

(Ottawa Citizen.)

The above is clause 282, chapter 85, of a government act respecting the inspection and sale of certain staple commodities. The act provides weight standards for potatoes, eggs, carrots, and other vegetables, fish, fish oil, meat, etc.

"When potatoes are sold by the bag in the province of Quebec, the bag shall contain at least 80 pounds," is another clause, imposing a standard which, it was said, stood also true in the other provinces of the Dominion.

The Citizen's investigation was undertaken as the result of a movement that is becoming general against buying and selling the things called table necessaries by measure and in favour of buying and selling exclusively by weight. When eggs were selling at 10 cents and 15 cents a dozen, or even from 20 to 40 cents, the question of variation in size did not strike the average consumer as making so very much difference, but now, when they have reached 60 cents, the size becomes a question of considerable importance.

Two main facts were determined by The Citizen's inquiry. One is that there are weight standards in Canada for almost all table necessities, and that these standards are required by law; the other, that there has been practically no effort to enforce these standards, and that the general public is, in some cases at least, unaware of their very existence.

NO ENFORCEMENT.

The inland revenue department has charge of the inspection of weights and measures to see that they conform to the required government standards. At that department, however, it was explained to The Citizen that they had nothing to do with the regulation of these standards, the commercial side of the question, or prosecutions for non-fulfilment of the law in connection with them. For that branch of the work the reporter was referred to the trade and commerce department, Mr. Wm. J. Gerald, I.S.O., deputy minister of inland revenue, merely stating that there were weight standards for most table commodities.

At the trade and commerce department it was stated that while the act for the inspection and sale of staple commodities, including the matter of weight standards in commercial transactions, came under that department, there was no government enforcement of the act, no prosecutions conducted under it on the part of the government, and in fact, no general distribution of the act itself except on application, so that neither buyers nor sellers are generally acquainted with the weight standards.

A LOOPHOLE HERE.

As to the section concerning eggs, The Citizen found that on account of the carefully qualified wording, this could hardly be enforced. "When eggs are described as sold by the standard dozen, the dozen shall mean a pound and a half," reads the regulation. As a matter of fact, however, the dealer who is prosecuted for non-compliance with this standard can say simply that he did not describe his eggs as a standard dozen. It was suggested to the reporter that a better wording would be: "A dozen of eggs shall be a pound and a half."

Similarly in the case of salt, where the act requires two hundred and eighty pounds in every barrel, and the stamping of the correct weight on every barrel or sack. The act requires no inspection, and provides for no prosecution under it.

IMPRACTICABLE WITH LIQUIDS.

Except in the case of liquids, all who were approached were in favour of selling things by weight. In the case of liquids the variation in density renders the determination of government standards to cover every contingency practically impossible.

It was found that the cylindrical gallon measures for potatoes, apples, etc., while not ensuring the consumer accurate weight for his purchase, were authorized by the government.

THIS DOZEN FULL WEIGHT.

As a matter of interest, The Citizen had a dozen of eggs weighed in one of the large grocery stores, and found that its weight was exactly a pound and a half. The eggs, however, were larger than those which are common at this season, and it is practically certain that many dozens fall below the required weight standard.

What is meant by the much-talked-about service?

An Interpretation

A MOTOR CAR is, first of all, a fine machine.

Every man knows, or should know, that his motor car calls for the attention and care a fine machine deserves.

Most good makers, these days, desire to give service—to give attention—to give adjustment—but the Russell of all high-grade cars in the Canadian market can and does give a service that cannot be equalled by any other, whatever its maker's inclination.

THE RUSSELL factory is in Toronto—not thousands of miles away. It is an easy matter to visit the factory and get help or advice when needed.

Or you can call us on the telephone.

Or you can wire—or you can write—and in any case get what you want quickly.

We have a Service Department—a complete organization for answering enquiries, making repairs in case of accident, inspecting, overhauling, adjusting.

If you meet with accident, and need a repair part, the Service Department can ship it to you immediately. Its headquarters are at the Toronto factory, but, it is extended through seven branches, to every part of Canada and to Australia.

Regardless of where you are there is a Russell branch or agency available within minutes or a few hours at the most.

You tour—and you find a place where your car is like an open book to the garage man.

Think what this means, and when to a car of highest quality you add the advantages of a service like this you will realize the reason of the growth of the Russell business.

We want to build your car—we want to extend this service to you.

CANADIAN MISSIONARIES FROM CHENTU ARRIVE SAFELY AT SHANGHAI

Had a Lively Experience Running The Gauntlet of a Thousand Miles Through The Imperial and Revolutionist Troops---House-boats Riddled With Bullets.

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, ONT., JAN. 14.—A special cable to the Star News Services from Teplewman with the Canadian Methodist missionaries refuges in China dated yesterday from Shanghai tells of the safe arrival of the Canadians from Chentu after a lively experience, leaving Chentu Dec. 12th, taking to the river in house boats and running the gauntlet for a thousand miles of Imperial and Revolutionist irregular troops, as wall as the marauders and looters. Some of the house-boats were riddled with bullets. A native bostman was seriously wounded. The crew of the British gunboat Widge on refusing protection to Canadians and officers are under investigation by Rear Admiral Winsloe. It is feared that all the missionary buildings at Chentu were looted and perhaps burned after the departure of the Canadians. All missionary work in China is put back many years as the result of troubles, but the prospects for future progress are good under a Republican government.

PETERBOROUGH'S SHARE IN DOMINION ESTIMATES

The Borden Government is not unduly generous in its appropriation for public services and improvements in Peterborough. The appropriation of $8,500 for additions to the post office is in addition to the $9,000 for this purpose appropriated by the late Liberal government, and a part of the estimates of the late Liberal government, largely adopted by the present administration. Likewise to $13,500 placed in this year's estimates for "wharf" is the appropriation made by the late Government for the purchase of lands for a site for the wharf. If the present Government had suplemented this by an appropriation of $15,000 or $20,000.00 towards building the new wharf, it would have been something worth while.

WRIT IS ISSUED RE BAILEY VS. PETERBOROUGH

To the Editor of The Examiner,
Peterborough, Ont.:
Dear Sir:

Re W. A. Bailey vs. Peterborough:

In justice to us as solicitors for the plaintiff in the above action, we hope you will give equal prominence and publicity to this denial as you did to an alleged statement in a former issue of your paper, where it was said that we had advised that the said "plaintiff had no grounds of action."

Such a statement is obviously untrue, as such advice was never given by us or from our office. As a very tangible proof of this fact, a special endorsed writ has been issued and served and we not only believe the plaintiff has good grounds of action against the corporation for the injustice and personal injury he was subjected to, but also against the police official, who made the arrest, and the magistrate who made the conviction.

There must be proper and reasonable protection of personal rights and personal liberty, or even newspapers could not be published.

Journalism has been considered a high and honourable profession, and it would not be well for it to show any tendency to step down from that lofty pedestal.

Very truly yours,
Holmes & Holmes,

COUNCIL TO TAKE UP BRIDGE MATTER AT ONCE

In conversation with Mayor Bradburn this afternoon, an Examiner reporter was informed that the matter of Street Railway extension to East City would be taken up by the Mayor and Council at once. In the course of a couple of days, Mayor Bradburn intends to interview Mr. W. H. Munro on the subject, and later an endeavour will be made on the part of the Council to place some official figures, as to the cost of the bridge, etc., before the public.

WESTERN CONSERVATIVES WANT TARIFF REDUCTION

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 9.—During the Parliamentary recess the western members supporting the Borden Government have been holding conferences. To-day many returned to Ottawa for the reopening of the House on Wednesday, and all are a unit on one point, that trade legislation of a radical character must be created in order to relieve the present bad conditions in the west. Led by R. B. Bennett, member for Calgary, and the most eloquent man in the west, they are in favour of some legislation along the lines of the reciprocity pact, avoiding however any specified agreement with the United States, simply favouring the tearing down of tariff walls on natural products provisionally. If the United States is willing to allow Canada's grain and cattle into their country free of duty the same privilege should be extended to the natural products of the States.

Conservative members from the west will continue to strengthen. Anoing that the present discontent in the west will continue to strenghen. Another radical step to be urged will be the reduction of duty on farm implements. The private expressions of members along these lines will take concrete form on the floors of Parliament this month.

CONCERT AT ARMOURY TUESDAY NIGHT

A free concert will be held in the recreation room of the armouries next Tuesday evening. It will be held under the auspices of the reigment, and members of the regiment are invited to bring their friends and join in making the event as successful as the concerts that have preceded it. The concert will commence at 8.30. A feature of the programme will be a demonstration by the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium class. There will be ample accommodation for all, and an enjoyable evening is promised.

$450 IS THE AWARD

Geo. Carter, of Peterborough to Receive That Amount From Toronto Street Railway Company

JUDGMENT GIVEN

Judgment was given this morning in the case of George Carter vs. the Toronto Radial Railway, awarding Carter $450 damages and the costs. Mr. D. O'Connell represented Carter, while Mr. J. W. Curry of Toronto, appeared for the Toronto Railway Co.

It will be remembered that the case was tried at the County Court sittings, before His Honour Judge Huncke in December last, when Geo. Carter of this city, formerly a conductor in the employ of the Toronto Street Railway Co. brought a claim for damages against the company for $500 for injuries received while in their service.

This is the case where Carter claimed to have been knocked off the rear platform of a belt line car, by reason of the car being driven dangerously close to an automobile which was standing at a corner. Carter claimed that as a result of this accident, he had been confined to his bed for some time, and had not been able to work since the accident.

DANCE IN OTONABEE

One of the most enjoyable parties of the season was held at the home of Mr. Edward Lynch, in Otonabee, last night. Although the mercury was very low it seemed to have no effect on the young people when there is anything on at Mr. Lynch's.

The evening was spent in cards, games and dancing. About twelve o'clock a dainty repa t was served, to which about 20 couples did justice.

Mr. Evans Stewart and Mr. Ed. Masterson provided excellent music for the dancers, while Mr. Alex. Thompson managed the floor in first-class order. The party broke up about four o'clock.

THE WEATHER

The weather still continues very sharp and the thermometer is doing some acrobatic feats. This morning at seven o'clock it was 27 degrees below zero. No lower figure during the night. At noon, however, on investigation it was seen that the self-registering index was marking 20 degrees, so the temperature had been even colder early this forenoon than during the night.—W. P.

FAMOUS NEWMARKET CANAL BY ORDER IN COUNCIL IS TO BE PERMANENTLY FILLED UP

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, ONT., JAN. 13.—The famous Newmarket canal, to connect Newmarket town in North York with Georgian Bay, an operation on which thousands of dollars and many political speeches have been spent, was, by order-in-council this morning, permanently relegated to the political scrap heap. Hon. Frank Cochrane explained that it was no use continuing useless expenditure on the project which had been condemned by the present government when in opposition as an absolute farce. Cabinet ordered that all highways and bridges that were destroyed for the canal be rebuilt at the expense of the Department of Public Works. The huge ditch, opened for miles, will be filled up.

GREEN MEEHAN NOW NO MORE

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, JAN. 13—To-day the curtain was rung down on the affairs of another historic Cobalt concern, the Green-Meehan, when the shareholders agreed to sell the property to the lessees, the Santa Maria Company, who have been working the property the past year. The price agreed on was in the neighbourhood of $125,000, or somewhere around 6 or 7 cents a share on the two and a half million shares outstanding. Payments are, however, to be spread over a period of six years so that the Green-Meehan stock has not jumped to seven cents, but was selling rather freely to-day around 2 cents. In the heyday of the boom it sold above the $2 mark, and everybody in Toronto had some. The property has had many vicissitudes, and has been shut down for long periods, but last year produced 71 tons of ore. The plans of the new owners it is said, include the erection of a concentrator, which indicates that they must have found a lot of low grade ore.

PRETTY NEAR RECORD

The mercury in the thermometer took another drop through the night and when the official weather recorder went to take the reading this morning he had to get down on his knees. Twenty-nine below zero, and small prospects of a change until to-morrow, declared the weather man. Several thermometers in the vicinity of Water street went as low as 30 degrees below zero; while one man who drove in from Fraserville, this morning, brought tidings to the effect that a 40 below zero brand of weather was in vogue there.

There was a small attendance at the market this morning, and those who bravely bore the cold snap to drive into town, were not very enthusiastic about having to stand on the Market Square for an hour or two, awaiting the disposition of their produce. The citizens showed a corresponding lack of intere stas regards their buying propensities, and as a result, business on the market was slow.

With the Railways.

The railway stations, this morning presented a wintry aspect, and were comparatively deserted. The engines approaching from time to time, did so under a burden of ice, while the trucks were scarcely discernable at all, owing to the coating of ice which corroded round the various parts. And the passengers—there were very few travelling this morning. It was too cold. Indeed, many of whom would have otherwise worked out of doors, were unable to do so, and altogether, so far as outdoor business was concerned, in many directions, things were quiet.

The Recent Snow Storm.

According to General Roadmaster Bibby of the G. T. R., who was in the city yesterday, Peterborough did not suffer the inconvenience to traffic during the recent snow storm that prevailed in some places. In Orillia and Midland the inconvenience caused by the snow was very severe and occasioned the engaging of many extra men, while the plow and sweeper were constantly at work. Even at Toronto, said Mr Bibby, the conditions were worse than those prevailing at Peterborough.

A break in the cold snap, which has remained with us for over a week now, may be expected by to-morrow, or Monday, judging by the tone of the latest forecasts, which call for a spell of mild weather, accompanied by rain storms. This will, no doubt, be welcome news to those who are employed outdoors, and also to those whose occupation chiefly consists of juggling coal in the basement of public buildings.

DEVIL'S FOOD

Many a housewife has wanted a good recipe for this most popular cake. The following will give excellent results:

Take 5 level tablespoonfuls of butter, soften it, add 1 1-4 cups of granulated sugar, 4 level tablespoonfuls of Fry's cocoa (dissolved in a little hot water), 1 teaspoonful of vanilla, then break 3 eggs into the mixing pan and beat all ingredients until smooth.

Then mix 3 1-2 theaspoonfuls of baking powder in half a cup of flour, add to the above mixture. After this has been done take three-quarters of a cup of milk and one more cup of flour and add gradually to the mixture, adding first a little milk and then a little flour until the mixture is sufficiently stiff to drop from the spoon. Beat the mixture until very smooth and bake in a moderate oven about 35 or 40 minutes.

BUILDING FOR WINTER.

A man who contemplates building a dwelling house next year, should keep in mind this low-down zero weather. He should remember how much plumbers' bills mounted up, and how it kept somebody busy shovelling coal into the furnace. If he did this he would build his house so as to exclude cold, or rather retain heat, as much as possible. If he spent a hundred or two hundred dollars extra to make his house solid and frost proof, he would effect a saving on a winter's coal bill, enough to pay the interest on his additional expenditure, not to speak of the added comfort and health of himself and family. A house built to exclude the cold would be warm in winter and cool in summer. A house is intended to be a permanent structure, and in house-building as in street-building, building right means building permanently. In both cases the cost of maintenance is greatly reduced, and comfort of use is greatly added to.

GOOD WILL NOT ALL.

The Ottawa Citizen,' extremely Conservative, has the following:

In view of the plain statement of Premier Borden, that no dismissals would take place without a preliminary hearing being granted, and that only offensive partisans would be dealt with, no such apprehension was necessary on the part of faithful officials, nor should the Opposition press indulge in reckless charges and predictions which unnecessarily cause apprehension and anxiety.

The Citizen makes a large demand when it asks us to pin our faith to Mr. Borden's declarations. Mr. Borden is willing, but weak. He took high grounds on great national and imperial issues; he receded from those grounds under pressure of political exigencies. He was, no doubt, sincere in asserting as his policy that dismissals from the public service should be "for cause" subject to fair investigation and proven demerit. But, unfortunately, Mr. Borden has not been able to impose this high standard of policy upon his colleagues, and political supporters. We have had a heavy harvest of dismissals, without the shadow or pretence of investigation—pure practice of the "spoils system" in its most aggravated and offensive form. It is not enough for Mr. Borden to be right and fair in sentiment. What is needed is the firmness, as he has the official—if he had the moral—power, to give effect to his sentiments. Good intentions without corresponding practice do not count. "Good intentions" are proverbially quoted as an abundant source of supply of a certain kind of pavement.

LOOKING AHEAD.

With the thermometer thirty degrees below zero at times, and much below zero for days at a time, the fuel problem takes on additional and more pertinent importance. Our domestic coal supply comes entirely from the United States and in time that source of supply will be closed. Ontario has no coal mines, but she has abundant deposits of peat, which will if present efforts initiated by the late government are carried on by the present government, are successful in bringing peat into the area of profitable commercial product, become of practical interest. Ontario has also a large area of hardwood forest, which may yet have to be drawn upon to repeat the fuel supply of our earlier years. This calls for the most comprehensive and careful scheme of conservation possible. What is needed also is a comprehensive scheme of reforestration in the older parts of Ontario. These is in the province an immense area in the aggregate of lands scattered here and there, unfit for crop cultivation, but well adapted for reforesting. They were originally densely wooded, and if planted now would, in the course of a generation or so, be well wooded and commercially valuable as a source of fuel supply if not for manufacturing purposes. Besides, general re-wooding of these now barren areas would demonstrate that while they are unfit for agriculture, they can contribute to the promotion of the crop productiveness of the till lands. Forest growth has an extremely beneficial effect upon climatic and meteorological conditions, promoting larger and more regular and evenly distributed rain fall and exercising a general beneficient influence. The Provincial government could well do worse than inaugurate and carry out an extensive scheme of reforestration of the waste places of Ontario.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

In the House of Commons yesterday, the force of habit was illustrated by Rt. Hon. Mr. Borden, who referred to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, as "Prime Minister." Mr. Borden was only a little premature—he may be right yet in using that form of reference.

It is stated that the City of Calgary last year had the city treasury enriched by $120,000, as the result of owning its own street railway last year. It would be interesting to know whether the railway is operated by a commission or by the city, directing municipal operation. If the latter was the case, Calgary might pass the secret around. In Manitoba the telephone rates, under provincial ownership and operation, are about three times higher than under company management.

THE LIBERAL LEADER AND POWER.

"Sir James Whitney has backed down. The Opposition, though not in office, appears to be in power. The Government accepts the policy of the Opposition and abandons its proposal to abolish the Hydro-Electric Commission and hand over the management to a department of the Government under a political head."

So said N. W. Rowell, K.C., M.P.P., for North Oxford, and leader of the Opposition in the Legislature, to The Toronto Star.

"I look upon this as a great victory for the Liberal Opposition and the Liberal and Independent press which opposed the Government's policy," continued Mr. Rowell.

"The result is a very striking commentary on the incapacity of the present Government to understand or appreciate the real needs of the people or, on its own initiative, to devise a public policy in the interest of the people.

"In the election address issued by Sir James Whitney when the Government prematurely dissolved the House and appealed to the people for a new mandate, this is found: 'I may say also that in our opinion the time has come when, having regard to the conduct of public business under our system, the Hydro-Electric Commission should be discontinued and a new department of Government created, which should take charge of this great work, and the head of which should be a Cabinet Minister. For several reasons this is desirable.

"The Opposition strenuously fought this proposal throughout the campaign on the ground that the Hydro-Electric Commission was a municipal undertaking in conception and promotion, that the municipalities were compelled to bear the whole cost, that the commission was simply the agent or the trustee for the municipalities, and that the municipalities were entitled to have this great undertaking of such vital importance to them, administered in a non-partisan spirit, with the highest efficiency and the greatest economy. To transfer the management of the system from a business commission to a department of the Government, where it would be subjected to the spoils and patronage system, would be prejudicial to public interest, unjust to the municipalities, and would greatly militate against the success of this undertaking conceived in the interest of the municipalities and the masses of the people.

Public Sentiment Aroused.

"The Opposition so aroused public sentiment that when Hon. Adam Beck came to the defence of the Government's policy toward the close of the campaign, he must have realised wherever he went that the men in local municipalities interested in the Hydro-Electric were opposed to the Government's proposal.

"Notwithstanding this, Sir James evidently was determinedw to pursue this pet policy of his, no matter how much the municipalities might resent it, and after the election, in a semi-official announcement, it was stated that the transfer would be made from the commission to the Government, and that everything had been arranged to carry through the transfer.

The Last Stand.

"The Mail and Empire of December 18, 1911, contained this paragraph:

"Referring to the announcement he made in his pre-election address to the people of the Province, Sir James Whitney on Saturday again stated that it was the intention of the Government to abolish the Hydro-Electric Commission, now that the original line is completed, and make the power system one of the departments of the Government, with a Minister at its head. "We intend to replace the commission by a department," said the Premier. "The head of which will be a Cabinet Minister, with a Deputy Minister. We hope to pass legislation during the coming session establishing the department, and the new system will go into force at one."

"The Opposition, however, has kept up the fight, and at the meeting in Dundas on Tuesday evening, I defined the Opposition position, that to the full limit of its resources, the Opposition would oppose in the Legislature and on the platform, the carrying out of the policy so unjust to the municipalities and so prejudicial to the public interest.

"The Legislature was prematurely dissolved, and the Province and people were put to the expense of a general election to pass upon this question. The Government has now discovered that its proposal was a huge blunder It never should have been made, and there was no occasion for a general election to pass upon the issue. Such political capacity and political sagacity need no comment.

"It is a great gratification to see that the Government has yielded to the demand of the Opposition and the pressure of public opinion, and it shows that, while the Opposition is not in office, it is in power and has been able to render a very important service by compelling the Government to abandon its proposal.

"I hope," concluded Mr. Rowell, "in the interest of the municipalities, which must pay all the bills, the Government will go one step further and give the municipalities direct representation on the Commission."

Popular Majority Drops Down Just About Half

A classified analysis of the Conservative government's vote at the recent Provincial elections shows that the popular vote was about 50 per cent. less than in 1908, as follows:

Total vote	368,956
Conservative vote	226,786
Liberal vote	143,470
Independent, Labour and Socialist	19,703
Government majority over Liberals	50,316
Government majority over all	39,614
General Election, 1908.
Total vote	470,508
Conservative vote	277,914
Liberal vote	182,280
Independent, Labour and Socialist	10,014
Government majority over Liberals	95,634
Government majority over all	85,620
Decline in Government vote	75,122
Decline in Liberal vote	38,810
Increase in Independent vote	5,568
Decline in Government majority	46,015

The independent vote is classified as follows:

Ind. Conservatives	7,186
Labour	8,975
Socialist	3,421
Independent	129

The recent Liberal onslaught upon Sir James Whitney's bulky majority left it but four slimmer than it was—but if the Government finds in that result an assurance that its hold upon the regard of the people of Ontario is as strong as ever, the official returns of the election are liable to prove an unwelcome surprise. The popular majority of the Government with only one constituency to be heard from—Algoma—was just 39,614, or less than half of the total rolled up in the Provincial election of 1908. There has been a general impression that less than half of the number who voted three years ago turned out last December, and this has been advanced as the reason for the decline in the Government's vote The official figures show that in spite of the fact that the election was brought on in the winter at the commencement of the busy Christmas season, the reduction in the vote where contests were held was less than fourteen per cent.

The total vote in December 11 was 368,956. In 1908 only six constituencies went by acclamation; in December the number was seventeen. The absence of a contest in the additional eleven constituencies meant a reduction in the total vote of approximately 45,000. In the eighty-nine constituencies in which contests were held the reduction in the vote was, roughly speaking, 60,000.

The unpolled vote was 274,293, with Toronto, where Conservative candidates were in little danger, offending the most. The injustice that the bringing on of a vote in the winter did to the settlers in the northern constituencies is evident from the official returns. In Parry Sound 3,300 men voted, while 6,026 did not get to the polls. In Kenora 1,912 went to the polls and 2,256 remained away. Manitoulin had 2,039 unpolled votes, with 1,679 recorded.

The Province had a creditable record of voting intelligence, only 3,554 ballots being cancelled or rejected. Toronto was again the worst offender, not only in numbers but in percentage. Centre Huron, which elected a Liberal, Mr. William Proudfoot, had the best record, with only five votes rejected and a similar number cancelled.

The honour of having the largest majority went to Hon. Thomas Crawford, with 3,950, Mr. W. K. McNaught following with 3,852. Mr. J. A. Ellis of West Ottawa led the outside members with 2,102. Th largest Liberal vote was given to Mr. Damas Racine of Russell, who finished 1,342 votes ahead of his opponent.

Sir James Whitney's official majority was 921, that of Mr. Rowel 560, while Hon. A. G. MacKay secured 741.

A PLEA FOR MERCY FOR OUR HORSES

To the Editor of The Examiner,

Sir,—Permit me through your valuable paper to call the attention of the public to the care that should be given to our noble friend, the horse. I have noticed the large number of runaways in this city (especially during the spell of zero weather) and am pleased to note that the police are taking steps to enforce the law as regards leaving horses untied) but I for one would like them to go one better and see them hauled up for not alone leaving them untied but for what appears to me to be a cruel injustice to our dumb friend, the horse. Don't you think that his sufferings could be greatly lessened if drivers would only use a little discretion and throw a cloth over the poor animal's loins when they got down in a good many cases to have a warm themselves and leave the poor creature to shiver in the icy blast of below zero weather. I am sorry to say teamsters are not the onl yoffenders in this respect as it is not unusual to see swell cutters with long buffalo robes flowing over on the back, and standing without the least protection for the horse, while the owner is in a warm place, in a good many cases for half an hour, and then appears in fur coat, cap and gauntlets, to where he had left the poor horse to shiver in the cold. I think if the poor horses were only imbued with a little more sense they would leave them to walk home a great many times. Who of us would not greatly resent to see a horse badly beaten if he had done nothing wrong to deserve it, then why should the faithful creatures be so cruelly treated by not having a little protection from the when they are expected to stand and wait our pleasure, and when we appear to just trot away without a murmur, which they do.

Who would think of getting up straight from our bed and just run for about a block or two, and then stand in the icy cold for half an hour without moving. Now, Mr. Edit, don't you think that is just what is expected of our faithful friend, the horse, and we wonder why he resents this treatment and goes for a run alone to warm himself.

Yours very truly,
A Lover of Animals.

FALSE ALARM

A call from Box 12 gave the Fire Department a run to-day at noon. It turned out to be a false alarm, however. This is the second time that this has occurred recently. vEvidently the party responsible for the false alarms is not aware of the fact that he is directly violating the law, thereby placing himself in a position to be penalized to the extent of $50. Box 12 is located at the Brinton Carpet Works and is an arduous run for the horses.

OLD LADY ALMOST CRAZY WITH ECZEMA

A Remarkable and Convincing Statement of the Success of Cuticura Soap and Ointment in the Treatment of the Pain, Itching and Burning of Eczema

"I, the undersigned, cannot give enough praise to the Cuticura Remedies. I had been doctoring for at least a year for eczema on my feet. I had tried doctor after doctor all to no avail. When a young girl I sprained my ankle three different times, paying little or no attention to it, when five years ago a small spot showed upon my left ankle. I was worried and went for a doctor. He said it was eczema. He drew a small bone from the ankle—that the size of a match and about an inch long. The small hole grew to about the size of an apple, and the eczema spread to the knee. The doctors never could heal the hole in the ankle. The whole foot full of water all the time.

"My husband and my sons were up night and day wheeling me from one room to another in the hope of giving me some relief. I would sit for hours at a time in front of the fireplace hoping for daybreak. The pain was so intense I was almost crazy, in fact, I would lose my reason for hours at a time. One day a friend of mine dropped in to see me. No more had she glanced at my foot than she exclaimed, 'Mrs. Finnegan, why in the world don't you try the Cuticura Remedies?' Being disgusted with the doctors and their medicines, and not being able to sleep at all, I decided to give the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment a trial. After using them three days that night I slept as sound as a silver dollar for eight long hours. I awoke in the morning with not very little pain, in fact, I thought I was in heaven. After using the Cuticura Remedies for three months I was perfectly restored to health, thanks to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I will be sixty-four years of age my next birthday, hale and hearty at present." (Signed) Mrs. Julia Finnegan, 2234 Hebert St., St. Louis, Mo., Mar. 7/11.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world. Send to Potter D. & C. Corp., 4 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A., for free sample of each, with 32-p. Book.

The Disturbing Element

(Short Story)

"No," said the girl in the gray pongee, as she put aside her green silk parasol and proceeded to hunt down half a dozen hat pins lost in the mass of tiny green buds on the gray hat, "I'm through camping!"

Her audience sat up and gasped in wonder. The girl in the gray pongee was the champion camper of the neighbourhood.

"I've camped for the last time!" she said, emphatically, after allowing a proper time to elapse, for the sake of impressiveness. "It's grown worse and worse every year, but this year it was positively unbearable.

"When we first started camping," explained the girl in the gray pongee, "we made an ironclad rule that we would lead the simple life. We would live in our gym clothes, eat our meals in go-as-you-please fashion and pass the evening in whatever garb pleased us most; in fact, be perfectly natural for the whole two blessed weeks.

"It was such a relief to know that one could luxuriate for those weeks in bloomers and blouses, or in wet bathing suits, without having to worry lest somebody accidentally see you. I used to count on it all winter, when I went around strapped into dresses that would have burst if I had another eighth of an inch of circumference!

"Then last year some of the girls informed us that a crowd of young men were going to camp near us, and we'd have to entertain them once in a while. Some of us balked, not so much at entertaining once in a while as at the fact that there were going to be men in the neighbourhood. It meant that we'd have to think about our looks and that spoiled the camping!

"Well, we had to endure the infliction. The men were there and when they weren't invited they came anyway and sang silly songs under our windows.

"The girls they knew thought it was so romantic. The rest of us, however, were simply disgusted and we told the girls so, too. But do you suppose it did any good? They just smiled sweetly and went and covered their faces with cold cream and powder before going sailing, for fear they'd get sunburned!

"The rest of us made up our minds that we'd not be—shall I say bullied?—into dressing up every evening, even if those who had callers did devote their mornings to ironing and washing to make themselves lovely. We determined to go on dressing as we had dressed before, and merely to shun the men.

"But do you suppose we could? Mercy! We'd go for a stroll down by the bay and there we'd meet one of our girls all in white with a man! We'd dart behind trees until they'd passed and then we'd go back up the path, thinking that we'd get into a dark corner of the porch and have a good time talking. But the darkest corners were always filled with couples and of course we couldn't sit in the light in our bloomers! It was simply a case of dress up or go to bed, so we finally chose the former, for it was too hot to sweiter in bed, and the men came awfully early!

"This year, when we went out, the girls all promised faithfully that they wouldn't invite a single man. We were going to have a real old-fashioned camp, and, oh! how I was looking forward to it!

"Well, the very first evening who should happen to pass by in an automobile but Jack Strone! One of the girls called out to him—and I just knew she had been expecting him. We all had to run in and dress in skirts, while he sat in his car and waited for us.

"He took some of us for a ride, and before he left he asked if he couldn't bring out the whole party of fellows who were doing summer engineering near by! We had to say yes, after he had given us a ride.

"That ended all the fun! There were enough young men to go around and then some, and they came morning, noon and night! We had to wash and iron long after we ought to have been asleep, so that we might be neat and fresh all day long, for fear some of them would come out to call. It was simply awful.

"I vowed that I was never going again. But the others seemed to like it, and they're going to make a regular house party of their camping next year!"

"It's too bad that Fred had to be away all summer? isn't it?" murmured a listener, cautiously. "Now, if he'd—"

"Yes," admitted the girl in the gray pongee, dreamily, "if Fred had been there—"

A ripple of laughter aroused her and she blushed rosily.—College News.

By Decree Of Fate

A Short Story.

"Yes, Jack, to-night I feel as though I was too hasty in my actions regarding Elisabeth, but, confound it, old man, it is that jealous temperament of mine, which I cannot seem to curb. However, during the two weeks I have spent up here, at your little camp, truly God's own country, with its peaceful atmosphere, a change has been wrought in me. Dear little Beth! If I could only see her now and crave forgiveness, but the scornful looks those blue eyes flashed at me, together with the proud poise of her head, the last time I saw her, meant undying hatred.

"Well, Tom, I quite agree that you were hasty," was his companion's rejoinder, "and yet, when I tried to tell you that on your arrival, you informed me that you knew your own business. Just because you saw Elisabeth at luncheon with a gentleman you did not happen to know, you straightway rushed up to her house, accused her of unfaithfulness and fairly overwhelmed her with—"

"But, Jack, why didn't she tell me when I asked her who it was?"

"Why didn't she tell you? Why didn't you ask her civilly? She was so grieved, angry and indignant to think you would so misjudge her that she refused to give any explanation, and, frankly speaking, Tom, I don't blame her; just as if Beth would ever be unfaithful to you! You telegraphed me that you were coming up to stay with me a few days—then, you came—full of bitterness and resentment. I felt sorry for you, but this place was what you needed, as you have had plenty of time to realise how rashly you acted. You have come to your senses, and now, you must go home, old chap, and ask Beth's forgiveness. Cheer up, Tom, it will come out all right."

"I think I will take your advice, Jack. I will leave for home to-morrow and do my best to win her forgiveness. By the way, where did you say we were going to-night?"

"Oh, Mrs. Wheeler, a friend of mother's, together with her son and daughter, has taken a camp on the other side of the lake. The mater wrote and asked me to go over and see them; they are very nice people and I feel sure you will like them, but, as you are not in a cheerful mood to-night, we will make our visit brief. Look! you can see their camp now, and listen; is that music?"

They had almost reached the shore, but stopped rowing to listen, as the beautiful strains of Rubenstein's "Melody in F" were wafted out on the water. The mountain summits in the distance, the tall trees towering on all sides and the soft moonlight over all, seemed a fitting setting. The fellows listened, speechless, for a few minutes and then Tom exclaimed, "Who is playing, Jack? That piece brings back sweet memories, as Beth always played it for me."

"I don't know who it can be, Tom, but I am glad we came, for, to me, music surely hath charms."

By this time they had reached the shore and as they walked up toward the camp they could see Mrs. Wheeler, her son, daughter and several others sitting on the veranda, listening to the music which came from within. They welcomed their visitors cordially, after which Mrs. Wheeler remarked, "Ruth has a college friend, Miss Norris, up here to spend a week or so, and she has been playing in the darkness while we have been enjoying the music out here in the moonlight. She plays so well that we deem it a favour to hear her."

Tom jumped up in great excitement, while she was speaking, and almost before she had finished, burst out, "Miss Norris—not Beth? Not Elizabeth Norris?" Ruth Wheeler looked up in amazement, as she replied, "Well, yes; do you know her?"

At this juncture, Jack interrupted, saying, "Go in, Tom, and speak to her, while I explain matters."

Without further delay Tom noiselessly entered the house and stood in the doorway of the room from whence the music came. The moonlight streaming in clearly revealed the figure at the piano, whose whole bearing seemed one of sadness and woe, seemingly, unconscious of everything around her. All at once she started to play what to Tom was sweetly familiar, for it was his favourite song, "Regret."

She sang it through with exceptional expression and the sweet voice was sad and tremulous. When she had finished she buried her face in her hands and a stifled sob escaped her, which reached the ears of the man watching her from the doorway. In an instant he had gathered her close in his arms and murmured, "Beth—Elizabeth, dear, forgive me." The girl, with a look of fright and bewilderment, cried out sharply: "Tom—you here!" Then, amid her tears, she poured out her grief and repentance. "Oh, Tom," she sobbed, "why did you doubt me? It was only father's cousin, who came unexpectedly from the West, and I was showing him the city. You acted so mistrustful and unreasonable that you made me angry; then—you went away—Oh, Tom, forgive me, won't you?"

Taking the flushed face between his hands, Tom looked down into the eyes that were raised to his and said, gently, "Let bygones be bygones, Beth; there is nothing to forgive."—Boston Post.

Invented By Boys

THE AUTOMATIC-WORKING ENGINE AND THE POWER LOOM.

Certain most important inventions have been the work of boys. The invention of the valve motion in the steam engine, for instance, was made by a mere lad. Newcomle's engine was in a very incomplete state, owing to the fact that there was no way to open or close the valves except by means of levers operated by hand. He set up a large engine at a mine, and a boy, Humphrey Potter, was hired to work these valve levers. Although this was not hard work, it called for constant attention.

As the Potter lad was working the levers he saw that parts of the engine moved in the right direction, and at the same time he had to open or close the valves. He procured a strong cord and made one end fast to the proper part of the engine and the other end to the valve lever. The boy had then the satisfaction of seeing the engine move with perfect regularity of motion. A short time after the foreman came around and saw the boy playing marbles at the door. Looking at the engine he at once perceived the ingenuity of the boy as well as the advantage of so clever an invention. The idea suggested by this boy's inventive genius was put into a practical form and made the steam engine an automatic working machine.

The power loom was the invention of a farmer's boy who never had seen or heard of such a thing. He whittled one out with his jackknife, and after he had finished it he exhibited his device to his father, who at once kicked it into pieces, saying he would not have about him a boy who would spend his time in such foolish ways. Accordingly, the boy was sent to a blacksmith to learn the trade. His master took a lively interest in the lad. He made a loom of what was left of the one his father had broken and showed it to the blacksmith. The latter saw he had no common boy as apprentice and that the invention was a valuable one. A loom was constructed under the supervision of the boy. It worked to perfection and the blacksmith furnished the means to manufacture the looms, the boy receiving half the profits.

In about a year the blacksmith wrote to the boy's father that he would bring with him on a visit a wealthy gentleman who was the inventor of the celebrated power loom. One may, therefore, conceive of the astonishment of the father when his own son was presented to him as the inventor of a loom based upon the principle of that which the old man had kicked to pieces only a year before.—New York Press.

Distress From Indigestion

Tried in Vain to Get a Cure—All Medicines Failed

Old Trouble Disappeared When the Liver and Bowels Were Set Right by

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

You cannot make a greater mistake than to think that indigestion is confined to the stomach. It is a disease of the liver and bowels, and it is only by getting these organs healthy and active that you can ever hope to cure chronic indigestion.

Here are two cases reported by Mr. Skinner, which tell of continued failure to cure indigestion by dosing the stomach. Both were cured thoroughly by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. A. C. Skinner, Atlantic St., Hardwoodhill, Sydney, B.C., writes: "My wife was troubled with indigestion and tried all sorts of medicines in vain. Hearing about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, I got her to try them, and to our great delight she was cured. We would not think of being without them in the house for use when the liver and bowels became sluggish.

I told a friend about them and gave him a box. He had suffered from indigestion for yeras and tried most everything he could get. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills were also successful in his case, and he says they beat any medicine he ever came across."

NEW BRUNSWICK READD FROM AGAIN

Another Splendid Cure by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mr. Ben Gauvang had Backache so bad he had to quit work.—Dodd's Kidney Pills fixed him up.

Puellering Settlement, Kent Co., N. B., Jan. 12.—(Special.)—Every corner of New Brunswick tells of cures made by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and this settlement can contribute its share. Mr. Ben. Gauvang is one man who without hesitation states that he owes his good health to the great Canadian Kidney remedy.

"Yes, Dodd's Kidney Pills certainly did me good," Mr. Gauvang says in an interview. "Before I started taking them my back ached so that I had to give up work and I also had to be careful how I walked and moved about. I took nine boxes, all told, and they fixed me up. They are the best medicine for all diseases of the kidneys."

PLAIN CHARLOTTE-RUSSE

One quart of cream, whipped to a froth, and drained through a sieve; one pint of unclarified gelatine, melted and strained; flavouring to taste; sugar to taste.

Beat the melted gelatine into the whipped cream, stirring and beating continually until all is smooth; have ready moulds prepared as above; pour in the cream, and, when cold, proceed as above.

GAS, DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION GOES

Makes Your Disordered Stomach Feel Fine in Five Minutes

You can eat anything your stomach craves without fear of Indigestion or Dyspepsia, or that your food will ferment or sour on your stomach, if you will take a little Diapepsin occasionally.

Your meals will taste good, and anything you eat will be digested; nothing can ferment or turn into acid or cause gas, which causes Belching, Dizziness, a feeling of fullness after eating, Nausea, Indigestion (like a lump of lead in stomach), Biliousness, Heartburn, Water Brash, pain in stomach and intestines or other symptoms.

Headaches from the stomach are absolutely unknown where this effective remedy is used. Diapepsin really does all the work of a healthy stomach. It digests your meals when your stomach cannot. A single dose will digest all the food you eat and leave nothing to ferment or sour and upset the stomach.

Get a large 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from your druggist, and start taking now, and in a little while you will actually brag about your healthy, strong Stomach, for you then can eat anything and everything you want without the slightest discomfort or misery; and every particle of impurity and Gas that is in your stomach and intestines is going to be carried away without the use of laxatives or any other assistance.

Should you at this moment be suffering from Indigestion or any stomach disorder, you can surely get relief within five minutes.

PATSY

He was a very pretty and intelligent Scotch collie. His home was on a farm, at the top of a high hill in Nova Scotia, about fifteen miles back in the country from Halifax. Our boys had a fine camp a full mile from Patsy's home. It was quite a puzzle for a stranger to get from "Mt. Airie" to "Camp Stillwater." First there was a winding lane down the hill to the public road, with a great swinging gate for exit. Then, turning to the right, one passed along the country highway for a quarter of a mile or so. Then another gate opened into a wood-road which led on to a house and barn. Passing through the barnyard, over or through woods and meadow, brought the camper or camp visitor to an open pasture at the far end of which was a stone wall. Once over this wall one was in the dense forest, where the boys had blazed a trail to the bluff, overlooking a great lake. On this bluff, surrounded by splendid forest trees, and with the lake on three sides, was Camp Stillwater. The quiet of the night was often broken by the wild laughter of the loon; and once some animal, probably a porcupine, jumped out of an overhanging branch onto the tent canvas, slid down and shambled off as the startled sleepers peered out under the edges of the tent trying to make out the personality of the marauder.

Well, in the farmer's family were two daughters, well educated young ladies, who were Patsy's particular charge. Our boys' sisters were boarding near by and the four girls were naturally much interested in the camp. One day the boys dared the girls to sleep at the camp without male guards, for one whole night. The girls thought it would be great fun and accepted the "dare." Elaborate house-cleaning, cooking and other preparations were made by the boys all day, and at eventide the girls came down, not by the road, but in a boat, be it noted. A merry company with great appetites ate camp fare and told stories around the fire. About nine o'clock the boys departed for the farm, with many warnings to the girls to keep the guns loaded and look out sharp for wolves and bears. The boys likewise went back by boat from the camp to the foot of Mt. Airie.

When they arrived at the farm they found Patsy evidently much distressed at the absence of the girls. He was very restless, whined and barked constantly and would not settle down in his accustomed place for the night. In about half an hour he disappeared.

How he found his way to the camp no one knows. He had never been there before, and there was no scent except to the boat landing. But, by some sort of woodcraft or dog-lore, to the camp he made his way, after the boys had come in without the girls. He appeared shortly before ten o'clock, lay down contentedly before the tent door and remained on guard until day dawn. At about four o'clock in the morning he left for home, doubtless thinking that all danger of the camp being molested was over with the coming of the light.

The girls would not admit that they were at all timid at being left alone in the woods when the boys withdrew. But many times the next day they caressed Patsy with unusual fervour and told him he was "an old dear."—Our Dumb Animals.

SERMON COURSES AT ST. LUKES

The rector will commence a course of special sermons at St. Luke's church on Sunday morning. The general subject being, "Why We Believe." The first sermon of the course will be upon the subject, "Why We Believe in You." On the second Sunday evening of each month, a special sermon to young men and young women will be preached. The first sermon of this evening course will be given next Sunday evening on the subject, "Ideals."

TO CHOP SUET EASILY

Cut into small pieces, and remove the membrane; sprinkle with flour, and chop in a cold place to prevent its becoming soft and sticky.

GOOD RECIPES

SHAPLEIGH SCALLOPED FISH.

Separate cold, cooked fish in flakes; there should be one cupful. Cook one-half tablespoonful of finely chopped onion and two tablespoonfuls of finely chopped green pepper in two and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour, mixed with one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of paprika and a few grains of black pepper, and stir until thoroughly blended, then pour on gradually, while stirring constantly, one cupful of rich milk. Bring to the boiling point, add fish and again bring to the boiling point. Turn into a buttered baking dish, buttered ramekin dishes or buttered scallop shells. Sprinkle with seasoned cracker crumbs, and bake in a hot oven until crumbs are brown. Have the crumbs light and evenly coated, not compact and thick in places. Allow one-fourth to one-third cupful of melted butter to each cupful of crumbs, and stir lightly with a fork; then add a few grains of salt.

VEAL SOUFFLE.

Melt one-third cupful of butter, add one-third cupful of flour and stir until well blended; then pour on gradually two cupfuls of scalded milk. Bring to the boiling point and add one-half cupful of soft, stale breadcrumbs, one teaspoonful of salt and one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper, and let simmer two minutes. Remove from fire and add two cupfuls of cold, cooked veal, finely chopped, one tablespoonful of finely chopped parsley and the yolks of three eggs, beaten until thick and lemon-coloured; then cut and fold in the whites of three eggs, beaten until stiff and dry. Turn into buttered individual molds set in a pan of hot water or a buttered pudding dish, cover with buttered paper, and bake in a slow oven until firm. Remove from molds, garnish and pour around a white mushroom sauce.

CHESTNUT COMPOTE.

Chestnuts may be served as a hot compote by stewing them for nearly half an hour in a syrup made in the proportion of four ounces of sugar to half a pint of water and a wineglassful of sherry, with the thinly pared rind of half a lemon. Serve in the syrup with sugar sifted over.

CHESTNUT PUDDING.

Put chestnuts into boiling water (having slit the skins first) and boil until tender, then skin them, dry them in the oven, and crush to powder, or the powder may be purchased ready for use, cream five ounces of butter and add three ounces of powdered sugar and four well-beaten eggs, nearly half a pint of milk, or less milk and two or three tablespoonfuls of cream. Flavour with vanilla, stir in six ounces or seven ounces of the chestnut powder, pour into a well-buttered mold, cover with buttered paper, and bake or steam for one and a half hours (a little less will do if baked). Serve with wine sauce.

PEACH BATTER PUDDING.

Butter a two-quart pudding dish and spread on the bottom one quart of ripe peaches—pared and halved—with the stone side up. Beat four eggs until light, add to them six tablespoonfuls of milk diluted with one and two-thirds cups water, a pinch of salt and three tablespoonfuls of sugar. Pour the mixture, a little at a time, one one and one-half cups of flour, and beat well. Pour the batter on the peaches, and bake in a moderate oven for one hour. Serve with rich sauce.

NUT PUDDING.

Take two eggs, half a cup of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, half a cup of water, and enough flour to make a thin batter. Stir well together. Add a teaspoonful of baking powder mixed with a little flour. Then stir in half a cup of chopped walnut meats mixed with a teaspoonful of flour. Bake in a butter dish for half an hour and serve with the following sauce:

Take one cup of sugar, a level tablespoonful of cornstarch, or flour, one teaspoonful of butter and a little nutmeg. Add a cup of cold water. Stir well and put over the fire. Continue to stir until smooth. When done add a teaspoonful of vinegar.

Wash a pound of mushrooms well in cold water, but do not let them soak. Peel and put them in a stewpan with two ounces butter; half a teaspoonful salt; a dash of white pepper, and set over the fire until moderately heated. Then turn into a shallow baking dish and break over them five or six eggs. Sprinkle over the top stale bread crumbs moistened with butter and dust lightly with salt and pepper. Bake about five minutes in a hot oven. Eat with buttered toast.

Millionaire Single Taxer
Joseph Fels Coming To Lecture In Peterborough

In view of the great interest that has been taken in Ontario in the question of Taxation Reform, special interest is likely to be aroused by the visit in Peterborough next Friday evening, January the 19th, of Mr. Joseph Fels, the multi-millionaire of Great Britain, who will give an address in the Sunday school of St. Paul's church on Friday evening, Jan. 19th, under the auspices of the Brotherhood of St. Paul's. Mr. Fels is a disciple of the great Henry George, in that he believes that most of the poverty of the great nations is caused by unjust systems of taxation. So earnestly does he believe this, he is giving something like $250,000 a year to promote Taxation Reform. Included in his contributions are $5,000 to the Tax Reform League of Eastern Canada, of which Mr. H. B. Cowan of Peterborough is a Vice-President, $50,000 to the Tax Reform League of the United States, and $50,000 a year to the Tax Reform League of Great Britain.

While Mr. Fels' address will be delivered in the Sunday school hall of St. Paul's church, the meeting will be open to the public, and there will be no charge other than the taking up of a collection. Mr. Fels is the well known manufacturer of Naphtha soap, and his address will therefore be of special interest to business men. Working men are cordially invited to attend also; in fact, there will be a great message for them in what Mr. Fels has to say.

At the time of Mr. Fels' visit to Ontario a year ago, Mr. Peter McArthur, the well known correspondent of the Toronto Globe and other publications, secured an interview with him, which was very interesting. Mr. McArthur wrote about it afterwards as follows:

While sitting in the lobby of the Walker House on Sunday afternoon I recognized the face of a remarkable man. In this case I did not ask for a match. I asked for an interview.

"What do you want to know?"

"In the first place I want to know whether you still have faith in human nature? For some years past you have been proclaiming that poverty is a disease that can be stamped out, and have been devoting your energy and great wealth to the work of effecting this reform. Are you satisfied with the progress you are making?"

"Come and sit down."

This was at 5 o'clock. It was twenty minutes to 8 when Mr. Joseph Fels, of Philadelphia, London, England, and the world in general, paused in his explanation of his purpose and progress. He merely stopped to exclaim:

"Unless we go down at once we'll miss our dinner. Come on."

On the way to the dining room, I saw the Bobcaygeon Independent man and signalled him to come and help me listen to Mr. Fels. Together we listened until half past ten, when Mr. Fels had to take the train to Chicago.

It was certainly a cheering and glorious evening. Here is a man who has accumulated a great fortune by taking advantage of conditions as they are and is willing to spend it all to prove that those conditions are wrong and should be changed.

"The cause of all human misery is ignorance," he exclaimed. "If people once learn what should be done to improve conditions they will do it."

This certainly bespoke a faith greater than a grain of mustard-seed. It was gently suggested to Mr. Fels that there is a quality recognized by humorists, but not by reformers, that may be called "human cussedness," which seems to compel men to do the opposite to what they know they should do.

"All nonsense," said Mr. Fels. "There is no such thing as human cussedness. Some day, and I think it is not distant, men will realise the truth about social conditions. Then they will act, and poverty and inequality will disappear as smallpox and diphtheria are disappearing now."

In brief, it is impossible to give the interviewed in full. Mr. Fels is a thorough-paced Single Taxer. He sees unearned increment and land values everywhere.

Personally, Mr. Fels is not unlike Henry George, the original Single Taxer, in appearance or ideas. The one marked difference is that, unlike the social philosopher, he is a keen business man. The impression Mr. George left with those who had a chance to enjoy a talk with him was that he was devoid of all self-seeking —a man passionately devoted to altruism. Mr. Fels said:

"Whatever you do, don't speak of me as a philanthropist. I am doing exactly what I want to do and am enjoying myself thoroughly. But I don't think I care for money beyond the fact that it enables me to do what I want to in a practical way."

He did not tell me himself, but I have been told that he gives $250,000 a year to the promotion of the Single Tax propaganada throughout the world. He did assure me, however, that instead of being forgotten, Single Tax is nearer to adoption than the majority of people suppose. It is being promoted under different names. That is what makes the difference.

After Mr. Fels had hurried away to catch his train the Bobcaygeon Independent man and I shook hands and agreed that for a couple of countrymen we had been privileged to listen to a wonderful talk by a very unusual man.

INTERESTING TRAVEL TALK AT NORMAL LAST NIGHT

Dean Robertson, of Victoria University, Toronto, Delivers an Interesting Lecture on "Glimpses of Greece"

A rare treat was afforded those who were fortunate enough to be present at the illustrated lecture given by Dean Robertson of Victoria University, in the Normal School, last evening. Under the caption of "Glimpses of Greece" the speaker gave a very interesting and instructive travel talk, augmenting the gist of his remarks with the aid of a large number of lantern slides.

Avoiding the historical and theological side of the subject, Mr. Robertson assumed the same relative position to his audience as a guide would to a tourist in Greece, which fact made the lecture all the more interesting.

The first picture thrown on the screen, was the ocean liner which, two years ago, conveyed Dean Robertson, and a party of friends, to the land of ancient wonders, embracing Greek architecture, and statuary. This was followed next by an island scene, descriptive of one of the many islands which dot the coastline of Greece. A map, showing the contour of the country, and the route taken by the party, was next displayed. In connection with their journey throughout the country, the speaker made jocular reference to the slowness of the Grek trains, describing an instance of where eight and a half hours were consumed in a sixty-mile journey. A redeeming feature of this is the fact that they are invariably on time.

The distinguishing features in connection with the geographical aspect of the country were next dealt with by the lecturer. Greece is a very mountainous country, throughout, and is interspersed with numerous valleys; it is at these points that the towns are located. It is not a picuresque land, by any means, this condition being due to the lack of forest conservation, augmented by the fact that not more than one-fifth of the land is productive.

Athens, and its wonderful ruins, was dealt with at length by the speaker. Among the most conspicuous of its ruins, which bring back such vivid memories of the time when Athens was at the acme of her power, is to be found the stadium. "In Toronto, when the new stadium was built for the Toronto University, with a seating capacity of ten or eleven thousand people," said Dean Robertson, "the Toronto papers made a great ado about it, while in Athens is to be found the well-preserved ruins of one which had a seating capacity of forty-five or fifty thousand people, and was constructed of marble. When the Olympic meet was held in Greece, a few years ago, the first man to cross the tape in the Marathon race was a Greek peasant. This was the occasion for great rejoicing, believing, as they did, that the event bore great significance, but on a later occasion, when a Canadian ("Billy" Sherring of Hamilton) captured the event, there was much wringing of hands, and cries of "We are lost"; "We are undone".

One of the most striking features of the country is the beautiful sunsets. While we can equal them here in gorgeousness, they lack the delicate loveliness, and glorious pastel shades of the Greek sunset. Byron sat upon a promontory, near Athens, and eulogized upon the gloriousness of the sunset in the "Corsican".

Pictures of Greek temples and famous buildings of antiquity were also reflected upon the screen, and were replete with many striking instances of the skill shown by the Greeks of ancient times, in sculpture. Sculpture that combined many varieties, which we are trying to equal to-day, but cannot surpass.

These and many other pictures formed the nucleus around which Dean Robertson wove an interesting and fascinating story of eastern travel, combining in it a fund of valuable information.

STRONG WORDS OF PRAISE

Mrs. (Rev.) W. H. Clarke, Stirling, Ont., writes:—"I wish to give this unsolicited testimonial to the great value of Baby's Own Tablets. Our little girl, born last February was at first very constipated. When other remedies failed we tried the Tablets and in a week she was competely cured. By the use of the Tablets she has been kept well and happy ever since. It is strong praise like this that has made Baby's Own Tablets so popular. Thousands of other mothers have said: "Once we gave the Tablets a trial we had nothing but praise for them." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MILITARY NEWS

THE CLASS OF INSTRUCTION.

Sgt. Fletcher of the Royal Canadian Dragoons is in the city, and has commenced a class of instruction for officers and non-commissioned officers of the 3rd Dragoons. The first class was held on Monday night, when the following officers reported for duty: Lieut. Paul Trebilcock, Lieut. G. K. Rackham, Lieut. Garnet Greer, Lieut. George Lundy, Lieut. Allan Mann and Lieut. Robert Cleghorn. Several noncoms were also enrolled. This class will meet hereafter on Monday, Tuesday, Friday and Saturday nights at the armouries. On Wednesday of each week Sgt. Fletcher will hold a class of instruction in Colbourne, and on Thursday of each week in Millbrook.

This is an entirely new departure on the part of the department and it will undoubtedly prove of great assistance in furnishing qualified officers for the rural corps. At the end of the term the officers will take a two weeks' course at Toronto before writing on their examinations.

WILL RETIRE.

Lieut.-Col. G. H. Syer, officer commanding 3rd Prince of Wales, Canadian Dragoons, has announced that he intends retiring from the command of his corp before the next annual camp. Col. Syer, who resides near Millbrook, has decided to move to Western Canada and will start west in the spring. He has made a most popular commanding officer and his retirement will be keenly felt by the members of the regiment of all ranks H will be succeeded by Major C. H. Rogers of Grafton.

ANNUAL MEETING

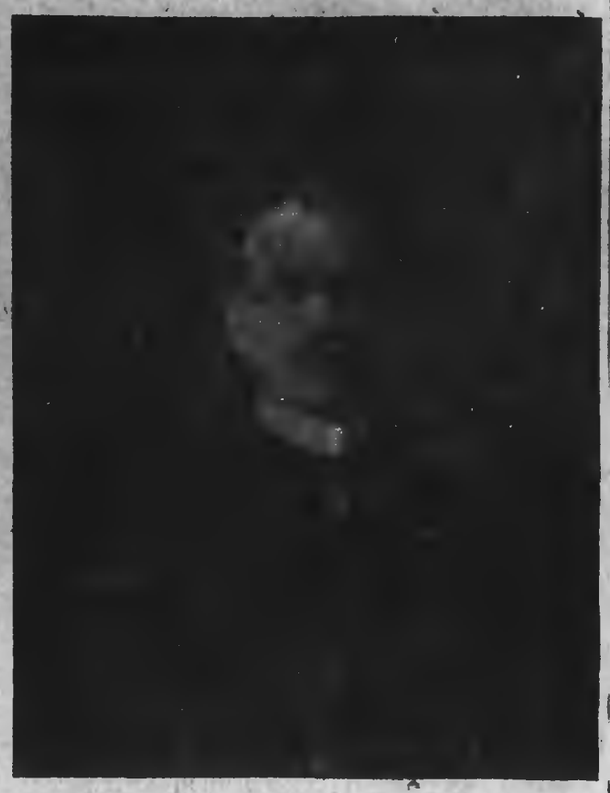
H. P. KENNEDY



The Man of the Hour at the Cattle Market.—From the Toronto World.

During this week H. P. Kennedy bought 25 carloads or 536 cattle all told, although he had no orders on hand Monday morning. Many of the drovers and commission men said on the market yesterday that he, more than any other man, helped to save the drovers from defeat this week by sizing up the true situation. And as soon as they realized this, many of them sold their cattle to him for 30c. to 50c. per cwt. less than they could have got from the packers.

Mr. Kennedy has been a heavy buyer of cattle on both markets all last year, and on several occasions we remember he stepped in and bought heavily, thereby helping to make a market when things were looking dark for drovers and all combined. On several occasions at the Union Stock Yards this last season he helped to make a clearance. Whether he made well or not, one thing is certain, he deserved well.

Semi-monthly Meeting Of Ladies' Literary Society Lecture At The Lyceum

The unvarying success which is usually attendant upon the lectures of the Ladies' Literary Society in connection with St. Peter's T. A. S., was maintained last evening, when a very interesting lecture on the "Life and Work of Father Jogues" was delivered by Mr. V. J. McElderry.

Mr. McElderry is the latest acquisition to the law firm of Messrs. Denistoun, Peck and Kerr. He handled his subject in a masterly manner and recounted to a nicety the experiences of Fr. Jogues among the Indians, and his martyrdom.

The lecture was enlivened by music. Miss McNamara delighted the gathering with a splendid pianoforte solo, while Mr. J. Weir and Mr. J. New rendered vocal selections to the able accompaniment of Mr. J. Armstrong and Miss Olive Tangney, respectively. Miss Marguerite Clancy also sang with marked effect.

After dealing with the birth and early history of Fr. Jogues, the lecturer went on to say:

"The chief trouble with the Indians, experienced by Fr. Jogues, was that while they would acquiesce in matters appertaining to teaching, they would almost invariably return to their old customs.

After spending five years with a tribe known as the Hurons, not far distant from Lake Simcoe, Father Jogues had occasion to return to Quebec. Here he remained for the winter, but in the spring of the following year, 1642, he set out again for the Huron District. When near Three Rivers the expedition discovered a strange trail, and, after covering a few more miles, a volley rang out, and with it the cry of the Iroquois. A battle followed and during the encounter Fr. Jogues baptized one of his band. The victory was the Iroquois', and the major portion of the band were taken prisoners. After the baptismal ceremony the Indians were surprised to see Fr. Jogues walk up and take his place by the side of the other captives, and for his boldness he was rewarded with a blow on the head wit. a club. The prisoners were taken to Lake Champlain, where they were forced to run the gauntlet. They were then taken to the centre of the Village, where tortures peculiar to the Iroquois were administered, and Fr. Jogues' fingers actually gnawed off by the savages. But they did not intend that he should die yet, for he would afford them amusement for many a day to come. They were eventually taken to the Mohawk Village, and though many efforts were made to secure Fr. Jogues' release, all proved of no avail. After a lapse of thirteen months the Dutch Commander of New Amsterdam decreed that the Governor of Fort Orange should secure his release, at all hazards, and Fr. Jogues was warned to steal away at night to a boat, which would be placed at a specified spot for him. Night came and Fr. Jogues emerged to reconnitre and was half devoured by the savage and half-starved dogs which belonged to the Village. He lay down in despair but at dawn the form of a white man appeared and beckoned to him. He was taken aboard a ship which lay there for that purpose, and eventually landed in New Amsterdam. From here he set sail for France and reached Brittany on Christmas Day, 1643, and the Feast of the Ephiphany found him at the Jesuit College.

One would think that Father Jogues would be content to lead a quiet life after his experiences, but not so, for the very first ship that left after his return, bore him back again to Canada. He found that the Iroquois, who were at war with the French, were asking for a parley, and, on account of his knowledge of the people he was sent as embassador, and his mission was successful. Fr. Jogues then went into the Mohawk country to christianize them, but he was received with scowls.

One night an Indian appeared and invited him, not uncourteously, to a banquet. Fr. Jogues knew that to refuse would mean instant death, so he arose and followed the Indian. As he was entering a tent, into which he was invited, another Indian struck him a crashing blow on the head and thus he achieved his martyrdom.

BACK FROM THE WEST

Mr. and Mrs. David Wood, of this city, who have been in Milita, Man., for the last few months, returned to the city a few days ago and received a hearty welcome from their many friends here. Mr. and Mrs. Wood report having a delightful trip.

Mr. Wood is very much impressed with the west. He stated this morning that there were splendid chances for both young and old out there. Being in the farming district, he was better able to speak on this subject, than on the advancement and growth of the cities. However, he did not hesitate to say that the cities are going ahead very rapidly. Regarding the farming portion of this district, in which Mr. Wood was situated, he said there was just one mistake made out there. They do very little ploughing in the autumn, and then when the spring comes they have all the ploughing to do, and when it is done, the crops are planted late with the usual result, that they are late in the fall, and in a good many cases, get frozen, and acres of beautiful grain left to spoil on the fields and in the stook. This is a mistake all over the west, was the opinion of Mr. Wood. If they would get busy in the fall and get the land ready, the grain could be sowed a great deal earlier in the spring.

Regarding the cities, Mr. Wood thought that Calgary and Edmonton presented the greatest promise of any cities in Alberta. Winnipeg also was advancing rapidly, but being an older city, did not present the same chances for speculation. The number of Peterborough people in the west, was amazing. Mr. Wood stated that if he could dispose of his property in this city at a reasonable sum, he would make his permanent residence in the west, he is so impressed with the climate and conditions.

INAUGURAL MEETING OF CHANDOS COUNCIL

The municipal elections in the Township of Chandos were somewhat of an exciting nature. It was expected by many of the ratepayers, that Mr. Campbell would have been elected reeve by acclamation, but his opponents introduced irrelevant matters into the contest, and, as a result, it was a three-cornered conest.

The contest for councillors was also fought with considerable earnestness and the ratepayers are satisfied that a good council has been elected. Mr. Campbell, the Reeve, is very highly esteemed, and is worthy of the position. Mr. Post is a new man, 23 years of age, and should prove a valuable acquisition to the Council.

The personnel of the Council is as follows: For reeve, Mr. D. S. Campbell; councillors, Messrs. F. J. Rutledge, Joseph Whitmore, Michael Hobbins, and Warren Post.

The first meeting of the new Council was held on Monday last. Mr. L. Bullied was appointed Clerk in place of Mr. Andrews.

After the routine business had been disposed of the Council adjourned.

LITERARY EVENING AT Y. W. C. A.

It has ever been the purpose and endeavour of the Educational Committee of the Y. W. C. A. to arrange for and offer to their members the strongest possible programme of classes.

This has only been made possible by the generosity of our men and women of ability, who have given willingly of their time and talent to our Association.

The Literature Class has ever been considered one of the strongest on the educational schedule, and the mid-winter term programme is certainly no exception to the high character of the past seasons.

Instead of one teacher conducting the weekly class, ten of our literary friends have been asked to take one Tuesday evening each. The first evening will be taken on January 16, by Dr. D. B. Marsh, "A Night on the Carribean Sea," illustrated by some seventy-five beautiful pictures, shown by Mr. H. O. Firk. The second evening will be given on Jan. 23rd, when we will enjoy, with Judge Huycke, "Readings from Tennyson."

We hope to publish the full programme next week.

Butter 35c Per Lb.

The chilly atmosphere was responsible for a big decrease in the attendance on the market this morning. The familiar faces that generally line up on the square were this morning conspicuous by their absence. Prices varied to a great extent, but very little advance was recorded.

The outside market produce consisted of meats and hay, with a single load of potatoes, carrots and turnips. Baled hay was selling at 85c per cwt., loose hay at from $14 to $16; potatoes, $2 per bag; carrots, 60c bag; turnips, 40c bag. Eggs were selling at the usual price on the inside market, 35c and 37c for not strictly fresh, and 40c for fresh eggs. Butter advanced from 30c to 35c per lb. Quite a lot sold for 30c but it advanced during the morning to 35c. However about 11 o'clock some sold for 33c. It was not No. 1 quality. Other prices were as follows:

Hens—60c each.
Chickens—$1 to $1.10 each.
Ducks—$1.
Geese—$1.25 to $1.75.
Turkeys—$2 up to $4 according to size.
Pork—11c and 12c.
Beef—8c and 9c.
Lamb—11c to 17c.
Mutton—9c to 10c.
Potatoes—$2.
Farmers' hides—8c.
Butchers' hides—9c.
Live hogs—$6.50.
Dressed hogs—$8.50.

The supply of hogs is light at the present time owing to the heavy storm, but a better supply is anticipated. The demand is fair.

WHAT THE MINISTERS PAID FOR CAB FARE

Ottawa, Ont., Jan. 12.—The cab hire for Ministers at Ottawa is always an interesting item in the auditor's report, and the volume just issued is not an exception. It shows that last year the cab bills were as follows:

Hon. Sydney Fisher, $39.25.
Hon. Wm. Paterson, nothing.
Hon. W. S. Fielding, $2.
Hon. Wm. Templeman, nothing.
Hon. Frank Oliver, $12.50.
Hon. MacKenzie King, $36.50.
Hon. Speaker Marcil, $169.25.
Hon. L. P. Brodeur, nothing.
Sir F. W. Borden, $20.
Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, $1.75.
Sir Wilfrid Laurier, $85.75.
Hon. Wm. Pugsley, nothing.
Hon. G. P. Graham, nothing.
Hon. Charles Murphy, $1.50.
Sir Richard Cartwright, $415.
Sir Allen Aylesworth, $19.50.

The travelling expenses of the Ministers amounted to a substantial sum last year. Hon. Sydney Fisher expended $1,253; Hon. Wm. Paterson, $163; Hon. W. S. Fielding, $73.83; Hon. Wm. Templeman, $500; Hon. Frank Oliver, nothing; Sir Allen Aylesworth, $630; Hon. Jacques Bureau, $600; Hon. L. P. Brodeur, $1,605; Sir F. W. Borden, $800; Hon. R. Lemieux, $78.59; Hon. Charles Murphy, $203; Hon. Wm. Pugsley, $1,000; Hon. G. P. Graham, $70; and Sir Richard Cartwright, $300.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robert Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

A Letter From Rev. W. C. Riddiford

To the Editor of The Examiner,

Dear Sir,—I am glad that a correction has been made regarding the visit of Mr. Patrick Morgan, "late of the Capuchin Fathers." I stand corrected, perhaps, so far as I know, through my confusion of the common meaning which I have always attached to Father and Priest.

There is no profit made in misrepresenting religious facts. As a convert from Romish teaching, Mr. Morgan is coming to our city on our invitation to tell what he knows about the teachings of the Roman Catholic faith and to contrast them with those of the New Testament. Since he was a teacher in a Capuchin College in Wales, as we are informed by your informant, then he must at least know something about Rome's teachings; at any rate that is what he is coming for, and no other purpose.

He doubtless will explain his expulsion from a Roman Church college himself, but in the meantime what does the Catholic Record mean when among other things in its issue of July 17, 1909, the editor says: "Some one has sent us a booklet entitled, 'The Rock Infallible.' It is from the pen of Harold P. Morgan, an ex-Capuchin Franciscan Friar."

A month later, Aug. 28, 1909, the editor quoted from a letter which he informs his readers he received from the professors of St. Cuthbert's College, Ushaw, Durham, England. The editorial runs like this.

"We wrote to Ushaw for information about Morgan. The college authorities discovered that he was by character unfit for the priestly state. After his departure from Ushaw, Morgan went to the Franciscans in North Wales."

Again in its issue of Oct. 8, 1910, The Catholic Record has this to say of Mr. Morgan: "He (that is Morgan) spent some time at Ushaw College, which he left with a certificate of good character in 1906." Once more The Record attacks this enlightened monk, or rather teacher, of the Roman Catholic Church, and in its issue of December 17, 1910, a letter signed by the present guardian of the monastry of St. David's, St. Aspah, Wales, in which your informant states Mr. Morgan studied and taught, "Patrick Morgan studied at Ushaw." He was certified as of good conduct and enjoyed freedom from any taint, which place he left on the 19th of April, 1906." Now would that be said of a man dismissed for the drug habit. If such were the case, why did the guardian certify to Mr. Morgan's good character in The Catholic Record, and say he "enjoyed freedom from any taint." Let us be fair; come out in the open, and sign our names to any facts we have to state about men or things of public interest.

Yours for the truth, as it is in Christ Jesus.

W. C. RIDDIFORD.

STORIES OF ROSSINI

HIS DREAD OF THIRTEEN AND FRIDAY AND A COINCIDENCE.

Rossini had scant patience with amateur composers. One such once accompanied the manuscript of his latest composition with a Stilton cheese, of which he knew Rossini to be fond. He hoped of course to have a letter praising his work. A letter came, but all it said was: "Thanks, I like the cheese very much."

When Rossini was rehearsing one of his operas in a small theatre in Italy he noticed that the horn was out of tune.

"Who is that playing the horn in such an unholy way?" he demanded.

"It is I," said a tremulous voice.

"Ah, it is you, is it? Well, go right home." It was his own father.

Rossini's whimsicality extended even to his birthday. Having been born on Feb. 29, in leap year, he had of course a birthday only once in four years, and when he was seventy-two he facetiously invited his friends to celebrate his eighteenth birthday.

All his life he had a dread of the number thirteen, as well as of Fridays. He never would invite more than twelve to dinner, and once when he had fourteen he made sure of an understudy who would, at a moment's notice, have been ready to come should one guest have missed. And, though this was a double superstition, he died on Friday, Nov. 13. — New York Sun.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES

RED ROBIN

Take a pound of lump sugar and put it into a stewpan with one-half pint of water, and boil till it becomes very thick; then add about two pounds of apples, peeled and cored, and the grated rind of a lemon; boil all together till it is quite stiff; keep stirring all the time. Pour it into a buttered mould, and when cold turn out and serve with custard around.

CORN MUFFINS.

Sift together one and two-thirds of a cup of flour; one cup corn meal; two scant teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Beat two tablespoonfuls of butter to a cream with three tablespoonfuls sugar; and add to them three beaten eggs. Dilute this with a pint of milk. Beat hard and put in buttered tins.

FRIED RABBIT.

Have a rabbit properly cleaned. Then wash it in several waters and cut it into eight pieces. Parboil it for 20 minutes at least. Then drain well and when ready to fry put plenty of dripping or lard in a frying pan and when hot put in the rabbit first rolled in beaten egg and bread crumbs seasoned with salt and pepper. Fry a nice brown.

ONION SAUCE.

Take five white onions, one cup of hot milk, butter the size of an egg, salt and pepper to taste. Peel the onions and boil until tender, then drain and mash fine. Stir the onions into the hot milk, then add the melted butter and seasoning, and a teaspoonful of minced parsley. Let it boil up once and serve very hot.

AN UNFORESEEN CALAMITY.

In his own mind Abel Saunders was a man marked out by destiny for misfortune; in the minds of his neighbours it was a wonder that such a shiftless man got on as well as Abel did.

When he appeared at the door of the resident who had ordered a dozen eggs the night before he unfolded a much rumpled paper and took from it four eggs.

"That's all there is left o' what I started with," he said lugubriously. "If 't had been anybody but me they'd 've got here all right. But the four little holes that was in the bottom o' the bag—I saw 'em, but there wa'n't any one of 'em half big enough for an egg to come through—if they didn't all join together when I was most over here! If I hadn't 've been as sorry as a man like me has to learn to be I couldn't have saved yo a single egg!"

DOINGS IN THE HOUSE

Opposition Ministers Score Government for Dismissals

TRINITY OF EXECUTIONERS

Ottawa, Jan. 13.—Parliament was enlightened and entertained, rather than edified, by an exposition of the Government's position and practice in connection with the spoils system of Wednesday afternoon. The declarations were drawn by a vigorous attack by the Liberal benches on the wholesale dismissal of officials without investigation, which has succeeded the advent of Mr. Borden's coalition forces to the seats of authority. They emanated from Hon. J. D. Reid, Minister of Customs, who shares with his Nationalist colleagues, Hon. Messrs. Monk and Pelletier, the distinction of forming the membership of what is popularly termed in Ottawa the "trinity of executioners."

Major Currie undertook the defence of the Government by reading of dismissals in 1896.

The member for North Simcoe, however, was not responible for the introduction of a discussion of the spoils system, which was brought up by the Opposition the moment the House went into supply at 3.30 p.m.

Orators on a former occasion when the spoils system was under discussion harked back to the time of the Tory regime before '96, but Major Currie went them several better. Not only did he recall the days of the infamous Judge Jeffries in the reign of James II., he even went back for one of his illustrations to a date foreceding the Christian era.

G. H. Bradbury (Selkirk) introduced a bill to amend the navigable waters protection act, with the object of preventing the pollution by the sewage of Winnipeg, St. Boniface, Brandon and Portage la Prairie of the waters of the Red River, with which the health of the residents along its banks has been threatened since the construction of the St. Andrew's locks, with resultant stretch of slack water extended as far as Winnipeg.

When the House went into supply in the afternoon, a vigorous attack was made on the Minister of Customs, Hon. J. D. Reid, on the spoils system, the attack largely centering around the dismissal of Thomas C. Bryan, a preventive officer at Windsor, Ont., and the appointment of Mr. McHugh in his stead. The Minister declared that the displaced official was only a temporary appointee, and, moreover, an active partisan.

O. J. Wilcox, (N. Essex), on whose recommendation the dismissal was made, defended his action in the matter. It was the case of a man appointed after the dissolution, though before the election, who had displaced a man against whom no charges had ever been made. He had no apology for reinstating him.

A. P. Clarke (S. Essex) declared that Bryan had been refused an investigation.

The Minister declared that no investigation was necessary, as a member of the House had made the recommendation on his responsibility as a member.

Mr. Clarke stated that the policy of the late Government had been to appoint young men, an age limit of 36 years being placed.

The Minister of Customs did not think this was correct, as men had been appointed whose ages run all the way up to 75 years. For his own part he had never appointed men over 38 years of age except in very special cases.

J. H. Sinclair (Guysboro) challenged the Premier to make a statement as to the position of the Government on dismissals and appointments. He asked Hon. Col. Hughes what he thought of the dismissal of Mr. Baldwin of Montreal because he had had the courage to protest against disloyal statements made by Nationalist speakers.

Hon. J. D. Reid stated that this man was undoubtedly an active partisan. The whole front page of a newspaper in the constituency in which he resided was occupied by a virulent article written by Baldwin and adorned with his portrait. This article referred to more matters than the one adverted to by Mr. Sinclair.

"I may say," declared the Minister of Customs, "that any official the moment he leaves his office and enters the political arena, no matter to whom he refers, will not remain in the service."

Shuster's Aides Ignored.

Teheran, Jan. 13.—The treasury crisis has taken an extraordinary turn. Acting under instructions of the Cabinet, M. Mornard, the Belgian ex-director of Persian customs, yesterday summarily took possession of the treasury offices, refusing to recognize the status of F. E. Cairns, the American, who was left in charge of the treasury by W. Morgan Shuster, the deposed treasurer-general, when the latter left Teheran Thursday for the United States.

M. Mornard, in acquainting Mr. Cairns and the other American officials of the Cabinet's message, told them that if there were further delay in turning over the treasury, not only would they be dismissed from their positions, but punished. This procedure is all the more inexplicable as Mr. Cairns has shown no disposition to retard the work of transferring the office to the commission appointed to take over the duties of the treasurer-generalship.

GRAY HAIR MAKES YOU LOOK OLD

Use Wyeth Sage and Sulphur and Your Gray Hair Will Quickly Vanish

Gray hair is a mark of age, and nothing that can be said as to its beauty will offset the disadvantages of this mark of age set upon your brow.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy darkens the hair and restores it to its youthful beauty. Our grandmothers and their grandmothers before them used sage and sulphur for darkening their hair. Nothing has ever been found more effective for this purpose than these two time-honoured remedies, but Wyeth, a modern chemist, has combined the two with other ingredients, which makes a delightful hair dressing for the hair, and which not only removes every trace of dandruff but promotes the growth of the hair. It also stops the hair from falling out, and makes it beautiful.

All druggists are authorized to refund the money if it fails to do exactly as represented.

Don't neglect your hair and don't resort to old-time hair dyes. Get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur from your druggist to-day, and notice the difference in your hair after a few days' use.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

HARD TO FILL JOB.

French Statesmen Avoid the Position of Prime Minister.

Paris, Jan. 13.—The gravity of the existing Ministerial crisis, the solution of which is not yet in sight was shown by the fact that President Fallieres yesterday summoned in conference the leading statesmen of France to discuss the best means for the formation of a Government strong enough to meet all current problems, both domestic and foreign, but especially foreign.

Leon Bourgeois, a former Prime Minister and at one time or another the holder of nearly every portfolio in the Cabinet, who in recent years always has been regularly offered the Premiership with the downfall of Cabinets, yesterday, as in the past, declined the honor, advancing the state of his health as the reason.

Theophile Delcasse, Minister of Marine in the late Cabinet, was next asked by M. Fallieres to form a Ministry, and there was considerable surprise last night when it was learned he had declined the offer and recommended Senator Raymond Poincare, a former Minister of Public Works and Minister of Finance. The exact reason for M. Delcasse's refusal is unknown.

M. Poincare, when the office was tendered him, requested of President Fallieres time for reflection. He will not give a definite answer before to-night. In the event of his refusal, it seems most likely that former Premier Briand may be recalled to conduct the Government.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The appointment of Mgr. Boggiani, Bishop of Adria, as apostolic delegate to Mexico has been confirmed.

The Italian fleet in the Red Sea encountered Jan. 7 and destroyed several Turkish gunboats and captured a Turkish armed yacht.

Two cases of smallpox have been reported at Brussels, Ont. Dr. Hayes has been sent by the Provincial Health Department to investigate.

Throughout the province the cold was still intense yesterday, especially in the north. It was 20 below zero at Sault Ste. Marie at 8 o'clock last night.

A despatch from Seoul says Chinese emissaries are collecting money from their countrymen in Korea for the revolution and are spreading revolutionary doctrines.

The New York Gas Workers' Union after an all-night session voted early yesterday to order a strike of the 32,000 men employed by the gas companies of Greater New York.

The Government has asked Messrs. McIsaac, Calvert and Young, N.T.R. commissioners, to resign. The construction of the road will be in the hands of Major Leonard and Mr. MacPherson.

Through a scaffold collapsing, four men were thrown to the ground in Ottawa yesterday. They are John Jordan, scalp concussion; James Bourne, back broken and unlikely to recover; W. Arnold, internal injuries, and M. O'Brien badly shaken up.

Nanking May Be Capital.

Pekin, Jan. 13.—The Manchu Princes of the Imperial Clan met yesterday and resolved to advise the throne to retire immediately to Jeohl, about 190 miles to the northeast of Pekin, where the members of the Imperial family have usually retired during the summer.

The decision of the princes has aroused apprehension of a possible transfer of the Chinese capital to Nanking, which would open up a wide field for foreign advanture in Northern China. It would also accentuate the disorganization of trade.

The patriotic fund being raised among the Manchu princes to suppress the revolution, has realized 850,000 taels, (approximately $566,000).

Miners May Not Strike.

London, Jan. 13.—There was no change in the labor situation last night. The result of a ballot of the miners is not yet available and it is likely that it will not be published until next week. There is little doubt that the necessary two-thirds favoring a strike will be obtained, but it is believed a compromise will be arranged.

Big Strike of Garment Workers.

New York, Jan. 13.—At the headquarters of the United Garment Workers of America here, it is announced that preparations are being made for a secret ballot on a proposed nation-wide strike. It is claimed that the strike, if called, will affect 125,000 garment workers in this city, and 250,000 throughout the country.

SOCIALISTS IN LEAD

They Make Extensive Gains in German Elections

AT EXPENSE OF FRIENDS

Berlin, Jan. 13.—The expected swing towards Socialism in the Reichstag elections held throughout the empire yesterday was realized, but the early returns, to the surprise of most persons, showed that it was accomplished far more at the expense of the Radicals and Liberals than of the Centrists and Conservatives.

Up to 12.30 o'clock yesterday morning results had been received from 131 constituencies, in which 84 members definitely were elected and 47 reballots will be necessary. The members elected include four Conservatives, thirty-nine Centrists, two Liberals, no Radicals, thirty-eight Socialists and one Dane.

The Socialist net gain by the above figures is thirteen seats, they having won seven from the Radicals, four from the Liberals, one from the Centrists and three from the Conservatives. They lost, however, two seats to the Liberals. The Socialists will participate in thirty-three of the forty-seven reballots.

AUGUST BEBEL.

Voting throughout the Empire for the election of members of the Reichstag began at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. The weather was clear, but extremely cold. The conditions generally, however, were conducive to an active participation in the polling, and a heavy vote was generally reported.

Detachments of troops belonging to the garrison were held in readiness and special arrangements were made for guarding the royal palaces. The precautions were mainly designed to cope with possible Socialist demonstrations in the streets.

Emperor William, who at the election in 1907, awaited the results in the imperial palaces in Berlin, was informed of the returns this time in his palace at Potsdam, an arrangement which was considered in some quarters as a symptom of the expected outcome.

The interest in the elections in Berlin was largely concentrated on the so-called "Ministerial precinct" in the centre of the city, where Imperial Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg and most of the other Ministers have their names on the voting registers.

The situation of parties in the last Reichstag was as follows: Roman Catholic Centre, 105; Conservatives, 60; Social Democrats, 53; National Liberals, 43; Radicals, 25; Imperial Conservatives, 25; Poles, 19; other various groups, 43; non-party members, 29. Total, 397.

The parties number about fifteen, including the groups and fractions of minor parties; but, generally speaking, they may be divided into those of the Right, Centre, and Left.

The parties of the Right are the Conservatives, the Imperial Conservatives, the Agrarians, and four groups of antisemites.

The Centre consists of the Roman Catholic party; the Left includes the three Liberal and radical groups (known also under the united name of the Progressive party) and the Socialists. Apart from these parties there are some others, which are important and which cannot be classified in any of the above-mentioned groups; for example, the National Liberals, who claim to belong to the Left, but who generally vote with the Right.

There also are the Nationalist groups—the Poles, the Alsatians, and the Danes—and finally there is the Guelph party, which represents a small faction whose political ambitions centre in the revival of the Kingdom of Hanover as one of the confederated states of the empire.

This extraordinary number of parties naturally means a corresponding number of candidates to seek election. Although the Reichstag only counts 397 members, the number of candiates at the election is over 2,000.

For weeks an exciting campaign has been conducted throughout the country, the opposition parties taking advantage of the Government's recent failures on international policy to urge the electorate to change its rulers, and the Conservative parties impressing on the people that every vote given against the present Government will be a vote for socialism, internationalism, and anarchy.

Since the last election every by-election has been a triumph for the Socialists, and thus the prediction of Prince Buelow.

Breaks Record in Michigan.

BABES ARE BURNED.

Toronto, Jan. 13.—Two children were burned to death in their home at 31 Bird avenue, Earlscourt, in a fire which broke out shortly before noon yesterday. They were Irene Dillon, two years of age, and Francis Dillon, nine months of age. The fire was caused by the explosion of a coal-oil stove. The dead are the two youngest of six children of Mr. and Mrs. David Dillon, five of whom were in the house at the time.

Kate, aged eight years, the oldest of those who escaped, says that the children were playing in the kitchen, the stove which was in the hall exploded. She, with Madge, aged six years, and John, aged five years, ran out into the yard, leaving the two younger and helpless children in the burning house. When the alarm spread, Mrs. Corduroy and Mrs. Taylor, near neighbors, endeavored to rescue the little ones, but were driven back by the flames.

The firemen were a long time in coming, for the nearest hall, Ossington avenue and Keele street, are from a mile and a half to two miles distant. When the firemen arrived, part of the walls, the roof and floors had fallen. The water was immediately turned on and a few moments later several firemen forced their way into the smoking ruins. William Everton of the Ossington avenue hall came upon the two tiny bodies floating in the water in the cellar. They were burned to a crisp.

The father, who is a carpenter and who was at work at the St. Clair avenue separate school, when the mother was relieving the caretaker, are prostrated with grief. The mother says that when she left the house there was no fire in the hall. All the little girl can say is that the stove exploded in the hall, so it appears that the children must have tried to light it and thus caused the fire.

Will Go To Borden.

Toronto, Jan. 13.—Premier Borden and the Dominion Government will shortly have to face the delicate task of dealing with the ne temere decree. The Evangelical Alliance held a lengthy meeting to discuss the situation yesterday, and the trend of thought was in the direction of going to the Dominion Government as the next step with a request for the Government to submit a stated case and carry it through if necessary to the Privy Council of the Empire.

Consideration was given to the suggestion of a mass meeting at Massey Hall, but no decision regarding it was made. Dr. N. W. Hoyles presided.

Rev. E. D. Silcox, secretary, produced a large roll of petitions, and stated that the alliance would soon have an aggregate of 300,000 signatures.

The petitions ask for the submission of a stated case to the courts by the Dominion Government.

The Evangelical Alliance will meet again at an early date at the call of the president.

Canadian Policies Unchanged.

London, Jan. 13.—The Times, editorially reviewing the Canadian Parliamentary prospects, thinks it extremely unlikely that the next few months will see any strikingly new development of Canadian policy, because the most important problems have already been reserved for prolonged investigation. It commends Mr. Borden for his decision to take personal charge of the imperial and foreign policy.

Aviators Aid Sheriff.

Los Angles, Cal., Jan. 3.—Four aviators, sworn in as deputy sheriffs, flew into the mountain country around Calabasas yesterday in search of the two men who wounded a deputy sheriff in a fight at San Fernando Wednesday and escaped.

The aviators, Glen Martin, Howard Gill, Philip Parmalee and Clifford Turpin, agreed to seek the fugitives, as automobiles could not follow them.

Simeon Stodgell Dead.

Walkerville, Jan. 13.—Simeon Stodgell, a well-known resident of this place, died of pneumonia Thursday night, aged 74.

Murder Trial Stirs France.

Paris, Jan. 13.—A sensational murder trial in which several members of an aristocratic family are involved opened yesterday at Caen and is being followed throughout France with absorbing interest. A youth, aged 18, is accused of brutally slaying his father, the Baron de Couvrigny at the instigation of his mother and with the complicity of other members of the family.

Don't Like Panama Policy.

London, Jan. 13.—The Chamber of Commerce yesterday passed a resolution that the chamber should make representations to the Government on the suggestion contained in President Taft's recent message to Congress, that preference should be given to American ships as regards tolls to be charged for passage through the Panama Canal.

Nearing Chief's Body.

New York, Jan. 3.—The discovery yesterday of the lantern and gauntlet of Battalion Chief Walsh, who lost his life in the Equitable building fire, gave rise last night that his body, which still lies buried in the ice-encrusted ruins of the structure, would soon be found.

About $158,000,000 in securities where removed yesterday from the offices of August Belmont and company.

Ortie McManigal Tells of Operations in Buffalo

A MYSTERIOUS STRANGER

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 13.—Descriptions of how Ortie McManigal with a suit case filled with explosives and time fuses, sneaked about the streets of Pittsburg, Pa., and Buffalo, N.Y., and met men who discussed or picked out "open shop jobs" that were to be blown up, together with photographs of wrecked places, which were forwarded to John J. McNamara, were presented before the federal grand jury in its investigation of the dynamite conspiracy yesterday.

Several witnesses from Buffalo and Pittsburg, whose names were withheld, were questioned, in an effort to discover who was involved with McManigal in explosions there. The confessed dynamiter made three visits to Buffalo, the first in July, 1908, when he blew up a bridge. It developed that McNamara, as secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, obtained, whenever possible, photographs of the structure which McManigal blew up in order to keep a check on the dynamiter in paying him "fees" out of the $1,000 a month allowed McNamara for "organizing purposes." Many of these photographs are in the hands of the Government.

Just before he went to Buffalo, McManigal says he tried to quit the dynamiting business, but he was visited at his home in Chicago by a man whose name is still a secret.

"This man told me that I did not dare quit," said McManigal. "He told me I had gone too far and I would have to stick to it. Finally we both went to Buffalo. The man with me said he wanted to get to Canada for the explosion. I took the dynamite out of my suitcase and planted it with a sixty-foot fuse. It blew up that night."

The witnesses from Pittsburg are believed to have been asked about men whom McManigal met there in reference to an explosion at McKees Rocks, Pa., which is within reach of Rochester, Pa., where the dynamiters kept stores of explosives.

Japs In Hawaii.

Washington, Jan. 13.—A statement that there were 30,000 former Japanese soldiers in Hawaii, who would support Japan if that country and the United States went to war, created a deep impression on the House committee on military affairs yesterday when Major-General Wm. H. Carter, assistant chief of staff of the army, made the assertion.

Gen. Carter expressed the belief of the army general staff officers that the U. S. must greatly enlarge its military force, or dispose of some of its insular possessions.

The strengthening of fortifications and the enlargement of the standing army in Hawaii and the Philippines must be continued to a point where an enlargement of the army will be necessary, he said. Under the reserve system of Japan, the former soldiers come into service at once if needed. He urged the creation of an American army reserve.

Riot of Woollen Operatives.

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 13.—The mill district of this city was thrown into a state of disorder yesterday by a riotous outbreak on the part of hundreds of Italians and other foreign operatives who left their work at the Wood, Ayer and Washington mills of the American Woollen Co. because they objected to a reduction of two hours' pay a week under the workings of the new 54-hour law.

Before the trouble ended several persons had been severely injured, a number of girls operatives had fainted and six arrests had been made by the police.

Nearly 11,000 operatives were idle yesterday afternoon and the feeling was general that the strike might involve the 25,000 mill workers in the city to-day or early next week.

Who Will Be Governor?

Ottawa, Jan. 13.—A spirited race is in progress for the governorship of the Yukon. The post is practically vacant now.

Govespor Henderson some time ago obtained six months' leave of absence and it has been well understood that at the end of the term he would retire. The succession lies between Hon. A. S. Goodeve, Conservative M.P. for Kootenay, a former member of the McBride Government; J. A. McKinnon of Dawson and George Black of Dawson. The Kootenay member, who was very much in the running during the formation of the Borden Cabinet, is said to have a good chance of securing the post in the Yukon, if the choice does not fall on Mr. Black.

Fire at Kingston.

Kingston, Jan. 13.—With the thermometer 15 below zero the firemen had a lively fire to fight in one of the main business blocks in Princess street yesterday afternoon. Fire broke out in the shoe shop of John Green and it spread so rapidly that he and his wife narrowly escaped. The tobacco store of William McGlade, next door, caught fire. The loss will amount to about $3,000, partly insured.

Robert J. Wright, Labor candidate in Cataraqui ward at the municipal election, was defeated by Allan Stroud by three votes and has asked for a recount.

Back From Panama.

Ottawa, Jan. 13.—A. St. Laurent, assistant Deputy Minister of Public Works, E. J. Chapleau, and C. E. Conibe of the engineering staff returned last evening from the Panama Canal to which they were sent to inspect. The object was to get pointers in the construction and administration of such a stupendous undertaking. The three gentlemen state that that they were received most courteously and afforded every facility for obtaining information and data which will be of much value when Canada embarks on similar undertakings.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Peterboros Win First Game On Road Were Victorious At Belleville By 4 To 1

Capt. Park's Men Failed to Show Their Usual Form but Had Enough on the Belleville Seven to Win Handily.

WERE BEHIND AT THE HALF

Special Staff Correspondence.

BELLEVILLE JAN. 12.—Peterborough Intermediates added another win to their string and took a further step towards the championship of this district here to-night, when they defeated Belleville by 4 goals to 1, in an exciting, but not too fast game of hockey. Belleville led, at half-time, by one goal to nothing, in spite of the fact that the Petes had out-played the homesters during the period. There was little to the second-half, but Peterborough, the blue and white striped team banging in four goals while Belleville failed to tally. Peterborough had just struck their gait when the final gong sounded, and in the last fifteen minutes showed their real form for the only time in the game. They were sweeping down, three or four in a line, and working in on the nets with a speed and a vim that was absent during the first three quarters of the game and Belleville had pretty well stopped.

It was not a good game, by any means. The checking was close and on the part of Belleville, was not any too clean. During the first half Peterborough failed to get going, and, although they were working hard, their efforts were not effective. Their passing was not the sharp, accurate kind that usually characterizes their play, and when they did get in close they either shot right at goal-keper Lafleur, or wide. They were holding Belleville well in hand but were not doing much in the goal-getting line themselves. That was practically all there was to the first half. Peterborough got together in the second half and after that Belleville never had a chance, although at times Capt. Park and his men were not playing their usual game. The Belleville team checked vigorously, laying on the sad with a hearty good will and getting away with a lot of hooking as well. Chaucer Elliott handled the whistle impartially, but might have been a little more strict in regard to the Belleville method of checking. However, the boys escaped with nothing worse than a few bruises and won the game, so that no harm was done. Belleville has a pretty chunky, hard-checking team with no particular class attached to them; but their peculiar methods made them an awkward proposition to score on. They had considerable speed, but very little team work. On the whole, however, they were stronger than was expected, and will give Peterborough a good argument when they play at Brock Street Rink on Tuesday night.

The Peterborough team, with some fifty supporters, arrived on a special G. T. R. train, leaving Peterborough at 4.30. Belleville was reached in ample time for the game. The extreme cold weather kept many fans at home, and the crowd was not as large as was expected. However, a jolly crowd went down and the trip was greatly enjoyed. Belleville fans turned out pretty well, but they were not very enthusiastic, it seeming to be a foregone conclusion in the Bay of Quinte city that Peterborough would win. It was apparently this feeling that caused the Petes to be so long in getting started. They had been told so often that they had an easy thing that they had not their usual ginger in the opening period. To make matters worse the timekeepers had a dispute over the time played in the first half. When the Belleville timer declared the half was up, the Peterborough watch said there was eleven minutes to go. Referee Elliott decided to split the difference and play five minutes extra in the second period.

There was no particular star on the Peterborough team—that is, on last night's play. Everybody worked hard but until the later stages, failed to get under way as usual. They had hard luck in their shooting and in their passing, as well, and with any kind of a horse shoe hanging around them, should have won by a wider margin. Detocher was good, as usual, the only one that beat him being poked in from a scrimmage. Bond and Bearss were a strong defence. There was no one on the forward line who stood out above the others on the night's work. All were working hard and all had equally bad luck in their marksmanship. Park was especially unfortunate inasmuch as the Belleville team smashed three sticks in his hands just as he was in position to shoot.

For Belleville, Lafleur, in goal, played a splendid game. He is either a remarkable goal-keeper, or else he had all kinds of luck, as he stopped a score of shots, some of them, after his defence had been entirely beaten. Wallace and Connolly checked hard and the latter did some nice rushing. Gerow, the rover, was the best of the forward line. The team is more effective on the defensive than on the attack and will not be too easy a proposition even in Peterborough.

When Chaucer Elliott sent them away, the checking was close from the start, and for a while neither team could break away. Coughlin was the first to get an opportunity, but Lafleur blocked his shot from close in. Derocher stopped a good one from Gerow; Bond was off for tripping and was followed by Bearss, for the same offence. Connolly was fenced for cross-checking. The play was close, with honours about even. Coughlin made the prettiest rush of the night, carrying the puck from his own goal, the length of the rink, but no score materialised. Bearss drew another penalty. Finally Symons scored for Belleville from a scrimmage. There was nothing further doing until half-time.

Peterborough showed better form in the second half. They went out as if they meant business, and shortly after the half opened, Park's took a pass from the corner by Giroux and slipped the rubber behind Lafleur, tying up the game. Connolly and Symons of the Belleville team, were off for two minute periods within a few minutes of each other for mixing it up. Peterborough were not long in forging ahead. Park came up the centre with a nice rush and shot dead on at Lafleur, who stopped it neatly. Kelly, however, followed in like a flash and poked the rubber in before the Belleville goaler could clear.—Peterborough 2, Belleville 1.

Park was off for slashing, but Peterborough continued to have the better of the going; Giroux, Kelly, and Park came up together, and Kelly slammed another goal past Lafleur.—Peterborough 3, Belleville 1.

A few minutes later, Park made it 4-1 on another pretty piece of combination, and this ended the scoring.

The summary—

1—Belleville, Symons.
Half-time.
2—Peterborough, Park.
3—Peterborough, Kelly.
4—Peterborough, Kelly.
5—Peterborough, Park.

Great Interest In Monday's Big Game With Lindsay Midgets

Bunch of Fans Will Accompany the Young Petes to Scugogville for the Return Game

There is great interest in the Junior O. H. A. game at Lindsay on Monday night, when Peterborough will play the return game with the Lindsay Midgets, and a big crowd of fans will accompany the young Petes to Scugogville on the special G. T. R. train which leaves at 7 o'clock sharp. The extremely low fare of 75c., which has been secured, is proving attractive, and as the Juniors have gained a big following by their fine playing in their home games, they will have a lusty band of rooters with them Monday night. The game will be worth going further than Lindsay to see. The Midgets will be a different proposition on their own ice, especially as the Petes will be without Coughlin, but Capt. Hall's youngsters are determined to pull out a victory. They had a lively practice at Brock Street rink last night, and the team is in the best of shape, fit to play the game of their lives in Scugogville.

The team will line up as follows:
Goal—Dwyer.
Point—Milloy.
Cover—Kenneally.
Rover—Weir.
Centre—Hall.

The round-trip fare will be, adults, 75c., children, 40c. The train will leave here at 7 o'clock, returning after the game.

Game On Tuesday Night Next Will Be Fine Exhibition

There will be a lively game of hockey at Brock street rink on Tuesday night next when the Belleville intermediates will be here for the return game with the locals. The Bay of Quinte team showed itself as a surprise last night and with the contemplated couple of changes in the line-up will give Peterborough a hard fight for the honours next week, although beaten at home by a small score last night. This will be the only home game for either of the Peterborough teams next week, so that hockey lovers will turn out en masse for this fixture. Belleville has a fast skating, heavy-checking team who will prove awkward adversaries and the game should be well worth seeing.

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

The standing of this district in the Intermediate O. H. A. is as follows:

	W.	L.	G'ls. For	G'ls. A't

PUGILISTIC NOTES

(BY JIM FLYNN.)

CHICAGO, Jan. 11.—In signing articles to meet Jack Johnson for the heavyweight championship of the world, I realize the burden which has been placed on my shoulders. I fully appreciate that when I crawl through the ropes to do battle with Johnson I will have the best wishes of four out of five persons in the world.

I also am aware of the fact that I will have to meet one of the cleverest fighters that ever drew on a glove, and I know I must be in the best possible shape to entertain any hope of beating him. Since I beat Al Kaufman at Kansas City and won pugilistic recognition I have taken the best care of myself, and when the world proclaimed me the logical white hope after I beat Carl Morris in New York so decisively in ten rounds I left nothing undone to improve my condition.

Would Like Another Twenty-five Pounds.

I do not smoke or drink. I keep regular hours, and I have my three squares at regular intervals. I do a little work every day to keep from taking on too much weight, but I do feel certain that I surely would beat Johnson if I weighed about twenty-five pounds more. In condition, I will weigh about 178 pounds, while I expect Johnson will weigh around the 220-pound mark.

Although he has the advantage in weight, height, and reach, I will give him a battle he will long remember. The tougher they are the better I like them. Give me the fellow, any old time, who will stand toe to toe with me and exchange wallops, instead of the fellow who has to be chased all around the ring, or else is holding on continually. I appreciate the fact that Johnson is a fighter and a boxer and I also have heard a great deal about that right uppercut. Of course Jim Flynn has no defence for this? Flynn has no wallop that has put Caponi to sleep twice and which sent Kaufman to dreamland, and which beat Carl Morris into a pulp?

Flynn Will Be Right There.

From now until the day of the match I suppose all the talk will be what Johnson is going to do to Flynn. Believe me, Flynn will be right there waiting to take all and anything Johnson hands me, but he will have to take something in return. He will not find me running away or hanging on, for my present plans are to make a rushing fight of it. Johnson is a human being like the rest of us, and he can be hurt. Tommy Burns broke a couple of his ribs, and I believe I can hit just as hard as the Canuck did.

I do not entertain any fear at being beaten by Al Palzer in New York on 15th February, although he beat Kaufman in shorter time than I did. If I beat this fellow decisively I believe I will be the only logical white man in the world to give battle to Johnson. I do not care to meet all these second-rate hopes. When I beat Caponi in three rounds a short time ago a number of persons said Tony "flopped." If he had gone along with me the holler would have been that I was a dub and would have no chance with Johnson.

Avoids Too Many Advisers

As a result I get it both ways. I am strongly in favour of my manager, Jack Curley, calling off my match with Kubick at Toronto. This fellow has not beaten anyone, and I will get little credit if I beat him. In my estimation Kaufman, Morris and Palzer are the only white hopes. I have beaten two of those and I am going to do my best to stop Palzer. That will be my last fight until I step into the ring with Johnson.

In training for this fight I am going to insist upon one thing, and that is I am not going to have too many advisers. I want about two men in whom I have confidence to be with me at all times. This idea of having one fellow tell me one thing and then some other guy come along and tell me just the opposite is "bunk." I know Tommy Ryan knows the boxing game and I know he can teach me a defence to stop a lot of Johnson's blows.

As far as my offensive fighting is concerned I am not going to allow any one to change my style. I guess, if it is good enough to work me to my present position, it is effective enough for me to use with Johnson. I believe in letting a fellow alone if he has natural ability to fight, play baseball, or do anything else. When Jeffries was training for Johnson I firmly believe he had too many advisers in his camp.

When the day of an important fight approaches a fighter wants to be left alone. He does not want everyone telling him what he should do when he gets into the ring, and all that truck. This is one of the reasons why Jeffries went fishing so often and received so much criticism for his training.

I intend to go to Syracuse in a few days and do all my work there for my fight with Palzer. That is Ryan's home, and the sooner I master some of his defensive tactics the sooner I will be able to use them in actual training bouts. Outside of Ryan, I do not know who will be in my training camp. I have left all that to Curley, and I am sure his selection will suit me.

The public may be sure I am not afraid of Johnson. I know I will give him a hard, tough fight, and I believe I have an even chance of beating him. The longer the fight goes the better chance I will have. He has not fought in nearly two years, while I have been scrapping right along. He may think he is in good condition, but when he receives some of my "holiday punches" in his stomach he will feel his title slipping. Flynn will not stop until he is put to dreamland and Johnson is going to have a much harder time to do this than he expects.

BASEBALL TALK

"Study the position of the batter's feet," writes "Billy" Evans. Clark Griffith, who will manage the Washington Americans next year, says all the really successful pitchers must. In his day Griffith was one of the greatest pitchers in the country.

Griffith had a slow ball that was a beauty, and then he had another one that was a little slower. He had a fine curve, but just fair speed. But Griffith had plenty of gray matter, and he always used it to advantage when on the rubber. His chance of pace was perfect, and he usually had the batter who tried to figure what was coming standing on his head. During the Cleveland-Cincinnati series, last fall I was discussing pitchers and batters with Griffith. I asked what helped him most during his career as a whirled, and he instantly replied: "Making a study of the position the batter took at the plate was my very best asset as a twirler."

"All the great twirlers of the present day are men who make a study of the batter's feet," said Griffith, who had warmed up to the discussion. "No brainier pitcher ever lived than Mathewson, and that is one of the first things he does when the batter steps up to the plate. Some pitchers get it into their heads that a curve ball is the only thing to use on a certain batter. Perhaps a curve ball is the batter's weakness, provided he takes his regular position in the batter's box. All batters are now dummies, even if they are glaringly weak on a certain ball. They finally discover that certain pitchers never use anything but a curve on them. When these pitchers are working, they hug the plate as closely as the umpires will allow them. Often they hit a curve ball hard, when standing in such a position, whereas had they assumed their regular stand they would have been made to look foolish. The pitcher cannot understand the situation. He comes back to the bench insisting the batter is no longer weak on curve balls.

"Take pitchers like Mathewson and they are never so fooled. Say, in a game on Monday, Matty has made a certain player look foolish on his curve. Perhaps the player has been unfortunate enough to have fanned three or four times. The batter has come to the conclusion that next time he faces Matty he will be prepared to hit such a ball. Mathewson is selected to work against the same club on Thursday. When this batter comes to the plate, Matty observes he hugs it closely. 'He is getting a toehold for my curve,' reflects the great twirler. 'I'll just fool him and skim his letters with a fast one.' Now this same player standing in his regular position just murders a fast ball. Hugging the plate, expecting the curve, he is unable to do anything with a fast one. He still hugs the plate and Matty sends over another one in the same spot. Both have been strikes. The player decides to shift. Matty notices at once he doesn't hug the plate so closely. He divines that he is getting ready to kill a fast one. He at once shifts to his curve or the fade away. In all probability the batter has stepped back so far from the plate that he is unable to do anything with either delivery. The result is a strike-out, a pop fly ,or a weak grounder to the infield.

"Naturally the batter goes back to the bench disgusted with himself. He thought he had Matty figured after Monday's game, and intended to outguess him the very next time he faced him. Instead of being able to turn the trick, he discovers that Mathewson has again made him look foolish. Nine times out of ten he is up in the air over the sudden turn of affairs. He doesn't really know what to do the next time he goes to the plate. He decides o go back to his regular position in the box. Matty, of course, observes it at once and immediately he begins to dish up a diet of curve balls. Just as soon as the batter decides to hug the plate, and try to connect with one of the curves, Matty shifts back to the fast one. Of course, all twirlers do not have the uncanny control of the ball that Mathewson possesses, and cannot exercise the power he does over the batters. The great twirlers must have control, and thus the really great twirlers always take into consideration the position the batter assumes at the plate."

WHY A FRENCH SHIP GOT THERE FIRST.

The wreck of the steamship Delhi, on which the Duke of Fife and his wife (the Princess Royal), and their daughters were passengers, has brought to notice the fact that the wireless telegraph stations of the British navy are not attuned to receive messages from commercial ships. The wireless distress signals of the Delhi passed ineffectively over the wireless masts of the Admiralty at Gibraltar, but were caught by the French cruiser Friant, which put on full speed and had practically completed the rescue of the Royal party and other passengers before any British warship came in sight.

If the Marconi station at Cadiz had not caught the distress signals of the Delhi and sent them by overland telegraph to Gibraltar no British warship would have responded. In calling attention to this instance of red tape methods, the Standard points out that the naval vessels and naval stations of the United States and other countries are equipped to receive wireless messages from merchant ships, and insists that the practice must be established without delay in the British navy.

Henry, barrister, Toronto, Sister St. Gertrude of St. Andrews, Ontario. Mary, teacher at Fitzroy, Harbour, Ont., Miss M. Ryan, Westwood, Barrafield at home and Rev. Father McGuire at Douro.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday morning, January 17th, from Havelock, at 10 o'clock to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery for interment.

THE "TOILER"

The building of the ship Toiler was an experiment undertaken by Swan, Hunter & Wigham Richardson, to test the economic possibilities of the application of the Diesel oil engine to marine propulsion, and which if found satisfactory, would determine their decision to enter into the regular manufacture of these engines at their Neptune Works, on the Tyne. As a proof of the highly satisfactory results obtained, the firm are now prepared to supply Diesel oil engines up to 3,000 h.p. for marine propulsion, and are at present manufacturing for stock, two 600 h.p. sets of four-cylinder, two cycle engines of purely marine design, and embodying improvements suggested from their experience with the Toiler.

Description of the Toiler.

A great deal has been written of late about vessels, both large and small, driven by Diesel oil engines. As a matter of fact, the number of oil-engine-propelled seagoing vessels probably does not as yet number more than two or three, and by far the largest of these is the Toiler, designed and built by Swan, Hunter & Wigham Richardson, at their Neptune Works, Wallsend-on-Tyne.

About twelve months ago, after careful investigation and consideration of various types of engines, oil, gas, electric, etc., Swan, Hunter & Wigham Richardson decided to build a vessel suitable for special service on the Canadian canals and lakes, and to fit her with two sets of Diesel oil engines. The speed on the canals being limited, engines of relatively small power were sufficient to meet the requirements.

The Toiler is a twin-screw vessel, 240 feet between p.p., by 43½ feet beam, by 19 feet depth moulded, and is propelled by two sets of two-cycle reversible Diesel engines of a combined b.h.p. of 360 (equal to about 400 i.h.p.), running at about 250 revolutions per minute. The engines were supplied by the Diesel Motor Co., of Stockholm, Sweden, and fitted on board by Swan, Hunter & Wigham Richardson, at their Neptune Works.

On her maiden voyage to Calais, the Toiler was loaded with 2,600 tons deadweight of coal cargo, besides about 40 tons of oil fuel, fresh water and stores, making a total deadweight of nearly 2,700 tons on a mean draft of fourteen feet. Leaving the Tyne in very rough weather, notwithstanding which the engines worked perfectly satisfactorily, she completed her voyage to Calais at an average speed of 8.9 knots (or 6¼ miles). On her return voyage, light in ballast, the average speed was 8.2 knots (or 9½ miles). The consumption of oil fuel for the round trip, including that of the auxiliary compressor, was 6¼ tons, say 1.65 to 1.75 tons per day.

The engineroom of the Toiler approximates very closely that of the lake freighter, being situated in the extreme aft end of the ship; there is this difference, however, that immediately forward of the engineroom bulkhead is the cargo space, where, as in the usual lake freighter, we find the boiler-room, and the bunker still further forward. It may, therefore, be assumed that the machinery space of the Toiler is not much more than one-third the usual length allotted to steam machinery and bunkers.

Fuel Supply.

Each cylinder carries its own independent fuel pumps, which are actuated by a variable stroke eccentric so that the maximum, minimum, or any intermediate quality can be delivered by the operation of a lever. This, of course, controls the revolutions of the machine. The fuel, carried in the afterpeak and tank under the engineroom, is pumped from the bunker through a filter into a receiving tank, and from there to the fuel pumps above referred to.

Valve Gear.

The valve shaft is driven in the usual two-cycle manner, and runs longitudinally in front of the engine, and about three inches below the cylinder cover level. This shaft carries two systems of cams, one for ahead and one for astern, so arranged as to keep the fuel valve open for about fifteen per cent. of the stroke. The balance of the stroke is carried out under expansion. When it is desired to reverse the engine, a lever is pulled, which slides the cams longitudinally on a feather along the shaft throwing out the one—say, the go-ahead cam, and sliding the other—say the go-astern cam, into operation. It has been found in actual practice that the vessel may be reversed without the help of the air motor, although it seems rather dangerous to attempt in confined waters. The mechanism abaft the Diesel engine is identical to that usually fitted for the steam engine, and needs no description.

The Trans-Atlantic Voyage.

The Toiler is the first cargo vessel propelled by internal combustion engines to cross the Atlantic, and she encountered a particularly bad line of weather, which extended the time taken to thirty-four days. As she was loaded to her canal capacity, this is, however, quite a good showing. Her fuel consumption for the voyage averaged 1 1-3 tons per day, and she carried in her afterpeak and engine-room tanks sufficient for a radius of action over 3,000 miles.

General Features and Problems to Solve.

In appearance, the Toiler is very similar to the vessels of the Key class, designed by John Reid & Co., of Montreal and Glasgow, for the Keystone Transportation Co., of Montreal. These vessels are fitted with marine engines of the most up-to-date type, and carry on a 14 feet draft, about 85,000 bushels of wheat. The Toiler will carry from ten to twelve thousand bushels more; the added deadweight being gained, of course, by the saving in machinery and bunker weights.

One of the important problems to be solved, in the adoption of the Diesel engine, is how to drive the auxiliaries without adopting a steam boiler, which, of course, would be considered a retrograde step. Some form of power generating apparatus with transmission gear seems to be essential. Compressed air has been used in the Toiler, but it cannot be considered a success. There is always danger of water lodging in the pipes and freezing in Canadian winter temperatures. Compressed air, in any case, is neither efficient nor economical.

There are other problems of importance, such as the best form of propeller. Experience with the Toiler will enable the naval architect to solve this feature. It is interesting to notice that this latest development in marine propulsion has been largely brought about by the necessity for the greatest possible deadweight of the restricted dimensions of the Canadian canal type of ship. Canadian conditions have, therefore, prompted an advance in marine propulsion which might more naturally have been expected from conditions in Europe.

Comparison with a Steam Vessel.

In many ways the Toiler is more economical than a steam-driven capacity, owing to the fact that the Diesel engines are much lighter than steam engines and boilers; the amount in this vessel being about sixty tons. The cubic capacity for cargo is greater, as the boiler space is saved besides the oil fuel can be carried in the double bottom in place of water ballast, thus saving bunker space.

The consumption of oil is much less in weight than the consumption of coal for steam engines. In the Toiler, the consumption at full speed does not exceed 1.75 tons per day of fuel oil of 18,000 b.t.u. calorific value, whereas with steam engines of equal power, the consumption of coal would not be less than eight tons per day. The actual difference in cost depends, of course, upon the relative price of coal and oil in the territory where the vessel may be trading.

Not only is the economy of the vessel shown in the increased deadweight of cargo carried, the increased cubic capacity and the low fuel consumption, but the staff on board to attend the Diesel engines is less than the staff required for steam engines and boilers. The engineroom staff is about the same, but firemen are not required.

The deck machinery and engine-room accessories of the Toiler are operated by compressed air from a compressor driven by a small Diesel engine. The electric light, with which the vessel is fitted, obtains its power from a small paraffin engine. The crew accommodation is heated by hot water, the heat being obtained either from the exhaust gases of the main engine or by means of a coal fire. Steam is altogether absent on board this vessel.—From the Welland Telegraph.

ARRESTS IN FRANCE

Scarcely a day passes without a picture appearing in the French press of a prisoner being led off to the station by a policeman and the description: "The Apache being taken away handcuffed by the agents." As a matter of fact, handcuffs are altogether out of date in France, and are never used.

Instead of the bracelets every policeman carries a "carbriolet," which is a very rough and massively made article resembling a huge watch and chain some ten inches long, with a stout wooden crossbar at either end. An expert can slip this over the wrist of an offender in a twinkling, and with both the crossbars in his hand has only to give it a twist to inflict the most excruciating pain and compel instant and lamb-like submission.

Another common method of preventing escape is to make the prisoner place both his hands in his side trousers pockets and then pass a string round his wrists and round his waist and bid him march. He can walk at a very smart pace, but any attempt to run out of a shambling trot immediately brings him down, nose to the pavement.

If no string is handy all the brace buttons of the trousers are cut off, and the culprit is made again to put his hands in his pockets. As in the former case, he can only walk, since as soon as he frees his hands his nether garments fall about his legs and he is "entrave" in the latest fashion.

Few of the devices are apparent to the casual passer-by, who often wonders at the passive docility with which some villainous looking individual under arrest follows his captor to the station. Sometimes on a country road one may meet a couple of gendarmes on foot or on horseback, leading a prisoner between them.

This is in obedience to a quaint regulation whereby prisoners are never sent by train from place to place, as there are no funds set apart for railway fares. Consequently, four or five times as much is spent in food, drink and lodging for the escort as would be for the ticket, but the regulations are observed. In such cases the police often use the "pencettes," though, strictly speaking, this instrument is not legal.

It is a sort of loose thumbscrew, which is fixed so as to keep the two thumbs comfortably together so long as the man does not struggle, but a twist of the string held by one of the police is enough to destroy any wish to escape.—London "Standard."

STEEL TRAPS

I am striving to get a bill passed by the Legislature which will prohibit the use of steel traps by everyone except farmers on their own land, and then only for protecting their stock and crops when invaded by animal pests. I would have the setting of traps so restricted as to prevent a vast amount of premeditated cruelty, for the trapper's occupation is this, with a few cents profit for the skin of his victim.

I understand that a law has been passed requiring trappers to visit their traps once in twenty-four hours, but this is wrong and only slightly abates the cruelty and consequent suffering. I have liberated dogs from the jaws of traps when they have been so held for three hours and had to cut the ice from the trap with my knife before I could open it. The parts of the animals caught by the traps were swollen to three times the normal size and their agonies were so great after being released that in mercy I shot them. Mortification generally affects the parts crushed by the trap, making amputation of the limb necessary, but three-legged dogs and cats are not wanted, and so the valuable dog or the useful cat, the household pets, must be sacrificed.

People in Boston and other cities of the state knows very little about the amount of trapping done in the backwoods' towns. But I believe that the time is coming when a man or boy who traps an animal, wild or tame, in a steel trap will be charged with cruelty and prosecuted in court. I hope the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals will continue to show up the enormity of the steel trap and use its great influence toward obtaining legislation which will abolish once for all this relic of barbarism.—"Our Dumb Animals."

SAD DROWNING ACCIDENT AT NASSAU YESTERDAY

Mr. Henry Fairweather Met a Tragic Death While in the Performance of His Duties---Body Not Recovered

Tragic are the circumstances surrounding the death of Mr. Henry Ivan Fairweather, who lost his life in the Otonabee River yesterday. Deceased was in charge of the Canadian General Electric Company's power house at Nassau, and was engaged in removing the ice in the channel below the sluiceway, when he accidentally slipped and fell headlong into the water. His body immediately sank from view, rising to the surface again, it was caried up stream a short distance, wher it sank, and was seen to rise no more.

Mr. Bert Lockington, who witnessed the accident, was powerless to render assistance, there being no boat or life-saving apparatus available. The accident occurred about 10.40 a. m., and the news quickly spread. A volunteer force of men were soon on the scene, and a systematic search for the body commenced, which, up to a late hour to-day, was unsuccessful.

Mr. Fairweather was a native of New Brunswick, and was about 28 years of age. He has resided here for some time and was well known and highly respected. He leaves to mourn his loss a wife and two-weeks' old child. Mrs. Fairweather was formerly Miss Rogers, daughter of Mr. R. B. Rogers, of East City, and is at present on a visit to Mr. Faiweather's parents in New Brunswick.

Since coming to Peterborough Mr. Fairweather has made a host of friends. He was a member of St. John's congregation and will be greatly missed by the adherents of that church. His young widow will have the sincere sympathy of the community in her bereavement.

Every effort is being put forth to recover the body. A band of willing workers, headed by Mr. Rogers, father-in-law of the deceased, is engaged in the work, and news of its recovery may be expected at any hour.

Here is a remedy that will cure your cold. Why waste time and money experimenting when you can get a preparation that has won a world-wide reputation by its cures of this disease and can always be depended upon? It is known everywhere as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and is a medicine of real merit. For sale by all dealers.

SIR ALAN AYLESWORTH ON NEWMARKET CANAL

Great Surprise in Toronto and North York Over Action of Government in Deciding to Drop the Work After So Much Has Been Done.

Toronto, January 15th. — The announcement of the discontinuance of work on the Newmarket Canal was heard with interest and surprise in Toronto, and in North York, the scene of the work. "It will certainly be a great disappointment to the people of both parties up here," said Mr. H. S. Cane of Newmarket. "In this district it was supported by as many Conservatives as it was by Liberals. In fact up here it was considered out of politics.

"It would have meant a good deal to the industries in this locality. It was confidently anticipated that it would mean a material reduction in freight rates. Take ourselves, for example: We expected in 1913 to get all our raw materials from the country served by that canal. I think that it would have affected every industry in the town."

SIR ALAN AYLESWORTH'S VIEWS

Sir Alan Aylesworth, former Minister of Justice, member for North York and chief promoter of the Newmarket Canal, when seen at the King Edward Hotel, expressed astonishment at the course the Government was reported to have taken.

Sir Alan said: "I am really at a loss to understand the action taken by the Government. I cannot think what their motive could be unless it is to constitute the nearly finished canal a perpetual monument of Government folly. The canal, as you know, runs for nearly a mile alongside of the Grand Trunk Railway, and a great unfinished work like this, dry as a ditch, would be made to advertise to everyone passing that way the folly of the Government which undertook to build the canal.

"But this will prove a boomerang, for I suppose that close to half a million dollars has been spent on the canal. It is now nearly finished. I have not a particle of doubt but what the amount of money the Government will be required to pay the contractor in damages because of the cancellation of the contract will greatly exceed the amount which it would be necessary to expend to finish the work. The contractor probably expected a profit from the undertaking, and will make allowance for this in his suit for damages.

"The canal scheme had been entered into before ever I became interested in North York particularly. It was not till October, 1905, that I came before the electors of North York as candidate for the House of Commons. In the preceding year a monster delegation waited on the Government at Ottawa to press for the building of the canal. The agitation was purely a non-political affair. As many Conservatives as Liberals were interested. Haughton Lennox and J. Herbert Lennox were head and front of the movement.

A RECORD DEPUTATION

"A photograph was taken of the delegation standing on the steps of the Parliament buildings at Ottawa. There were three or four hundred men in it. I remember seeing this picture at Ottawa. It was regarded as a curiosity, as the delegation was one of the largest, if not the largest, which had ever waited on the Government up to that time.

"Every municipality in the riding of North York, and some adjacent ones in other ridings, passed resolutions endorsing the canal and sent delegates to Ottawa.

"With the completion of the canal, freight rates on the railways in the vicinity would, of course, come down at once. The people in agitating for the construction of the canal, I believe did so with a single eye to the building up of the northern part of their county, and politics never entered into the matter at all."

A total expenditure of $1,100,000 was the estimate for the Newmarket Canal, and it was to have been completed in 1913, having been begun in 1906.

The Holland River division of the Trent Canal System, commonly known as the Newmarket Canal, was divided into two sections. Section One extended from Cook's Bay, Lake Simcoe, to Holland Landing, on the east branch of the Holland River, a distance of eight and a half miles. Section Two extended from Holland Landing to Newmarket, a distance of four and a third miles. The whole of Section One was on the Lake Simcoe level, and the total rise between Holland Landing and Newmarket was 43 feet feet, which was to be overcome by three locks.

A contract for the construction of Section One was let to the Lake Simcoe Dredging Company, in August, 1906. They abandoned it in 1907, and it was taken out of their hands in May, 1908. The York Construction Company has the contract for the second section, after taking it over from Russell, Dill & Lothian.

WORK DONE SO FAR

The total value of the work done and materials delivered to March 31, 1911, amounted to $339,636.89. Lock and dam No. 3 and Green Lane bridge are finished. Sixty per cent. of lock and dam No. 2 is built, and the excavations for the pit of lock and dam No. 1 is almost out. The Newmarket dock is one half finished, and up to March 31, 1910, there has been spent on it the sum of $459,000. The work was subdivided into two sections, and on the second of these, the Holland River section, $139,670 has been spent. This is the section nearest Toronto.

The scheme was to construct a canal from Newmarket via the Holland River to Lake Simcoe, and so connect York County with the Trent Canal System.

ANOTHER PARTY OF CHINA MISSIONARIES ARE SAFE

MORE DREADNOUGHTS FOR GREAT BRITAIN

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., JAN. 15. — Notwithstanding the hope engendered here that the Socialist success in the recent German elections is an emphatic protest against the Government's continued naval increases, and adding taxes on the heavily burdened people, Great Britain is taking no chances and to-day at Portsmouth dock yard, the keel plate of the twenty-eighth ship of Dreadnought class was laid. The vessel has not yet been named. When completed, early in nineteen fourteen, she will be the thirty-second vessel in the British navy of twenty-five thousand ton class and armed with batteries of thirteen inch guns.

TO THE PUBLIC

If cough syrups would cure coughs every time, it would not be necessary for us to print this information, but there are so many cases of chronic bronchitis in town that have hung on for months and years, we feel that we must tell what we know about it.

It is a positive fact that the only right way to treat a cough is to use a remedy that acts on the blood, such as Vinol, our delicious cod liver iron preparation without oil.

Mrs. Olivia Parham, East Durham, N. C., says: "I used Vinol for a cough which had lasted two years and it gave me perfect satisfaction. I am also giving it to a delicate child to strengthen her. She will not take any other medicine but Vinol is so pleasant she cries for it and it is benefitting her very much.'

Remember if Vinol does not help you it costs nothing. McDermid and Jury, corner George and Charlotte streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets.

SMITHS FALLS, ONT., JAN. 15. — An overheated stove at four o'clock this morning, caused a fire which drove Richard Gordon with his wife and five children in their night clothes out in the icy weather, and the husband was compelled to run several miles for assistance barefooted, while the wife and children shivered in a barn. The house and contents are a total loss.

AVOID BLOOD POISON!

The best and simplest way of insuring against blood-poisoning is to apply Zam-Buk to a cut, burn, cold sore or any open wound or diseased part as soon as sustained.

Of all the myriad forms of germs which set up blood-poisoning, not one has yet been found that Zam-Buk does not kill! A thin layer of Zam-Buk over a wound or sore acts in two ways. It prevents all harm coming into the wound or sore from the outside, and on the underside it stimulates the cells to renewed activity, provides just the healing, tissue-building material needed, by causing the blood to deposit this more rapidly and thus brings about rapid healing. Apply it to that cold sore, those chapped hands, that frost bite or that eczema.

Sold at 50c. box, all stores or druggists or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse substitutes.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unparalleled."

MONDAY, JAN. 15, 1912

A BENEFICIENT CONVERSION.

Sir James Whitney's conversion, in the form of his abandonment of his proposal to throw the Hydro-Electric scheme into politics, is a hopeful sign. It shows that he is beginning to pay some attention to popular opinion and to recede from the self-sufficient position he occupies in relation to the public, and the opinions of others. During the provincial elections, the proposal of Sir James to bring the Hydro-Electric scheme into a government department, was criticised by Liberal journals and speakers, and even Conservatives, who had a real interest in the undertaking were adverse to the proposal. Now, the Government has come down, and, for the present, at least, the Hydro Electric system is to continue to be controlled by the Commission, and the evils of political obstruction that would have attended departmental partizan management will be less possible.

ANOTHER BACK-DOWN.

Another evidence, added to the back-down on the Hydro-Electric proposal, is furnished that the Whitney Government is returning to political sanity. When the Government removed the efficient and experienced fire-rangers appointed according to the policy of the late Liberal Government, they substituted college students. While it was a nice thing to have the boys enjoy a summer holiday under Government pay, still the work they were supposed to do was necessarily unsatisfactory—from the employment of young and inexperienced men, with a very hazy idea of what their duties were, or sense of the responsibility of their position. Now, the Whitney Government has decided to revert to the system adopted by the previous government—the appointment, as fire-rangers, of capable men, with experience of forest conditions and some capacity for acting effectively and intelligently in the case of forest fires.

MEAT INSPECTION.

We are all interested, as citizens, and many of us, personally, in the crusade against tuberculosis. The dangers to which it exposes the public is not confined to direct infection from affected persons, but it is possible that it can come through meats produced from animals affected with tuberculous disease, or through milk supplied by animals similarly affected. Against the former danger rigid inspection is a protection. And this inspection can only be effectively performed through a municipal abbatoir, where all animals slaughtered can be subjected to inspection. This is a subject which is of the deepest interest of every citizen and should claim that of our municipal authorities. As has frequently been pointed out, inspection is provided for meats intended for exportation, while the meats to be consumed by ourselves are presented to us with no guarantee against the infection that means danger to health and life. If charity begins at home, one would think that protection of our own citizens should precede precautions for the benefit of foreigners.

THE CANADIAN ALMANAC.

Every year, for two generations—sixty-five years, the Canadian Almanac, has come with the clock-work regularity of Christmas. Every year it has become better and better, and this year's issue lives up to this fact. It has become indispensable to every citizen engaged in professional or business occupations. Every editor has seen additions and improvements rendering it more convenient and complete and ready of reference. The result of this continuous attention is exhibited in the numerous lists and pages of information not found elsewhere and presented in a way that saves much expenditure of time and pains. The publishers, The Copp-Clark Co., justly claim that in no other volume can so much information about Canada be found in so small a space and that although it now extends to no less than 504 pages, there can be no better investment of sixty cents than in the Canadian Almanac.

Among the principal subjects covered are the astronomical and tide tables; the complete customs tariff, weights and measures and foreign exchange. The banks, branches and names of managers are given; patents in Canada recive attention, and a full Canadian militia list is included. Complete post al postal information and newspaper statistics; particulars regarding the Dominion and provincial governments, the clergy of all denominations, the legal profession, educational institutions, life assurance companies and other societies are all to be found within its boards. This edition also includes maps of Manitoba, Alberta, and Saskatchewan, showing railways, and principal towns. The volume is clearly printed and is in every way a credit to its publishers.

TORONTO'S BAD LIGHTING.

Even a good thing has to be efficiently administered if we are to get the best results. Toronto has long had the benefit of access to Hydro-Electric power for lighting, but its distribution seems to have suffered the blight of municipal incompetency. Peterborough has "monopoly" lighting, but we have well lighted homes and streets, and nothing like the gloom that Toronto gropes through, according to the following from Toronto Saturday Night:

"There appears to be only one serious drawback to Toronto's new system of street lighting—there is no light. Aside from this, it seems to be all right. The poles of concrete are as sightly as poles can be, but the single incandescent light attached to the side of each of these monoliths is, in its feeble attempt to shine through the ground glass, unfortunately unequal to the task imposed upon it. Our residential streets were dark before. They are darker now. The yare reminiscent of the street lighting of a country village. As an adjunct to the arc lights they might do; if we are to be dependent wholly upon them, there must be a vast improvement. As a matter of fact, our residential streets—those that do not possess the iron posts with five lights thereon—are dangerously dark, criminally dark. In he early days of the Hydro-Electric we were told by The Evening Telegram to the extent of columns — wide measure, double-leaded—that with the Hydro once installed in Toronto there would be no further need for policemen on the beats; that the lights—the brilliant, shining lights — would drive away crime, and altogether make our city an earthly paradise. The "illumination," as it works out, should soften the heart of a foodpad. No self-respecting midnight burglar would ask further protection from the argus-eyed "cop."

"The artistic value of a street lighting system that fails to give light fades away to a negligible quantity. Our lights are all right in the daylight, but unfortunately it is at night that we need them. The arc light may be ugly, but it at least throws out rays within its own prescribed zone. Our incandescents, poised upon their stately poles, do nothing of the sort.

"The Hydro-Electric must do better than this. Our lightening bug light won't do.

"This may be less majeste, but it's the painful truth."

TIME IS OUT OF JOINT

(Toronto Star.)

The News is out with a brand new explanation of the Government's wobble on the Hydro-Electric policy. It says that the change of policy was caused by the Borden Government coming into power. That event removed the difficulties that formerly obstructed the work of the Commission. This is strange, because the Laurier Government was defeated on September 21st, and the Borden Government came into office a few days afterwards. Apparently Sir James Whitney was not aware of these events, for in December he asked the electors of Ontario to support him in abolishing the Commission, and placing the system under the direct control of the Government. Now he finds that this step is not necessary.

In well informed circles the postponement of the change does not occasion surprise. In the past few weeks a new situation has developed. The return to office of the Borden Government has cleared away the difficulties placed or left in the road of the Hydro-Electric Commission by the Laurier Administration

What are well informed circles? Apparently circles in which the defeat of one Government and the accession of another is known about three months after the event has happened. In well informed circles the hasty assertions of a sensational press are not accepted. True, it was said in September that the Laurier Government was defeated, but where were the official returns? Not until January was it absolutely certain that Sir Wilfrid Laurier was out and Mr. Borden in. Not until January was there any movement in the well informed circles to which Sir James Whitney and the News belong. Then they acted upon information that was absolutely safe. They paid no attention to the reported utterances of Mr. Rowell. Mr. Rowell may have opposed the change or he may not. There was no evidence, except in the sensational press. So the Whitney Government acted, not upon what Mr. Rowell said in December or January, but on the election of September 21st—something old and venerable, sanctified and confirmed by time.

AS TO THE BENEFITS OF MUNICIPAL ACCOUNTING

City Treasurer A. K. Bunnell, of Brantford, is a strong advocate of a proper system of municipal accounting, and his addresses on that subject before the Chartered Accountants' Association are always received with acceptance. Many experts believe that in municipal management there should be departments of a scientific system of municipal accounting, whereby it would be possible at short intervals to present a full and minute statement of the actual position of each one of them. In other words, that the adoption of the same careful, systematic, methodical management be applied to the city's affairs as is used in the management of great private businesses and in the government departments. The matter has been allowed to drop out of sight; but is one that merits careful study and adoption in practice. In Milwaukee they have a Bureau of Economy and Efficiency the work of which, in one matter alone, the promotion of the use of a municipal refuse incinerator, is expected to save to the city $64,000 a year. The great leak was discovered by an efficient accounting system. In Boston the finance commission discovered that the stone-crushers in use, instead of being an economy, were a luxury, and a saving of $25,000 was made in two years on crushed stone, by their abandonment. In St. Louis the employment of an expert at $25 a day in the city's departments effected large savings.

The Cincinnati Bureau of Municipal Research is asking the mayor to appoint a commission to study the various branches of the municipal service with a view to guarding the interests of the ratepayers. It suggests:

1—The study of labour efficiency; establishment of standards of work that should be done by different classes of employes; introduction of efficiency reports measuring, so far as possible, the work of employes, and facilitating comparison with standards.

2—Introduction of expense accounts and reports, which would enable the mayor, and his officials to receive accurate monthly statements of costs of operation, as a guide to administration. As far as possible it would be desirable to show unit costs.

3—Introduction of systematic monthly reports to the mayor by each department in a form to show, as far as possible, the amount of work done of each kind.

4—Promotion of economy in purchasing, by standardization of supplies and specifications, purchasing in large quantities, etc.

5—Study of methods of inspecting supplies, materials and repairs.

6—Study of methods of controlling the storage, distribution and use of the city's supplies.

7—Study of methods of accounting control over revenues and amounts owed to the city.

8—Comparative study of unit costs of maintenance of horses, automobiles, buildings, etc.

9—Wherever possible, comparative studies of unit costs in the several departments, such as cost per square yard of street repairs, etc.

St. Louis engaged an expert from another city to look into one matter, and in the first week of his engagement he pointed out where a saving of $50,000 a year might be made in the water department.

Any improvement in municipal government which effects a saving is well worth while. We are quite frequently told that our present system is all wrong. Perhaps it is, and there can be no doubt that more intelligence study given to civic management would result in greater efficiency and greater economy. A good system of municipal accounting might lead us closer to the efficiency and economy which is so much desired.—Brantford Expositor.

ROYAL BANK OF CANADA HAD RECORD YEAR

Net Profits Amounted to 18.58 p.c. on Stock, While Liquid Assets Now stand at 49 1-2 p.c. of Total Liabilities to the Public.

Once more the Royal Bank of Canada is able to report in its Forty-second Annual Statement, all previous records broken.

Deposits increased over $16,000,000 which brings the total up to $88,294,000. Liquid assets amount to $47,738,000, being 49 1-2 p.c. of the total liabilities to the public. Actual cash on hand, balances on deposit with other banks, and call loans in New York and London, England, exceed 32 p.c. of the total liabilities to the public. Total assets increased during the year from $92,510,000 to $110,528,000. Net profits amounted to $1,152,249, showing an increase of $200,913 over the previous year—equal to 18.58 p.c. on the capital stock of $6,200,000. Commercial loans amount to $59,646,000, being 67.55 p.c. of the deposits.

As will be seen from these comparisons, the bank has experienced a wonderfully prosperous year.

By JOHN MARCH

She was sick at heart, tears of chagrin stood in her eyes as he led her back, bowed, and left her in the care of the Hargrave party.

Paul danced with a will . He went through a succession of square and round dances with scarcely a break between, until Felix dragged him into the conservatory for a rest, and eventually out into the beautiful grounds illuminated by thousands of fairy lamps, where a great golden moon shone serenely through the branches of the larches, and the elusive will-o'-the-wisps glowed and vanished in the distant marshes.

The night air was chilly, but it seemed doubly pure and sweet after the heated atmosphere they had left behind. Their brisk footsteps fell silently on the dewy grass, and the cold starlight streamed across the shining turf like a spilt silver liquid.

"What a glorious thing youth is!" Felix said, offering his cigar case. "Upon my soul, I quite envied your nimbleness."

"I can afford to be active; I've not an ounce of adipose flesh to hinder me."

"No, you are in capital condition. You look a hundred per cent. better that when I first saw you. The country suits you."

"I suppose so; moreover, I am singularly happy here."

"That's good hearing," Felix said, emphatically. "At all events," he added, in a strangely moved tone, "I know that your advent has made no end of difference to me. It has considerably increased my enjoyment and love of life. I feel younger, brighter, more interested in my daily avocations, and altogether a happier man. It's been a sort of unuttered heathenish prayer with me lately, perhaps a selfish one, too, that nothing may come between us, not even a slice of roaring good luck, if it's to sever your connection with Weyberne."

The wind sighed among the pine tops, and the moon turned a radiant face full upon the men's black, swiftly-moving figures. Paul took a timid glance from beneath his eyelids at his companion. The honest, simple, trustful nature of the man, invigorating and wholesome as the air he breathed, or the balsam in the pines, seemed to dip down into his heart, and touched an as yet unexplored, unknown region.

"I am shy of too much openness," he said; "my nature is a reserved one. I am slow on learning the worth of a friend, but once the affection is cemented there is no fear I shall weary of it."

"So-called friends ,those who are not actually one's enemies ,are as plentiful as flies in summer," Felix said, looking away over the misty upland; "but I fancy the feeling between us has grown upon a foundation having more than a suspicion of firmness and strength about it."

"It's built," Paul answered, laying a tender pressure on the Squire's arm, "on one of the soundest and bravest hearts that ever breathed."

Felix laughed and squeezed the small white nervous hand.

"Why don't you say two hearts? You were a flatterer from the first. I believe you will always be—not fickle, but fine and French; and yet, Paul, I wouldn't have one trait in your character otherwise than it is."

"In love, Cupid is painted blind," Paul said smiling, "but friendship between man and man is another matter. Do you suppose," he asked, the smile developing into a gentle laugh, "do you think David could see the faults as well as the virtues of Jonathan?"

"Yes," Felix said, taking the question into grave earnest consideration; "a man may render you a great many services at times and you may entertain a heart full of gratitude towards him, but unless you feel his character agrees with your own you will never call him 'friend,' not in the best and truest sense of the word. Friendship is made up of trifling matters, and in a close, intimate fellowship a coarse nature veneered to suit some social niche would grind and grate one's susceptibilities, one's finer feelings. The result would be inevitable; a settling blight and the bloom gone from the attachment, the gilt from the prized gingerbread."

He took a pull at his cigar, and blew a vigorous whiff of smoke in the air, in illustration of the fleeting of all transient material things.

In the silence that followed something floated towards them resembling at first sight a white wave of mist, but in reality and upon closer inspection Rowena Wycherly, wrapped in the cloudy folds of silver gauze which covered a delicate peach-coloured silk underskirt.

"Our dance, Mr. Farley," she called, stopping midway when she recognized the Squire.

"Coming, Mrs. Wycherly," he responded, throwing away three-quarters of a choice cigar among the long wet grass.

"Be careful," Felix whispered, a sudden alertness in his keen grey eyes, "that woman means mischief."

"How? What mischief can she do?"

"Heaven alone knows," he said, "but when my mare lays back her ears and snuffs the air in feminine defiance of all unwritten equine laws, I keep my weather eye open. Keep your head, dear boy, and watch the widow's manœuvres."

Paul gripped his wrist.

Paul gripped his wrist.

"Thanks," he said, hurriedly, "I must be politely civil of course, but I'll take care to keep the golden mean."

Paul offered Mrs. Wycherly his arm and led her back to the house.

"I thought you had forgotten me," she said with a half sob in her childish voice .

"Oh, dear me, no," he answered. "I should have been back hunting for you within the next few minutes."

On the carpeted steps they met a stalwart, sleepish-looking man in lemon-yellow livery. He glanced at them out of the corner of his eye, and passed quickly on out into the grounds.

"Why, surely that's the man Denham!" he exclaimed, puzzled. "I thought he worked for Mr. Fleming?"

"So he does," she laughed, enjoying his surprise in an arched, pretty way. "I wanted a great deal of extra help to-night, and the man said he could manage. If he gives me satisfaction I shall keep him altogether. He is going to be married to an old servant of mine, and wants to better his condition. We won't dance this, Mr. Farley," she said, in a different tone, dismissing the subject of Denham with fine aplomb; "it's boisterous and fatiguing, and I've danced continuously—besides, I want to show you my house and some of my pretty things."

He acquiesced with a good grace, though he would have much preferred to return to the ballroom, or to have wandered with his beautiful hostess among the numerous company promenading the cool decorated corridors. He ascended the winding oak staircase in obedience to the guiding pressure on his arm, and when they reached the spacious landing, where, despite the glittering chandelier of wax candles, the moonlight shone through the windows and fell aslant the polished boards, he looked around involuntarily for the door against which the Squire and Rose Pilgrim had listened on the night of little Guy Wycherly's punishment. She was doing her utmost to interest him with a woman of the world's intuitive tact and native poetry. She had an undulating, and at times an irregular, even sharp, movement with her, indicating the restless vivacity of her spirits, which this evening seemed doubly indefatigable, because her sprightliness played upon his nerves and excited an unreasoning disquietude . He had a superstitious, uncanny feeling that the woman with the demon beauty hanging on his arm was in an occult, supernatural manner being incited to do some strange, wild, wicked thing.

Had Boils On Neck and Arms.

Had Them Lanced But, Got No Relief Until He Used Burdock Blood Bitters.

Boils in themselves are not a dangerous trouble, but still, at the same time are very painful. They are caused entirely by bad blood, and for you to get rid of them it is absolutely necessary to put the blood into good condition. For this purpose there is no remedy that can compare with Burdock Blood Bitters. This preparation has been on the market for about 35 years, and has a reputation unequalled by any other for the making of pure, rich, red blood. Mr. H. J. Batten, Stratford, Ont., writes:—"I have been troubled for several weeks with boils on my neck and arms. I had them lanced by the doctor, but as soon as one went others came. I tried all kinds of so called remedies, but could get no relief till I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I am pleased to say I am now quite free from those most painful things, and feel much better in every respect.

"My boy, of nine years, had a rash come over his back and legs, so we gave him a few doses and now he is all right again."

THE REIGN OF THE MESSIAH

Nature of the Kingdom—Will Be an Exclusive and Aristocratic Monarchy.

Manila, Jan. 14.—Gen. W. P. Hall, second in command of the U. S. army and at one time Military Governor of the Philippines, is here in company with Pastor C. T. Russell, Prof. F. H. Robinson, Dr. L. T. Jones, Mr. J. T. D. Pyles, Mr. E. W. V. Keehn and Mr. R. B. Maxwell, the special Committee of Foreign Missions Investigation appointed by the International Bible Students Association. They were heartily welcomed and given every facility for noting civil and missionary activities amongst the Filipinos. Pastor Russell gave two addresses to-day to large audiences, chiefly Americans. He had a very earnest hearing. We report his address in the Manila Grand Opera House from the text, "Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth, as it is done in heaven." (Matthew vi, 10.) He said:—

Many of us have learned to appreciate a republican form of government as the very highest type of civil administration. I trust that I am not one whit behind the most patriotic of you in my appreciation of the great Government of the United States which many of us believe is the noblest that has yet risen amongst men. Nevertheless, the Bible teaches that Messiah's reign will be that of a Monarchy; not only so, it will be a very exclusive and aristocratic Monarchy. Additionally, it will be most autocratic—theocratic; the will of its subjects will not be consulted in the slightest particular.

At first, in alarm, we are ready to say, Would not that be a most dangerous condition of things? Could any royal family, however noble and generous, be entrusted with such autocratic power without fear of its being misused for the enslavement of the people, for the aggrandizement of the rulers? Have we not learned this in the history of the past six thousand years? Do we not see the necessity for curtailing and controlling the powers of kings and governors? Are we not more and more brought to realize the necessity that the people shall rule, whether in Congress or in Parliament, in Doumas or in Chambers of Deputies?

Yes, yes, my dear friends, I heartily accede to all this; but when I shall describe to you the nature of the Kingdom that is to be established, and its personnel, all your fears will assuredly flee, and you will rejoice exceedingly that the Divine arrangement is what it is in respect to the theocratic Kingdom shortly to be established and to take over the government of the world.

Scripturally, it is described as the Fifth Universal Empire of earth. I remind you of the Divinely inspired dream of King Nebuchadnezzar, as interpreted by the Prophet Daniel. It was of an image majestic, grand. The head of the image was Nebuchadnezzar's own kingdom at Babylon, the first to rule over the earth. Next, represented in the breast and arms of silver, came Medo-Persia, the second Universal Empire of earth, the conquerer of Babylon. Next, represented in the belly and thighs of the image, came Greece, the third Universal Empire of earth, which conquered Medo-Persia. Next, represented in the legs of iron, came Rome, the fourth Universal Empire, conquerer of Greece. There are to be no more until Messiah's Kingdom; it will be the Fifth. Meantime, we have had two attempts at a fifth monarchy, both unsuccessful. One of these attempts was by Napoleon I. the other was that of the Papacy. During this time the present divisions, which resulted from the breaking up of the Roman Empire, are represented by the feet of the image, with their ten toes.

The prophecy declares (Daniel ii, 44) that in the days of these kings, represented by the toes of the image, the God of heaven will set up a Kingdom, which shall subdue all kingdoms, and which shall never be overthrown. It shall "be given to the people, saints, of the Most High God, and they shall take the Kingdom and possess it forever, even forever and ever." (Daniel vii, 18, 27.) In the picture God's Kingdom is symbolically represented as a great stone, hewn from the mountain without hands—supernaturally. It shall smite the image in its feet, and forthwith "the iron, the brass, the silver and the gold shall become like the chaff of a summer threshing floor, and the wind shall carry it away," but the mountain shall increase until "it shall fill the whole earth."

Thus, in a figure, or symbol, God pictures things now shortly to come to pass. I know not how much to expect from the war between Italy and Turkey, but Rome and Constantinople stand for, represent, the two legs of the image, for be it remembered that each in turn was the Roman Capital, and representative of the image. We are certainly justified in watching with considerable interest the present war and what it may be leading to in the way of involving all the ten kingdoms represented in this prophesy.

But that is not the special point of interest in my subject; rather, I am discussing the character of Messiah's Kingdom, which is to rule the world, overthrow Sin and Death and uplift humanity from ignorance, superstition, sin, weakness and death. The declaration is that Messiah shall reign until He shall have put down all insubordination, and that the last enemy to be destroyed will be death. (I. Corinthians xv, 25, 26.)

This is the Kingdom for which the Master Himself taught His followers to pray. Nothing slight or insignificant will be the outcome of that glorious Messianic reign of a thousand years. At its very beginning Satan will be bound, with all that this signifies—the repression of evil and darkness. For a thousand years the Sun of Righteousness shall pour forth the warm or warm and grace upon our then fallen race until the knowledge of God's glory shall fill the whole earth as the waters cover the great deep. (Habakkuk ii, 14.) Eventually all willful opponents of that Kingdom will die the second Death, from which there will be no redemption, no recovery. But meantime, all the willing and obedient will be rising, not only from the tomb, but also out of all the weaknesses and frailties of the present time, up, up, up to the fullness of perfection of life, although they will not live again in this perfect sense until the thousand years shall be finished. With the close of that reign of righteousness, after it shall have accomplished its work of delivering the groaning creation from the bondage of corruption, sin and death, Messiah will abdicate the Throne, as it is written, "He will deliver up the Kingdom to God, even the Father, that He may be all in all."—I. Corinthians xv. 24.

What a glorious triumph that will be when every creature in heaven and earth and under the earth shall be heard saying, Praise, glory, honor, dominion and might be unto Him that sitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb, forever. (Revelation v, 13.) What a glorious condition will then obtain when there shall be no more crying, no more sighing, no more dying, for all the former things of sin and death, shall have passed away! Ah! He that sitteth upon the Throne said, "Behold, I make all things new!" Glad we are that our great Messiah is about to overthrow sin and evil, about to establish righteousness on a permanent and everlasting foundation, which will insure that to all eternity God's will shall be done as perfectly in this earth as it is now done in heaven.

I ask you to consider candidly—you need not reply—is there a kingdom in the world to-day that in your judgment fitly represents a Divine government amongst men? Is there a perfect government, is there a single spot in all the earth where God's will is done as it is done in heaven? You are conversant with history. You know the bloody record which marks its pages. You know that so-called Christian Europe has been drenched with blood more than any other part of the world. You know that the cause of wrong has triumphed as often or oftener than the cause of right. You know that to-day these kingdoms of Europe, styled kingdoms of God, are threatening one another as they have done in the past. You know that great guns, great battleships and monster torpedoes, such as the world has never known before, are being prepared by these various nations for use, either aggressively or defensively against one another, while they all claim to be Christ's kingdoms. Is this logical? Is this rational? Most assuredly not!

We must go to the Bible for true information on this subject. It tells us that these kingdoms are not the kingdoms of God, but "kingdoms of this world." It tells us that Satan is the prince of this world (John xiv, 30; Ephesians ii, 2); that he is "the god of this world," "that now worketh in the hearts of the children of disobedience"—so much more numerous than the children of obedience that he through them holds the world's control. But with equal clearness the Bible declares the Divine Power and mastery over Satan and that he and his reign of sin and death are permitted of God for a limited time and for a special purpose. The testimony tells us that when the due time shall come Messiah shall take His great power and reign—then Satan shall be bound and all the forces of sin and darkness be restrained. Then the Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in its beams to flood the earth with the light of the knowledge of the glory of God.

Come with me and take a cursory view of God's great work thus far accomplished. For more than two thousand years God gave no clear intimation of what He intended to do for the fallen race. Then He made a statement to Abraham, so clear, so explicit, that St. Paul declares it was a statement of the Gospel in advance. God said to Abraham, I intend to bless the world, which could only mean, I intend to relieve them of the curse of death which came upon them through Adam's sin. God added to Abraham. This blessing which I will bring to all the families of the earth will come through your posterity—"In thee and in thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

God's due time for bringing this blessing was still future; the blessing intended could not come until Messiah should come; but meantime God gave to the natural seed of Abraham, through Moses, the Law Covenant, which offered them eternal life and an inheritance in the Kingdom if they could keep the Law. Of course, they could not keep the Law because it was the measure of a perfect man's ability, and, alas! like the remainder of the world, the Israelites were imperfect—sinners. Nevertheless the offer and their attempt to keep the Law brought them great uplift of heart, so that when Jesus came to them a considerable number were ready to receive Him, did receive Him, and He received them. They became sons of God, through the begetting of the Holy Spirit, at Pentecost and afterward. These were the spiritual Seed of Abraham, begotten of the Holy Spirit, Jesus Himself being the Head, or First; the others were counted in as members of His Body.

Israel had been hoping for a share in Messiah's Kingdom, and St. Paul explains, "Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for, but the election hath obtained it, and the rest were blinded." The blinded Israelites are still cast aside, but not forever. The Divine blessing shall come to natural Israel just as soon as spiritual Israel shall be completed (See Rom. xi. 25-34.)

waste and the "election" obtain? Or what did the faithful "Israelites indeed" become heirs by accepting Jesus and by the Pentecostal blessing? We answer that they became identified with Messiah's Kingdom and heirs or inheritors of the glorious promise made to Abraham, that in this Kingdom all the families of the earth should be blessed. But now note that there were not a sufficient number of Jews found worthy to complete the Kingdom class. The Kingdom therefore could not be inaugurated then. God had foreseen this and through the Prophet had promised that some would be gathered from the Gentiles to complete this Kingdom class. The entire work of this Gospel Age has been the calling of this "elect" class for the Kingdom. If we have rightly viewed the matter, the foreordained number will soon have been found, the election will be at an end, the accepted will be glorified as the Kingdom, and Messiah's reign of righteousness will begin.

But notice now the course of all belonging to the Kingdom class, throughout this age. They are not reigning with Christ, but suffering with Christ. And Jesus explained this; they are indeed of the Royal Family, because begotten of the Holy Spirit; they are indeed the Kingdom class, because they are affiliated with the great King; but they have not yet entered into their glory. They will do so only by the power of the First Resurrection. Thus it is written, "We must all be changed," because "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God."

Our Lord Himself was the Pattern, the Forerunner of all these. After His consecration and His begetting of the Holy Spirit, He was tested even unto death, even the death of the cross, before He experienced His glorious resurrection change and ascended up and sat down at the right hand of the Majesty on high. Similarly all of His followers, after consecration, must be tested, their loyalty must be proven, before they can share with Him in "His Resurrection."

Partly for the testing of these, their development takes place in a time when Satan is the Prince of this world, and when his power is permitted to be exercised against them as it was exercised against their Lord. The message to these is, "The Kingdom suffereth violence and the violent take it by force." As our Lord suffered violence from the Prince of this world, so will His followers, for "the disciple is not above His Lord." His promise to His followers is, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."—Revelation ii, 10.

So then we perceive that God's Kingdom class, the followers of Jesus, have been suffering violence, just as did their Leader, for righteousness' sake. That the persecutors had not known and done their evil work intentionally, St. Peter intimates when he says to the Jews, "I wot that in ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers, for if they had known they would not have crucified the Prince of Life." Hence, in due time their blindness shall be turned away and they will look upon Him whom they pierced and mourn (Zechariah xii, 10), and God will pour upon them the spirit of prayer and supplication, and forgive them and make the experience profitable to as many as shall prove willing.

Meantime, for eighteen centuries, the Scriptures declare, "The world knoweth us not even as it knew Him not." God's saintly ones have not been generally the great, the influential, either in church or state, just as Jesus and the Apostles were not in their day. Nevertheless, the Lord knoweth those that are His. Scattered here and there, during the past eighteen centuries, He has been dealing with them, preparing them, polishing them, fitting them as jewels. And He tells us that at our Lord's second coming He will make up His jewels—they will constitute the Kingdom class; for if we suffer with Him, we shall also reign with Him.

I am sure you will agree with me that these whom the Lord has been so carefully selecting, instructing and polishing in the school of Christ, who have been so effectively polished with the trials and disciplines of evil, will be the very class above all others to whom the glorious dominion of earth may well be entrusted without fear. Only those thoroughly loyal to God and to principle will be in that Kingdom class.

WHY SHOULD WOMEN SUFFER?

Those that are almost daily afflicted with headache, backpains, depression, neuralgia, and "don't care" feeling, can be quickly cured by "Nerviline." Just a few drops of this wonderful remedy in sweetened water makes you feel better at once—gives you relief from unnatural aches and pains. Thousands use Nerviline every day—it does them good. Why, not you?

Nerviline Cures.

"I wouldn't think of being in the house unless I had a bottle of Nerviline handy," writes Mrs. A. E. Bamner, of Belleville. To stop headaches, cure pains, and drive away sickness, nothing compares with Nerviline.

Every dealer in the land sells Nerviline in large 25c bottles. Get it to-day.

Suggestion For Street Railway

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—As the Manager of our local street railway has expressed his willingness to receive suggestions re extensions, permit me to outline a route that should be a good thing to the Company, and undoubtedly would be of great service to hundreds of citizens: Branch off George street at Hunter street, west on Hunter to Aylmer; north on Aylmer to McDonnell; west on McDonnell to Downie or Reid; north to one of the streets running to the Normal School, and thence down the old Cobourg railway line, cutting to George street again. This would be a route well peopled on both sides. Cars could run in both directions continually, and this would give a much better service on a portion of George street, north than there is now. There would be no bridges to build. The houses are already there and inhabited, and such a line would not be a luxury, but a necessity.

Yours truly,
North Ender.

SLEIGH UPSET

As a result of a runner catching in the street car track at the corner of George and Smith streets, a cutter belonging to a Smith township farmer was badly wrecked and the owner put to considerable inconvenience. The accident occurred on Saturday evening and was witnessed by two boys, Allan Kingscote and Robert Smith, who attempted to stop the horse, but were unsuccessful. The frightened animal tore up George street at a lively clip, dragging the upturned cutter with it. When last seen the latter was in a pretty delapidated condition The name of the owner could not be ascertained, as he was more interested in sprinting after his outfit, than giving information.

"SOME HA'E MEAT, AND CANNA EAT"

So Robby Burns tersely describes the rich, but still poor, dyspeptics. But their case is not now so desperate as when Burns wrote. For the man who has the food now can eat without suffering for it, if he just follows the meal with a Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablet.

These remarkable tablets banish the troubles of the chronic dyspeptic—the man who is thirsty—the sufferer from heartburn, gas on the stomach or occasional indigestion. You can eat hearty meals of wholesome food—and digest them, too—if you take Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets.

Compounded by expert chemists, after probably the best formula known to medical science, they are quick and certain in their action, giving prompt relief from all forms of stomach trouble, toning up and strengthening the digestive organs and bringing about permanent cures.

A man is no stronger than his stomach. Fit yourself for your best work by taking Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets, 50c. at your druggist's. National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Montreal. 146

Anarchist Movement Is Asserting Itself Throughout The Indian Empire—Dr. Wilkie At Knox

Returned Missionary With Thirty-two Years Experience in the India Mission Field, Tells of the Many Drawbacks With Which the Missionaries Have to Contend.

Missionary work in India, the extenuating circumstances under which it is carried on, and a mental glimpse of the arduous toil and struggles which fall to the lot of missionaries in their battle with iniquity, caste and superstition. These were some of the striking points exemplified by Rev. Dr. Wilkie, D.D., in his stirring address at Knox church Sunday morning.

A large congregation was present, and they were rewarded by a convincing, practical missionary address, given by one who has devoted thirty-two years of his life to missionary work in India.

Rev. Dr. Wilkie took for his text the 4th chapter of St. John, 34th and 35th verses, "Jesus saith unto them, My meat is to do the will of Him that sent Me, and to finish His work. Say not ye, there are yet four months, and then cometh harvest Behold, I say unto you, lift up your eyes and look on the fields; for they are white, already to harvest.

The very same truths which are contained in the text are ringing out over the land to-day, especially so in India, with its teeming millions of people who have not yet heard the word of God. I say, lift up your eyes and look over the fields, for they, 'I can bear testimony to it,' are white with the harvest. Our purpose as missionaries is not merely to civilise, or to educate, or to bring the people of the east into contact with those of the west, or even to baptise the heathen, but to so present the Word to them, that they may learn to know Christ personally. The church has no right to receive anyone into their midst, who does not know Him personally. The population of India represents one fifth of the total population of the globe. Inhabited by a heathen race, who are unlike the Chinese or Japanese, the task of converting them is rendered extremely difficult, inasmuch as they are burdened down by superstition. They are sorely afraid of evil spirits, and their lives are one continual reign of terror.

"I have yet to meet the first man," declared the speaker, "who, when appealed to, would not say yes, I believe in one Great Being, and yet there is known to exist in India, something like three hundred and thirty million idols. They seem to be yearning for something, something that their crude religion will not furnish. One of the greatest drawbacks in the work of Christianising these people is their extreme poverty. Their lives are blasted by the constant dread of famine, the horrors of which are known to the world. Another great handicap with which the missionary has to cope, is the caste system which exists throughout India. The underlying principle of the caste, is brotherhood. One caste will not associate with another. This is responsible in a large measure for the great spirit of unrest which prevails among the Indian empire. And, continued Dr. Wilkie, in a subdued tone, there is a great Anarchist movement asserting itself on all sides, a movement which is given impetus by the sixty million Mohammedans who in a guise of religion, but with political aspirations, are attempting to gain the upper hand. In Tibet, in the north, where the British government has refused to allow the missionary to enter, the Mohammedans have secured thirty thousand to their faith. This they have accomplished by means of their traders. Every trader that enters Tibet is a Mohammedan missionary.

In Borneo, where thirty years ago there was nothing but heathens, there are now twenty-four and a half million Mohammedan. They realize that Hinduism is a dying faith and are seeking to control the situation. In doing so, they are challenging the Christian religion. They are prepared to do so, to dare, or to die, in order to attain their ends. These conditions bring us to a stronger realisation of the fact that Christ, and Christ alone can save these people, out of which the question naturally arises, are we doing our duty as a Christian people towards the betterment of these conditions.

"THE DEFINITION OF AN IDEAL" BY REV. F. J. SAWERS, AT ST. LUKE'S

A very large and attentive audience attended St. Luke's church last evening, when a most interesting and inspiring message was delivered to the young people, by Rev. F. J. Sawers, M.A., Rector. The sermon was entitled "Wise Men from the East," and the first of a series, especially for the young people.

Rev. Sawers chose his text from the third chapter of the Epistle of St. James, and part of the second verse: "The same is a perfect man". The subject of discussion was "Ideals". What do we mean by "Ideals?" asked the reverend speaker. "We mean purpose, desires, and aspirations that fill the mind of man. Confining it to a certain man, what does that man want to be or to get. The answer is, of course, his "ideal". Then, this definition shows that a man's "Ideal" may be low or high, worthy, or unworthy. Let us take one or two ideals that are low and unworthy, that our young men and women often adopt. "Worldly welfare," for instance. After money all the time. We realize, however, that money is necessary for life. It can do a tremendous good. Think of hospitals, orphanages, asylums, schools, and churches, etc., that all need financial support But that is a different matter from saying that "money is all that is needed in life. To young people, some person might say: "You have to make money honestly if you can, but you have to make it any way". Just cut off the last clause. Money is necessary for life, but in order to enjoy it, we must earn it honestly. Is the mere acquisition of wealth, worthy of a man's principle? We stamp it out. It is branded by us as being an unworthy "Ideal".

Pleasure as an 'Ideal'.

Speaking of pleasure as an "ideal" the old proverb says: "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy". Some people will say: "Have a good time when you are young, for you are only young once."

We hear of young people having their "fling and sowing wild oats". Those are the devil's suggestions. It may be that the young are not warned in time. It may be that they have been warned, and heeded not; as they look on the cup it may be sweet, but oh, the remorse with which the young life is wilted. Young men and young women, shun the very beginning of evil. Crush the thought that brings that blush to your cheek. If a vile story is told, be man enough to show that you do not approve of it, even if you say nothing. How will you do it? First of all, by getting in your mind, good. Fill your mind with high things, as the old saying is: "Good affection and good things". There is then no room for degredation, sorrow and shame. "All that hunger and thirst after righteousness shall be filled; blessed are the pure in heart".

"Worthy Ideals"

"We have loked on one or two debasing ideals; now what is a worthy one? A life filled with lofty ideals, that will meet with the approval of God; qualities that will evoke the praise of God. To us has been given the example of a perfect life, and it is that life, we are pledged to follow. There are a few "ideals" that make such a life; unselfishness, willing to sacrifice our own pleasure for the pleasure of those closely united with us. If selfishness has marred many a young life, we believe that unselfishness is a gem brightest of all in the crown. Let us do good while we have time but emphasise the need of speed. An advertisement something like this once appeared: "Lost, somewhere between sunrise and sunset, one golden hour, set with sixty diamond moments. No reward; it is lost forever". Opportunity once neglected, never returns; it is lost forever. Think of the golden hours we waste. To you it may be said: "I have given you all these golden years and months and days, give to me the stewardship of your time".

Definition of a Worthy "Ideal".

What is a worthy ideal? It is a life that is high, pure, reverend, self-sacrificing and serviceable. One that when left behind, the world will be the better that that person has lived. Ever reaching higher than that which has been set before it. That is an ideal worthy of any young man or woman. It is in God's power that we may approximate that "ideal".

In conclusion, I advise you to build up your lives, not on the shifting sands, but on the solid rock. Build it well, stright, strong, true, clean, pure, high and broad—for the eye of your God.

Obliged to Quit Business

So Dreadful Was the Suffering From Itching Piles

After Twenty Years of Pile Torture Relief and Cure Came with Dr. Chase's Ointment

You take no risk and you make no experiment when you use Dr. Chase's Ointment for piles. Many doctors still cling to the idea that nothing but an operation will effect a cure. But operations are expensive and dangerous and often fail in their results. Some have been cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment after operations had failed.

Dr. Chase's Ointment truly has a wonderful record as a cure. Here is a case which was reported recently:

Mr. John P. Marshall, 14 Barnes road, St. John's, Nfld., writes: "For upwards of twenty years I was troubled terribly with itching piles; at times so bad that I was obliged to lay up ,unable to attend to business.

"I tried many treatments without benefit, until II accidentally read of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and found at last a cure by using this ointment. I only used one box and part of a second one when I was completely cured, and have had no return of the piles. That was eighteen months ago, and, needless to say, I attribute this cure to Dr. Chase's Invaluable Ointment."

Many sufferers from piles have tried so many scores of treatments that they cannot believe that cure is possible. In order to convince the skeptical we are always willing to send a sample box free to anyone who encloses a two -cent stamp to pay postage.

DR. MARSH ON THE AURORA BOREALIS

The grandeur of the Aurora Borealis, or what is more popularly known as the Northern Lights, was strikingly exemplified on Saturday evening, and more than one citizen was tempted to expose himself to the wintry blast in order that he might observe for a few minutes, the scintillating streamers, as they shot across the heavens. Many also were the conjectures as to what this electrical display heralded, in the form of a change of weather, with odds decidedly in favour of a mild spell. One man emphatically declared that it was due to the reflections from the ice fields in the far north. However, in reply to a query from the Examiner, via the Bell Telephone route, Dr. Marsh of Springville came along with the information that the presence of the Northern Lights in the sky had no bearing on the weather, whatever, past, present, or future.

The Aurora, said Dr. Marsh, is caused by a magnetic influence arising from the sun, or is set up by solar storms, and is sometimes caused by the presence of spots on the sun's surface, and is often visible when the sun is actively ejecting matter.

In making an observation of the sun, on Saturday, by means of his powerful telescope, Dr. Marsh observed faculae on the eastern nimbus, which is indicative of solar disturbances, hence the presence of the Aurora Borealis in the evening sky.

DANDRUFF GERMS ARE RESPONSIBLE

Baldness and Most Hair Troubles Due to this Parasite Which Destroys Hair Roots.

Nobody wants to be bald! But a neglected scalp means, first, falling hair, then—BALDNESS. If you are troubled with itching scalp or falling hair, be on guard against Dandruff. Get rid of it without delay; check its advance, for dandruff is a germ which feeds upon itself and "feeding grows," destroying the hair roots, so that no new hair growth is possible.

Begin now, using HAY'S HAIR HEALTH, the surest, swiftest Dandruff Cure. It destroys the dandruff germs, eradicates them (cleans out the pores of the scalp) and encourages a quick growth of youthful-looking hair. No unsightly dandruff scales on your coat collar. No bald spots on your scalp if you use HAY'S HAIR HEALTH. W. W. White, pastor Vienna (Md.) M. E. Church, writes us: "I have used half a dozen different hair tonics, but I find HAY'S HAIR HEALTH the very best preparation I have ever used for dandruff." You can get it at any druggist's for 50c. or $1.00 per bottle or from the Philo Hay Spec. Co., Newark, N. J.

Music At St. John's Church

The anthems sung yesterday by the choir of St. John's were well rendered. The morning anthem was Steindele Bennett's unaccompanied number from the "Woman of Samaria," "God is a Spirit." In the evening Gounod's "Send Out Thy Light," was given.

Notwithstanding many good voices having left for other spheres of work, new voices, are being steadily introduced, keeping up the high standard of the services.

The Rev. W. H. Bayley of Omaha, Nebraska, preached both sermons yesterday, his discourses being highly appreciated. An informal discussion was held at the rectory after evensong on the subject of "Prayer Book Revision" and a meeting of the congregation will shortly be held, when the Rev. Canon Davidson will bring the matter up so that as far as possible all Anglicans shall be in a position to understand the position of the General Synod on this most important matter.

DAMAGE BY FROST

The extremely cold weather seems to be over, at least temporarily, but it leaves traces of its work throughout the city. At the G.T.R. station, the water pipes were burst and considerable damage done, and similar reports come from all sections of the city.

During the cold nights, the general waiting room at the G.T.R. station was the abode of about 35 Italians, who thronged in after the last passenger train had departed. The officials allowed them to do so.

The Feast Of The Holy Name

Members of Sacred Heart T.A.S. Received Holy Communion

Yesterday being the Feast of the Holy Name, the members of the Sacred Heart T.A.S. received Holy Communion in a body, the communion being offered in reparation for the many insults being offered daily to the Holy Name of Jesus. The mass was celebrated by Rev. Dr. O'Brien, the sermon being preached by the Rev. Father McAuley. After mass the T.A.S. members renewed their total abstinence pledge; also pledging themselves to abstain from taking the Holy Name in vain. Dr. O'Brien complimented them on the fine turn-out and urged them to continue the good work. This branch of the society is in a flourishing condition and is daily becoming stronger. It is a power for good in the parish, as was evidenced by the large numbers, both old and young, who turned out yesterday. The worthy Dr. is determined not to let up until every man in the Sacred Heart parish is a total abstainer and judging by the grand work he and Father McAuley are doing, that day is not far distant.—Com.

ADDRESSES BY MR. PATRICK MORGAN

Mr. Patrick Morgan, late of the Capuchin Fathers, opened a series of meetings in the Park street Baptist church yesterday, occupying the pulpit at both services. There were very large attendances in the morning and evening, many being turned away at night. Yesterday afternoon, he addressed a meeting in the Sons of England Hall, which was largely attended. His subject was announced as "How Rome Destroys a Nation."

COULD NOT SWEEP FLOOR

Was So Terribly Afflicted With Lame Back.

It is hard to do housework with a weak and aching back, and no woman can be strong and healthy unless the kidneys are well.

The weak, lame and aching back comes from sick kidneys and should be attended to immediately so as to avoid years of terrible suffering from kidney trouble. Mrs. Harvey W. Brownell, Northport, N.S., writes:—"I now take pleasure in writing you, stating the benefit I received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About a year ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad at times I could not sweep my own floor. While looking through your B.B.B. Almanac I saw Doan's Kidney Pills were a great remedy, so thought I would try a box or two. After using five boxes I was completely cured, and I am very thankful to have found so speedy a cure."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. In ordering direct specify "Doan's."

PUSH PETERBOROUGH

Its Central Situation, Shipping Facilities and Manufacturing Sites

Article No. 2

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—A good reputation of a city should be based upon facts that will sustain it. Peterborough's good reputation has a solid basis of facts.

This city is admirably adapted for manufacturing and consequently, for continued growth. It is centrally situated, and this is an advantage. It is between the two great commercial centres, (Montreal and Toronto) and these markets are readily reached. Both the great railways pass through the city, and the Grand Trunk branches out in four directions. Besides being on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, it is on that railway's new line to the Georgian Bay, so that Peterborough is on the direct route of both railways to the great markets of the Northwest. It has direct railway connection with all parts of the continent, and its situation makes it an advantageous point from which to ship to any part of Canada.

Peterborough is a good point, at which to secure cars for shipping, when they are wanted—something that, at times, gives trouble in other places. The large quantities of raw material brought in, as, for instance, to the Quaker Oats Mills, means that a number of cars are brought here every day, and cars are available for outgoing shipping. Then the grain routes through Peterborough lead to empty cars passing through to the west for which the railways are glad to get freight.

With two express companies doing business here, the facilities for quick despatch are excellent, and advantageous for shipping articles for which rapid transit is required.

The Trent waterway is navigable for 160 miles. The work required to complete it to Lake Ontario is all under contract, and when that work is completed there will be water communication with all ports by way of the Bay of Quinte. This will be of great benefit to the city, and it is so close to completion that the benefits should be realized now. And with the thirten miles at the north end made navigable there will be water communication from Lake Ontario to Georgian Bay, and Peterborough will be on the shortest and most rapid route of navigation from the east to the west, as well as on the direct railway routes. One way to push Peterborough is to hasten the completion of this waterway. Large industries having heavy freights want water communication. The Minister has announced that the plans for the northern outlet will be completed as quickly as possible and the work constructed.

Anyone driving around the city is impressed with the number of times a railway track must be crossed. This, for manufacturing, is an advantage, for a factory located in any part of the city can easily and cheaply secure siding accommodation. In the South Ward, where the larger number of industries are located, direct connection with both railways can be secured. In the North-west and North, and also in the northern or central part of the East Ward the Grand Trunk Railway is at hand, and in the southern part of the East Ward both railways are accessible. In all these districts there are good manufacturing sites, and railways. The interswitching arrangements betwen the two railways are satisfactory and facilitate shipping.

In talking up Peterborough bear in mind its central situation, good manufacturing sites and admirable shipping facilities.

Yours truly,
Civis Sum.

ANNUAL MEETING OF COLD SPRINGS SUNDAY SCHOOL

Cold Springs Union Sunday School held their annual meeting on Thursday evening, Jan. 11. There was a large attendance of the adult members of the school. Reports were received from the different departments of the school and were all of an encouraging nature.

The Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. I. Pammett, reported a total membership of 95, with an average attendance of 70. The total average attendance, including visitors, was 76. The class collections amounted to $160.11, an average of $3.20 per Sunday.

The Trustee Board reported the payment of the note for $375.

Mrs. Thos. Rose, on behalf of the ladies of the school, presented the Trustees with a cheque for $100.00. This leaves the Sunday School hall entirely free from debt.

Refreshments were served at the close and a social hour spent together.

Mr. Arthur Holden acted as chairman for the election of officers which resulted as follows:

Superintendent—Miss Laura Bennett.
Asst.-Supt.—Mr. Frank Kitney.
Recording-Sec.—Mr. Everett Kidd.
Financial-Sec.—Mr. Isaac Pammett
Home Class Sec. — Miss Emma Welch.
Organist—Miss A. Stenton.
Asst.-Organist—Miss F. Kitney.
Hall Committee—Mr. F. Kitney. Mr. I. Pammett.
Auditors—Miss M. Waldie and Mr. Bertram Long.

Snow Plough Rushed Through

All trains are a little late to-day owing to the snow storm. The storm seems to be quite general, and is reported to be much heavier east and west of the city. The C.P.R. trains are pretty well on time, as the company ran a snow plow through ahead of the trains this morning and cleared away the heavy snow. The plough has been through several times during the recent heavy snow. The 11.35 train from the west showed every evidence of having come through a snow-bound country, as the cars were covered with snow and the engine was a mass of snow and ice.

A Sunday Morning Visit to St. James' Methodist Church

(By Roy Gilray.)

To meet the requirements of the Methodists in the South End of the city, St. James' Church was built. Its origin is of such recent date that all are more or less familiar with the particulars. It became an actuality largely through the munificence of George and Charlotte street churches, who not only contributed heavily toward the building fund, but carry the interest of the present indebtedness of the church.

The conception or organization took place in the Charlotte street church on the night of May 19, 1908, there being present a representative gathering from both parent churches. The birth occurred July 3rd, at the parsonage, 83 Crescent street, the home of its first pastor, Rev. H. M. Manning, a prayer meeting having been held to herald the event. Another prayer meeting was held in a tent pitched on the newly acquired property on the 9th, and a Sabbath service at 11 a.m., July 12th, at which 51 were present. On the afternoon of the same day at 2.30 the Sunday School held its first session with an attendance of 39. The christening ceremonies were carried out on 10th of October, 1908, by Mr. W. G. Morrow, who laid the corner stone, and on the 28th March of the following year the Church was opened, the Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., preaching the dedicatory sermons, morning and evening.

With an eye to the future the committee on construction very wisely started with a Sunday school building of modern design, suitable for church services until a larger edifice is required.

The splendid success of the undertaking was largely due to the untiring efforts of the first pastor, Rev. Mr. Manning, who handed over the charge to Rev. J. G. Brown, M.A., in June, 1909. Mr. Brown is a young man full of energy, who works hard for the welfare of his people. The organization, in its more minute details, fell upon his shoulders, and one has but to pay a visit to the services of the various departments to see how well he has succeeded.

It is safe to say the Junior League is one of the best in the city. Mr. Brown is a pioneer in the use of the lantern in illustrating his talks to the young people, and finds it productive of excellent results.

The Boys' Guild is in a flourishing condition, gymnastic exercises under a competent leader, forming part of the diversions, while the study of the Bible occupies its usual prominent place. At present they are perusing that great allegory, "The Pilgrim's Progress."

The congregation numbers about 240 and the Sunday school has an enrollment of 400.

The church is named after James, an apostle of the Lord. After Jesus was baptized by John in the Jordan he was driven by the Spirit into the wilderness, where he remained forty days. From there he went to the Sea of Galilee where he met James and John, sons of Zebedee, and their fellow fishermen, Simon and Andrew, whom he commanded to forsake all, and follow him, thereafter to become fishers of men. James occupied a prominent place among the disciples, possessing a burning and impetous spirit. He was engaged in the ministry for fourteen years and suffered martyrdom at the hands of Herod Agrippa I. Tradition says he was thrown from the Temple by the scribes and Pharisees ,stoned, and his brains knocked out by a fuller's club.

One cannot enter a Methodist Church without having impressed upon his mind the great work of its founder, John Wesley. Of him it may be said that he did some foolish things in his life (the choice of a wife for one) but his nature was refined, and his example an inspiration. His holiness and zeal have as time has gone on, embalmed his name among the great saints of England, and he is held in reverence by the pious and scholarly men of all Christian denominations, not excepting the Roman Catholics, many of whose missionaries have resembled the early Methodists in their unselfish devotion. In the early days of the settlement of Upper Canada, the Methodist circuit rider did a work which should never be forgotten by all who love this land. He carried a spiritual message to the lonely clearings that has made for a better and more rugged manhood in this country.

Last Sunday morning was an ideal one for church going. We journeyed down to St. James' Methodist and much enjoyed the service from beginning to end. We did not see any silk hats to fill us with awe; we did not gaze on any rustling creations in silks and satins to make us green with envy; we were not treated to any exhibitions of costly diamonds to detract our attention from the preacher and his message; we were not lulled to sleep by the enrapturing melodies of a highly paid choir; nor yet were we transported into ethereal bliss by the soothing rhetoric of an expensive parson. Instead, we worshipped with a splendid type of congregation, the kind that forms the backbone of Methodism to-day, and listened to a sermon filled with good, wholesome food for an appreciative people. The spirit of evangelism prevailed throughout. They have not yet reached that elevated plane where they separate themselves for mthe woeful world and its miseries and spend their time discussing dogmas and hair-splitting theologies.

The people of St. James' do not believe in race suicide. We saw more children here than at any othr morning service, notwithstanding the disparity in the congregation. Their building is well adapted for work among the young people, especially the Sunday schol. Better business is accomplished by bringing a child to Christ and securing the offering of his whole life to God than by the restoration of a prodigal—valuable as that is. Evangelism which is well directed takes knowledge of the social needs and problems of the day. It must comprehend the child as well as the adult.

There were very few empty seats, which speaks for itself. Men are not all philosophers, but, like sheep, they know enough to go where the pasture is good.

"I had no faith whatever, but on the advice of a hale, hearty old gentleman who spoke from experience, I began to use Grape-Nuts about 2 years ago," writes an Ohio woman, who says she is 40, is known to be fair, and admits that she is growing plump on the new diet.

"I shall not try to tell you how I suffered for years from a deranged stomach that rejected almost all sorts of food, and digested what little was forced upon it only at the cost of great distress and pain.

"I was treated by many different doctors and they gave me many different medicines, and even spent several years in exile from my home, thinking change of scene might do me good. You may judge of the gravity of my condition when I tell you I was sometimes compelled to use morphine for weeks at a time.

"For two years I have eaten Grape-Nuts food at least twice a day and I can now say that I have perfect health. I have taken no medicine in that time—Grape-Nuts has done it all. I can eat absolutely anything I wish, without stomach distress.

"I am a business woman and can walk my 2 or 3 miles a day and feel better for doing so. I have to use brains in my work, and it is remarkable how quick, alert and tireless my mental powers have become." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

PETERBOROUGH BOY BELIEVED TO HAVE PERISHED IN WEST

MOOSE JAW, SASK., JAN. 14.—Word was received in the city yesterday that two persons had perished from exposure in the south country, bringing the number up to six. On December 30 a man named G. Isbester, who lived six miles south of Meyronne, which is 107 miles from Moose Jaw, was lost in the storm, which raged on that date. He was found next morning about 100 feet from the house for which he was making. The victim was 49 years of age and unmarried, and when found had in his possession a check for $375 and $75 in cash, and in his pocket was found a will leaving his property to a sister. He was a native of Minnesota, and had almost completed his duties on his homestead.—Globe.

It is believed that the late G. Isbister, whose death is chronicled in the above despatch to the Globe this morning, was a son of Mrs. Isbister, 200 London street. Mrs. Isbester, when shown the despatch referred to, was firmly convinced that the deceased was her son, George, who was known to have been in the West for some time, although when last heard of, he was residing in the Nipigon district. A statement that tends to offset the possibility of the Peterborough boy being the victim, is the one that refers to G. Isbester as being a native of Minnesota. Geo Isbester, son of Mrs. Isbester, London street, was a native of Peterborough and lived here for a number of years. He was home last September.

However, a telegram is being forwarded to-day to George Isbester, last known place of residence, and particulars as to the identity of the G. Isbester mentioned in this despatch will soon be to hand.

A NOBLE PIE.

A Christmas pie of noble proportions is the one served at Howick Hall, Northumberland, England, when Lord Grey spends the festival at his ancestral home. The Howick Christmas pie is made according to a recipe some 150 years old; it is a veritable giant among pies, being about nine feet in circumference, and weighing, it is said, about 200 pounds. It is fitted into a wooden case upon four wheels, so that it can be wheeled about the table. According to the old recipe, the pie calls for several bushels of flour, 20 pounds of butter, four geese, two rabbits, six wild ducks, six woodcocks, a dozen snipe, three brace of partridges, two neats' tongues, seven blackbirds, six pigeons and six curlews—certainly a noble dish to set before an earl.

CHEAP AND PRACTICAL KITCHEN BLINDS.

Kitchen blinds that will admit the light, yet give privacy, are inexpensively made by taking washed, unbleached muslin, of good grade, run a hem at one end wide enough to admit a spring roller, and at the bottom end wide enough to run a slat through it. If you have any old roller blinds of which the roller and slat are good, use these for the new blind. If the spring is good in the old roller, instead of the casing, tack the end of the muslin onto the roller, as the old one was tacked, using the tiny tacks you find in the roller. A long tack will penetrate the spiral wire in the roller and ruin it. Such blinds may be washed at will, starched carefully, and will last a long time.

SEWING BUTTONS ON SECURELY

To make buttons stay on coats, pants and underwear, lay a wire nail something larger than a coarse knitting needle on the top of the button and sew through the holes or eyes over the nail. When you have filled the eyes as full as they will hold, take out the nail and push the needle down through the button between it and the material, pull the button up on the loose thread and wind the thread in the needle several times around the threads under the button, forming a neck, then fasten the thread on the wrong side of the garment. If you use good thread, the buttons will stay on.

FURNITURE POLISH.

Here are several formulae for furniture polish in all of which vinegar is used:

Equal parts of boiled linseed oil and vinegar; or equal parts of sweet oil, vinegar and finely pulverized gum arabic shaken until thoroughly dissolved.

Equal parts of turpentine, olive oil and vinegar.

Any of these should be well shaken before applying and applied with a woollen cloth, rubbing well in; then polished with dry cloth.

Another recipe, which is highly recommended for taking out stains, covering marks and giving a fine polish, is one quart of paraffin oil (not wax), ten cents worth of wood alcohol and one quart of vinegar; shake this well, apply with a woollen cloth, then dry with a soft cloth and polish with a chamois skin.

SALT-RISING BREAD.

Dissolve a half teaspoonful of salt in two cups of scalding water, and beat in gradually enough flour to make a very soft dough. Beat for 10 minutes, cover and set in a very warm place for eight hours. Now stir a teaspoonful of salt into a pint of lukewarm, milk and add enough flour to make a stiff batter before working it into the risen dough. Mix thoroughly, cover and set again in a warm place to rise until very light. Turn into a wooden bowl and knead in enough flour to make the batter of the consistency of ordinary bread dough. Make into loaves and set these to rise, and when light, bake. When baking the bread gives off a peculiar sour odor, due no doubt to a special fermentation, but there is no trace of this in the bread when cooked.

People accustomed to salt-rising bread always prefer it to any other kind. Some recipes add a tablespoonful of cornmeal to the flour used in making the yeast.

A WORD OF GRATITUDE

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Kiss, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

It may be all right in a certain sense to kiss a poodle dog, if you have nothing else to kiss. It never seemed very brilliant, cute or becoming for anyone pretending to be a lady of sound mind and passing respectability to hug and kiss an offspring of the canine family. But then we admit that we are not so thoroughly versed in the changing science of etiquette and in the demands of polite society.

THE END IS NEAR

PREPARING TO VAMOOSE

Pekin, Jan. 15.—The abdication of the Emperor is expected to take place within three days, but events may occur to give the Manchus a new lease of life, as they often have in the past when matters seemed hopeless. Yuan Shi Kai's secretary makes no secret of the preparations, and the Premier, Saturday afternoon, conferred for two hours with Hsu Shih Chang and Shih Shu, the throne's guardians, respecting the measures to be undertaken.

It is understood that plans are being arranged for the departure of the Imperial family to Jehol. The Imperial guard will probably act as an escort, unless the flight from Pekin is secret, which is not improbable, before the abdication proclamation appears.

It is said that the Manchus have considered and have agreed to accept the terms offered by the Republicans some days ago—protection and respect such as would be accorded to a retired foreign monarch residing in China; the retention of the palace at Jehol or the summer palace near Pekin, for the use of the Emperor; the other members of the Imperial family to retain their personal wealth and property; all the Manchu pensions to continue for a fixed term and the payment of a large annual pension to the court, said to be 10,000,000 taels (about $500,000).

A difficulty has arisen in that the Manchus are unable to obtain a guarantee that the future Republican Government would not repudiate the pledges. Premier Yuan is still insisting upon a national assembly, from which he will undoubtedly endeavor to obtain assurance for the safety of the Imperials and their maintenance.

The Manchus recognize that they cannot continue in power without further financial aid, sufficient for the support of the army, while it is probable that even after the last treasure chest is empty the Republicans would still be powerful. As a consequence the Manchu princes have decided not to disgorge. They realize that a liberal pension may not again be offered if the struggle is continued and the Republicans incensed.

The diplomatic representatives held a conference Saturday with Brig.-Gen. E. J. Cooper, the British commander at Tientsin, and discussed with him his ability to keep open the Pekin-Chang Wang Tao Railway. It is believed that possible trouble in Pekin was also taken under consideration.

It is understood that the leading powers are ready to support Yuan Shi Kai, believing that he is the one strong leader capable of grappling with the situation, especially in view of the discord among the Republican leaders.

Despatches received from the provinces report many murders and the looting and burning of houses. Hundreds of women are committing suicide, in fear of bandits who are committing all kinds of atrocious crimes. The armistice will expire Jan. 15, and it is, therefore, expected that abdication will be completed before that date. The palace at Jehol has been sufficiently restored to accommodate the Imperial entourage.

President May Resign.

Nanking, Jan. 15.—President Sun Yat Sen received the news of the pending abdication of the Emperor quietly. He said that he was pleased to learn that the first step towards the pacification and reorganization of the country had been taken. He anticipated some delay in the readjustment of affairs, and added that it was quite possible that Yuan Shi Kai might be President of the new republic. He adhered to his declaration that he would resign when the Manchu Government had been ousted and peace completely restored throughout the country.

The first stage would necessitate a military government, under which order could be secure, and the Republicans were determined that the old regime of corruption must be abolished, and the people of China permitted to earn the full reward of their labor.

Armistice Extended?

London, Jan. 15.—According to a Shanghai despatch the armistice has been extended for two weeks to give the Manchus an opportunity to abdicate.

More Attention to Fruit.

Ottawa, Jan. 15.—The convention of fruit growers, which is to be held here next month, will, if the fruit men have their way, result in much closer co-operation between the Department of Agriculture and the fruit industry. It is probable that a resolution will be presented and passed favoring the establishment of a fruit division of the Department on much broader lines than those upon which the fruit branch is now conducted.

The Government is said to look with favor upon such a change.

Natural Gas Explosion.

Welland, Jan 15.—Early yesterday morning, Oswald Hickey was badly burned by a natural gas explosion, and the house he occupied, owned by Ray Homes, wrecked and burned. The loss, $1,000, is covered by insurance. Escaping gas caused by the rubber tube becoming disconnected.

Portugal Kind to Missionaries.

Lisbon, Jan. 15.—The Government commission announces that American, German and British missionaries will be allowed to remain in Portuguese East Africa. This decision was taken after conferences had been held with the diplomatic representatives of these three countries here. Portugal, however, has decided to establish its own missions in Africa, to counterbalance the influence of foreign missionaries.

Shot Father of Abductor.

Fort Worth, Texas, Jan. 15.—J. B. Snead last night shot and instantly killed A. G. Boyce, sr., father of A. G. Boyce, recently arrested in Winnipeg, Man., charged with the abduction of Snead's wife. The shooting occurred in the lobby of a local hotel.

FOLKS OVER PAST FIFTY MUST USE CASCARETS

What glasses are to weak eyes, Cascarets are to weak bowels—a 10 cent box will truly amaze you.

Most old people must give to the bowels some regular help, else they suffer from constipation. The condition is perfectly natural. It is just as natural as it is for old people to walk slowly. For age is never so active as youth. The muscles are less elastic. And the bowels are muscles.

So all old people need Cascarets. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect this gentle aid to weak bowels. The bowels must be kept active. This is important at all ages, but never so much as at fifty.

Age is not a time for harsh physics. Youth may occasionally whip the bowels into activity. But a lash can't be used every day. What the bowels of the old need is a gentle and natural tonic. One that can be constantly used without harm. The only such tonic is Cascarets and they cost only 10 cents per box at any drug store. They work while you sleep.

Must Pay Full Amount.

Ottawa, Jan. 15.—A recent decision by the judicial committee of the Privy Council makes the Dominion of Canada responsible for a large amount of money, said to reach the sum of ten million dollars.

It will be recalled that the original contract with the Grand Trunk Pacific, that of 1903, provided that the Government was to guarantee bonds of the railway company. The contract named certain sums, and the guarantee was to cover the face value of bonds of those amounts.

The second contract, of 1904, by introducing the word "implement," changed the bargain materially. If the guarantee was to be for $13,000 a mile, the new arrangement that the Government must guarantee bonds enough to produce $13,000 cash, no matter at what price the bonds were issued.

This construction was placed upon the revised arrangement by critics of the measure, and it has been upheld by the Privy Council.

Stands Trial for Murder.

Port Lambton, Jan. 15.—Stephen Keyoshk was yesterday committed by Magistrate T. P. Boothman to stand trial at the April assizes at Sarnia on a charge of murder, arising out of the death of Adams John and O. Nahdee on New Year's eve.

John and Nahdee were killed at the latter's shack on Squirrel Island, one of the Walpoles, on Dec. 31. The body of Nahdee has not been found, and a reward may be offered for its recovery.

Patriotism

The stomach is a larger factor in "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" than most people are aware. Patriotism can withstand hunger but not dyspepsia. The confirmed dyspeptic "is fit for treason, stratagems and spoils." The man who goes to the front for his country with a weak stomach will be a weak soldier and a task finder.

J. D. Chilman, However, Found Guilty in Robbery Case

CONVICTED OF RECEIVING

Hamilton, Jan. 15.—"In the case of Joseph Acheson, we find him 'not guilty.' In the case of J. D. Chilman; we find him guilty on the third count of the indictment, of receiving money knowing it to have been stolen."

Such was the verdict announced on Saturday night by Foreman J. A. Morris of the jury which heard the evidence in the crown's three charges against the two men in connection with the mysterious theft of more than $8,000 from the office of the Canadian Express Co. here last September.

The trial was begun early last Thursday afternoon and it was not until five o'clock Saturday afternoon that the case was given to the jury. The verdict was reached at 9.15 Saturday night, more than four hours being consumed by the jurors in their discussion of the problems presented by the case.

Justice Teetzel was very much pleased with the jury's finding, which he designated as a very intelligent verdict and entirely justified by the evidence. The judge's charge to the jury was strongly against Chilman, while in it he practically instructed the jurors to acquit Acheson. When the verdict was delivered C. W. Bell, junior counsel for the defence, demanded that the jury be polled on the Chilman case. This was done, and, in response to the calling of his name, each of the twelve men promptly answered "guilty."

Chilman heard the fateful decision apparently unmoved. Acheson, when told by the judge that he was discharged, left the dock and hurried from the courtroom alone with his everpresent smile somewhat broader than usual.

George Lynch-Staunton, K.C., who had charge of the defence, was not in the court room when the jury brought in its verdict. C. W. Bell, who had worked hard for his clients in the belief that they were both innocent, and who confidently expected the acquittal of both Chilman and Acheson, was keenly disappointed when the verdict adverse to Chilman was rendered.

In discharging Acheson, Justice Teetzel said he agreed with the jury's decision. The prisoner was, nevertheless, still under grave suspicion, and, this case should be a lesson to him. While expressing the hope that he was not guilty, Justice Teetzel advised Acheson, if he was guilty, not to rest until the part of the stolen money which he might have received was returned to its rightful owners. Some criticism of these remarks by the judge was expressed as the large crowd filed out of the court room.

Sentence on Chilman was deferred by Justice Teetzel, and it will be probably some day this week when the prisoner learns his fate.

Public interest in the trial of Chilman and Acheson was very keen throughout the proceedings, and every day the court room was packed, while many were unable to gain admittance. Public sympathy was unmistakably in favor of the prisoners, and this fact probably accounts for the murmur of disapproval with which the jury's verdict was received in the court room.

CRUSHED UNDER BEAM.

Discovery of Body Indicates Fate of Fireman Welsh.

New York, Jan. 15.—In the shadow of weakening walls that threatened each moment to totter and fall, a squad of firemen worked for five hours yesterday afternoon to wrest from the ruins of the Equitable building the body of Battalion Chief Wm. Walsh, who met death in the fire of last Tuesday. They found his body shortly after noon, half sitting, half reclining, with outstretched arms, pinned face down by a giant iron beam and with only his rubber coat showing. It was dark when they lifted him out and, save for his great coat, he would hardly have been identified.

The coroner's physician believed that the chief had been asphyxiated as he groped through the burning building, and that the debris which fell upon him crushed an already lifeless body. The neck, and almost every bone in the body was broken. There were but few burns.

A crowd of thousands defied the sharp wind and biting cold and gathered about the ruins as his body was taken from the wreckage to the hearse. They bared their heads in silence as it drove away.

Funds for the relief of the families of those killed in the fire rolled up to a total approximately $10,000 on Saturday.

A special merit fund, to be created by contributions from financiers and corporations and to be placed at the disposal of the commissioners of the police and fire departments of New York, of relieving distress and rewarding heroism, was started Saturday by J. P. Morgan & Co. and Kuhn, Loeb & Co., who headed the lists with donations of $5,000 each.

In their letter to the commissioners, the bankers give the motive inspiring the creation of the fund as a desire to express the appreciation of banks and bankers in the Wall street district of the work of police and firemen.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The fear of a coal strike has rushed up prices in Britain.

The Government has decided to abandon the Newmarket Canal.

Wm. R. Taylor, formerly manager of the Hull Electric Railway Co., died at Aylmer, Que., Saturday, aged 48.

U. S. millers would reduce grain rates from the Canadian Northwest to Minneapolis and Duluth. They propose to mill our wheat in bond.

It is reported at Ottawa that the Grand Trunk Pacific will seek for legislation empowering it to make a debenture stock issue of $15,000,000.

Robbers Loot Street Car.

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 15.—Two armed highwaymen held up a street car on Hastings street in the east end of the city at 11 o'clock Saturday night. After securing all the valuables, which the passengers had, and shooting Conductor William Barker, they escaped in an automobile which they had earlier in the evening stolen from G. E. Torrey, manager for Henry Birks & Co. Yesterday morning the automobile was found in perfect condition standing in the rear of the Cambia street bridge.

It is estimated that the hold-up men got $3,000 in cash and jewelry. Conductor Barker refused to give up his fare box and the robbers fired three shots, one striking him in the back of the head and rendering him unconscious. He was not seriously hurt.

Vasey's grocery store was held up Saturday evening and $60 taken. Two hold-up men were captured last week in the persons of Ralph Munger and J. Alford.

Young Teacher Ends Life.

Uxbridge, Jan. 15.—Miss Evelyn Baker, who until Christmas taught school at Leaskdale, was in Uxbridge Saturday night until about 10 o'clock, when she was driven to her home by a young man of the town. The family retired, and after they had been in their room for some time, Miss Baker was heard leaving her room and going downstairs. A few minutes after she was found in the pantry taking something, but refused to state what it was.

She again went to her room, and in a short time was heard groaning. When found she was in convulsions, and although Dr. Mellow, who lives quite close, was immediately summoned, she died before the stomach pump could be used. An inquest will be held.

Belleville Intermediates Play Here To-morrow

Only Home Game This Week at Brock Street Rink To-morrow Night---Visitors Although Beaten at Home Will Prove an Awkward Proposition.

The only O.H.A. game in Peterborough this week will be the match at Brock street rink to-morrow night, when the Belleville and Peterborough intermediates will play their return game. There will in all probability be a big crowd, as Peterborough fans have had no opportunity to see Capt. Park's aggregation perform at home for over a week and they want to see a game. Although Peterborough defeated Belleville in Belleville on Friday, it was only after a stubborn fight that they managed to annex the big end of the score and the Bay of Quinte team looks like an aggregation that would put up a sturdy argument either at home or abroad. There is a probability that the veteran Doctor Gilbert may be introduced to turn out with the Belleville team for to-morrow's game, and the husky medico would certainly be of assistance to the team. The Petes finish their training for this contest with a practice to-night and they are right on edge. It should be a game well worth seeing. The puck will be faced at 8.15 o'clock.

BIG CROWD GOING TO LINDSAY TO-NIGHT---TEAM IN GOOD SHAPE

Indications point to a big crowd accompanying the Peterborough junior O.H.A. team to Lindsay to-night when the return game with the Lindsay Midgets will be played. This is about the most important game the young Petes have had to play this season and a win in Lindsay will give them a great start for the championship of the district. No one realizes this more than the players themselves and they are going into to-night's game with the determination to annex another victory. The team is in fine shape and should give a good account of themselves. The line-up will be exactly the same as that which defeated Cobourg in the opening game here, while Lindsay will have the same line-up as played here last week.

The special train will leave the Grand Trunk station sharp at 7 o'clock and will leave Lindsay on the return trip as soon as possible after the game. The round trip fare is 75c. with a 40c. rate for children — the cheapest excursion of the season. One of the best crowds that ever left Peterborough on a hockey excursion is going along.

BELLEVILLE INTELLIGENCER'S VIEWS OF THE GAME

The Belleville Intelligencer says:

For their scheduled game in the O. H. A. Intermediate series to be played here last night, Peterborough sent down a team with a high reputation, but they almost lost that reputation to a team which had positively no reputation. The visitors, who came with all the pomp and circumstance of a special train, which carried forty-three of their rooters, are a team composed of O. H. A. amateurs, some of whom have played together for years and are perfectly trained. They boasted of having beaten Lindsay recently 13 to 1, and expressed their sure and certain belief that they would do as well, or even better, here. To oppose these alleged Goliaths of the hockey world, Belleville had only a pick-up seven, composed of amateurs of the "simon-pure" kind, who had not been trained and who had never practised together. And yet the local boys had the best of the play until lack of condition manifested its inevitable effect, and then the visitors won, but only by a very small majority, and, after a strenuous hockey battle, such as is seldom seen. Under the circumstances the vanquished were entitled to great praise. The crowd was smaller than usual, owing to the extremely cold weather.

It was exactly 9 o'clock when Chaucer Elliott of Kingston, the referee, blew his whistle as a signal for play to commence. Symons, centre for Belleville, and Parks, who played a like position for Peterborough, crossed sticks, the puck was placed between them and the game was off to a good start. At the commencement neither team seemed to be playign hard, but after a few minutes they became warmed up and then it was a battle royal for some time. When about 28 minutes of actual play had elapsed the puck was taken into the enemy's teritory, and Symons, for Belleville, secured the rubber and shot it into Peterborough's net, scoring the first and only goal that was secured in the first half of the game.

After the usual time allowance for rest, the teams were again called upon the ice, and at the start it was apparent the visitors were going to make a desperate effort to win the game. They made repeated rushes down the ice which the local players were unable to check, and in about five minutes the puck was handed into the home net, tieing the score, much to the delight of the suporters of the visiting eam, who were presen in goodly numbers. Paly was immediately resumed, and in a few minutes the visitors again scored. At this stage of the game the suporters of the local team urged the boys on, but they were not in condition to stand the pace set by their opponents, who, as previously stated, were well trained and also, as they were not now so strongly checked, played combination as it should be played. It was now apparent that the Peterborough team would win, and the question was asked by not a few what would the score be. A third goal was son scored by Peterborough and shortly before the bell rang to denote that time was up, the visiting team scored their fourth goal, thus winning the game by a score of 4 to 1.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Mercantile League.

The Lock Works team and the Bell Telephone Co's seven were the contestants in the Mercantile League fixture at Brock street rink on Saturday night, the Hello people team winning out by 6 goals to 1. The Lock Works aggregation put up a stubborn battle in the first half and honours were even at the breathing spell, but the Bell team were in better shape and won handily, getting five goals while their opponents were blanked in the second half. The winners presented a classy appearance in their new white Jerseys adorned with a big blue bell. They had a large following, including a number of feminine supporters. Fred Kelly made an acceptable referee.

SACRED HEART WON.

In a very fast game of hockey at the Sacred Heart Rink Saturday afternoon the Sacred Heart Junior team defeated the C. G. E. Juniors by a score of 6 goals to 1.

The line-up was as follws:

C. G. E.—Goal, A'Hern; point, Donough; cover point, Peters; centre, Bartley; left wing, Wheeler; right wing, Hatcher; rover, Walker.

Hatcher suffered a severe "crack" on the nose, which put him out of the game for some time. "Slide" Christopher gave satisfaction as referee.

THE WEATHER

A decided rise in temperature took place on Sunday and to-day the thermometer is still high. Lowest Saturday night, 10 below; lowest Sunday night, 15 above zero. Cold weather is again on the way.

POLISHING WINDOWS.

Windows become dimmed very quickly during the cold weather, and the best way to clean them is to get a cake of one of the scouring preparations, "warranted not to scratch," and wet a cloth over the cake, and then cover the panes of glass with the scourine, until it looks as though it had been whitewashed; let this dry on the glass, then go over it with a soft, dry cloth or a handful of soft crumpled newspaper, polishing the scouring off. It will polish beautifully, and please you.

DYSPEPTIC
Food Does You No Good

Half the time you're afraid to eat; your tongue is coated, mouth tastes bad, stomach is bloated. If you want to get well, stop using dyspepsia tablets, and go to the source of the trouble before it is too late. Strengthen your stomach, cast out the bile, regulate the bowels—do this, and dyspepsia will be no more.

For your condition the best prescription is Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which are made specially for the stomach, kidneys and liver. No better remedy will be devised, for Dr. Hamilton's Pills are perfect.

DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS A SURE CURE

"No one could realise my sufferings from stomach trouble and indigestion. For five years I have not been well. My food did me no good, because I couldn't digest or assimilate. My doctor said constipation was at the root of my trouble, so I got Dr. Hamilton's Pills. My appetite improved, pain after eating ceased, and my food digested quickly. I am delighted with the thorough cure I derived from Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

"(Signed) MARTIN E. WALKER.
"Bridgewater."

Quick results attend the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills; this medicine cures all trouble in the stomach and digestive organs by removing the cause.

OBITUARY

MRS. ANNIE McMAHON.

The death, under very lamentable circumstances, occurred on Saturday last of Mrs. Annie McMahon, of Lindsay. The deceased lady, it is understood, was visiting Mr. Leslie Sargison of 100 Aylmer street, and, after a sojourn at that residence of only two days, suddenly fell a victim to asthma. Her advanced age—she was in her seventy-fifth year—prevented her from shaking off the effects of the malady and she passed away at 4.30 on Saturday.

The late Mrs. McMahon was a widow, but is survived by several daughters, who are at present living in Toronto. Her remains were conveyed to Toronto by the 4.26 train yesterday afternoon.

MR. SAMUEL CURTIS.

At the very ripe age of 95 years, Mr. Samuel Curtis passed away this morning at the residence of his cousin, Mr. William Curtis, of 584 Downie street, after an illness extending over a period of one week. Death was due to bronchitis.

The deceased gentleman was born in Wiltshire, England and came to Canada in 1838. For many years he lived in Douro, but has been a resident of the city proper for upwards of forty years, living a retired life.

The late Mr. Curtis is survived by one brother, Uriah, of Walkerton, Ont., and a number of nephews and nieces. His wife predeceasd him som nine years since.

The funeral will leave the residence above mentioned at 2 p.m., on Wednesday afternoon to the Little Lake cemetery for interment.

Mr. McMullen Returns To West

Mr. and Mrs. D. B. McMullen, accompanied by Mrs. Mullen's mother, Mrs. Ryan, left this morning for Edmonton. Mr. Mullen conducts a real estate and financial agency in Edmonton, and has been here on his annual business trip. Mr. Mullen had no Edmonton property for sale, as it is impossible to get options on good property there, owing to the fact that are so many people on the ground looking for that class of property.

There are a great many people in Peterborough doing business with Mr. Mullen, in this way. Their plan of action is to send him their money through the Traders Bank in Edmonton, giving him power of attorney to buy and sell roperty for them. He has a list of people here whom he can refer prospective buyers to, for references.

Mr. Mullen has proved himself to be strictly honourable in his business transactions, and he has pleased all those with whom he has had the pleasure of doing business with. Those contemplating a trip to Edmonton will find Mr. Mullen's offices in the new Tegler building, 1st street, and he will be pleased to show his friends through the city.

WEDDING BELLS

BIRDGENAW—DeLAPLANTE.

A pretty, but quiet wedding was solemnised at the Sacred Heart church at 7.30 this morning by the Rev. Doctor O'Brien, when Miss Armine DeLaplante, daughter of Ernest DeLaplante, was united in marriage to Mr. Joseph Birdgenaw, son of Mr. John Birdgenaw, formerly of Lindsay. The bride was assisted by her cousin, Miss Harriet Pierce and the groom by the bride's brother, Mr. Osias DeLaplante. They will reside at 159 Rubidge street, city. Their many friends wish them hearty congratulations.

MAYOR BRADBURN ENTERTAINS CITY COUNCIL TO BANQUET

City Fathers Meet Together and Discuss Plans for the Year ---Many Improvements Were Suggested for Betterment of City's Interests---Mr. Moore on Government by Commission.

The City Council and Officials, to the number of twenty-five were the guests of Mayor Bradburn at an informal banquet given by him, in Hooper's banquet hall last evening. The affair was a noteworthy one in many respects, and was the occasion for considerable discussion and comment relative to certain improvements which might be made, with a view to advancing the city's interest. The City Council was present in a body, with the exception of Ald. Graham, also His Honour Judge Huycke, Magistrate Dumble, Mr. Vincent Eastwood, President of the Board of Trade, Sheriff Hall, ex-Mayor Morrow, Mr. W. K. Moore, chairman of the Trust Commissioners, Mr. T. F. Matthews, chairman of the Water Commissioners, City Clerk Armstrong, Mr. T. A .S. Hay, City Engineer, Mr. Adams, City Treasurer, Mr. Green, City Tax Collector, Chief of Police Thompson, Fire Chief Howard and Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P.P.

Only three new faces have been added to this year's Council, which fact lent an air of familiarity to the proceedings, and a jovial spirit of good fellowship predominated throughout the evening. After ample justice had been done to the good things placed upon the festive board, the work of disposing of the toast list commenced.

A toast to the King was followed by the singing of the national anthem.

Trust Commissioners.

In proposing a toast to the City Commissioners, Mayor Bradburn introduced a suggestion concerning the heating of the Market Hall. He also drew attention to the good service rendered by the Trust Commissioners throughout the past year.

In response to this toast, Mr. W. H. Moore thanked the Mayor for his kindly reference to the Commissioners, of which he had the honour to be a member. He gave a brief outline of the work which comes under the administration of this department, referring back to the time of its inception, which was fifty-one years ago. The city was in good standing financially, and money was always forthcoming to meet the outstanding debt. Mr. Moore also gave an expression of opinion concerning municipal government by commission, believing as he did, that the work would be better done, were a few good men placed in charge of the civic affairs. By paying them a good salary, they would be enabled to devote their whole time and energies in the interests of the city. As examples of the success which had attended the adoption of this system by the Dominion and Ontario governments, he instanced the Hydro-Electric and Railway Commissions, and believed that it could be applied with equally good results by municipal bodies. Mr. Moore stated that he had no desire to disparage the past or present Council. It was composed of a splendid body of men, who were prepared to serve the city to the best of their ability. He considered that the policy of electing ten or eleven men to administer civic affairs without salary or remuneration, to be past all comprehension, and one that could not be supported or commended. He also advocated the placing of the Board of Works under commission. In conclusion, Mr. Moore expressed the hope that the present Council would give this question a little consideration. "I am not so terribly disappointed," remarked the speaker, "with the work performed by our Council when they have so many irons in the fire."

Water Commissioners.

Alderman G. N. Gordon proposed the toast to the Water Commissioners, and in so doing, referred to the splendid work which had been been accomplished by that body. Eternal vigilance and watchfulness have marked the actions of the Commissioners in the past;; as a result we now have a water system that cannot be equalled. "Beyond the fact that we sometimes get a little sawdust in it," jocularly remarked Mr. Gordon, "our water is free from infectious influences." The speaker made reference to the fact that the Hydro-Electric Power Commission were considering the possibility of assuming control of the Trent Canal water power, and suggested that a Civic Power Commission be incorporated with the Water Commission department.

Mr. T. F. Matthews, chairman of the Commissioners, responded to the toast. He congratulated the Mayor upon his election by acclamation, and touched upon the good qualities of the Council, who were to assist him in the administration of the affairs of the city. "As regards a little sawdust in the water," said Mr. Matthews "we all like a stick in it sometimes, and if the Mayor had been a little more generous, we might have had a stick in it to-night." He then gave a brief history concerning the work of the department, which showed it to be in a healthy condition financially. In a few years the department would be able to pay over to the city a substantial sum of money, which could be used for the building of roads, bridges, etc. As very few people were aware ,a new laboratory has been installed in the city buildings, where tests could be made from time to time by the Medical Health Officer of the city. This was a new department and was a successful one. The new pumping station has been completed and is fully equipped and will compare with any similar plant installed in any city of Ontario with a population of ten thousand and over. Mr. Matthews was of the opinion that any revenue which may accrue from this department should be applied towards the reductions of the water rates. "I contributed my time last year, and money, the latter owing to the kindness of the Chief of Police and the Magistrate," concluded Mr. Matthews amid laughter.

Police Commissioners.

In proposing the toast to the Police Commissioners, Ald. Duffus paid a glowing tribute to his Honour Judge Huycke, who is a member of the Board. "He is a man with great strength of character, prepared at all times to do his duty without fear or favour," declared the speaker, and a gentleman who would be a credit to any position which the city might offer him. Mr. D. W. Dumble had done much to lessen crime in this city, by reason of his good judgment, and had made Peterborough an uncomfortable place for criminals. The police in this city are second to none, and Peterborough has a reputation that is second to none in Canada, as concerns her possibilities. It has become an important manufacturing centre and is advancing rapidly.

Judge Huycke upon responding to the toast, said that it was all very well to extoll the Trust Commissioners and Water Commissioners, but it was necessary to have a police department to protect the city's interests, which were congregated on the banks of the Otonabee. The day was coming soon, when an additional appropriation would have to be made to provide for an increase in the force. The force, as at present existed was a good one, but there was yet need of more protection, especially in the outlying portions of the city. The speaker hoped that the present year would be a successful one with the Council and that prosperity would fall abundantly upon the people which they represented.

Magistrate Dumble, who is also represented on the Board of Police Commissioners replied, saying in part, that he was frequently importuned, both at his home and on the street, by those who were wont to get the ear of the court. To those appeals he always turned a deaf ear, as he felt that by doing otherwise he would not be considering the best interests of the people. He also advocated the proper heating of the market building and a covering for the market square. "Protect those without, as well as those within," admonished His Worship. He was proud of the good showing made by the Waterworks department. Mr. Dumble also dealt briefly with the power quest io , classing it as a serious propositio., even as it stands to-day. Every town along the front has power and waterways, and there is not a place along the front which is not equally as well situated

LONDON WOMAN SHOT BY A HIGHWAYMAN

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ONT., Jan. 16. — Mrs. Mary Fraser, a middle aged woman was shot through the side shortly after 11 o'clock last night by a highwayman who stepped out from behind a hedge and holding a gun to her head forced her to give up her purse. He then snatched a gold chain from her neck and yelled at her to go. She had only proceeded a short distance when he fired. The bullet struck against a corset steel and glanced. It is not thought that the wound is serious. She ran home and fainted.

Half an hour before this a young girl was held up, presumably by the same man, and robbed of her purse and some valuables. This man said that he was an Englishman who was up against it. He told her to go on home and not make any trouble for him.

WARRING BATTLESHIPS SALUTE THEIR MAJESTIES

Special to The Examiner.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 18th.—King eGorge and Queen Mary, passing through the eRd Sea on their way home from India, received salutes from both the Italian and Turkish fleets, who are playing tag with each other in an effort to bring about or avoid naval combat. The advent of Their Britannic Majesties' transport, with convoying warships, was practily a signal for an armistice on the seas between Italy and Turkey, as neither warring nation desired to risk a chance shot getting tripped up by British warships convoying the King and Queen of Britain in the Mediterranean. Their Majesies will be welcomed by the fleets of Great Powers on arriving in England. Their Majesties will rest a short time before returning the coronation visits to the continental courts.

Cheap Electric Power and Other Essentials for Manufacturing

Article No. 3

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—One of the natural advantages that Peterborough has is abundance of power. There are water powers within the city and many more close to it. Water powers developed and undeveloped are within easy reach of Peterborough. If it is required, 30,000 to 40,000 Hydro-Electric horse power can be furnished here as quickly as it is called for. And it is supplied at a price lower than in most cities on account of the proximity of the water powers. Compared with a number of places in Western Ontario that are bidding for factories, the price is lower here, and this is an advantage that should be effective. The companies offer power for industrial purposes for twenty horse power or over at $20.00 per horse power per year for a continuous service for the power actually consumed as determined by test at the factory when in operation, allowing a ten minute peak; or, if preferred, $12.00 per horse power per year for the rated capacity of the motors installed, plus one-quarter of a cent per horse power for the current used. The latter rate is an advantageous one in a factory where all the machinery is not in continuous operation. To illustrate. Suppose the maximum demand in a factory is 100 horse power and motors are installed to supply that demand, but the average load factor is sixty per cent. of that—that is, owing to the machinery not being in operation continuously, the amount of power used averages sixty per cent. of what the motors will furnish. The yearly account in that case will be $1200.00 on the basis rat, of $12.00 per H. P. plus 600 H.P. hours per day at one-quarter of a cent per H.P. hour, and counting that for 300 days in a year, this will amount to $450.00, making the whole charge for the year $1650.00 or $16.50 per horse power. Even these rates might be shaded in special cases. I do not now wish to discuss in any way the question of the city obtaining power from the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission. If it does, I assume it will be to lower the price and the advantages will be greater. But as matters stand now, Peterborough can furnish all the power that can be required and at attractively low prices. This is another factor with which to push Peterborough.

Manufacturers looking for a location for industries always enquire about labour conditions. They want to locate where mechanics will come to them and where there is good feeling between employees and employers. In this, Peterborough meets the conditions. It has the conveniences and many of the attractions of a larger city, and at the same time expenses in some particulars are less, and people like to live here. This is evidenced by the large number of workmen who own their own homes here and are among the most permanent and public-spirited citizens.

Central situation,
Cheap electric power,
Excellent shipping facilities,
Good labour conditions,
And most suitable sites.

These advantages have attracted industries; they should continue to attract them, and will do so. We should all endeavour to make these advantages known and to spread the reputation of Peterborough as a manufacturing centre and one where manufacturers will find all the essentials and accessories for successful manufacturing.

Some of these accessories may be referred to later.

Yours truly,
CIVIS SUM.

FIRST AT JERUSALEM.

Rev. James Allen, M.A., General Secretary of Methodist Home Missions, in the course of a sermon on Sunday, said that Toronto needed missionaries as badly as any heathen land. And many will agree with the spirit of his declaration. Mr. Allen says the influx of foreigners, of not the highest moral character or ideals demands that more attention be paid to home conditions. In this he seems to be right and his remarks apply not only to Toronto, but to all Canada. Our north and our west are filling rapidly with persons who are, many of them, practically heathens, and need conversion very badly. A large proportion of our new population is nominally Christian, and, perhaps, really Christian in life and practice. But how long will they remain so if they are subjected to the isolation of new conditions, the deadening thirst for gain, and unprovided with the church services and regular observances of religion, which, even in our well-churched communities, are not always effective in producing the fruits of good living, and the preservation of high moral tone. We need missionary zeal and effort, far beyond our capacity to supply the home needs and demands. Our churches in Canada are bewailing the fact that candidates for the sacred ministry are so few—too few to supply the home demand. So is it logical, is it good religious business to lessen the supply by sending missionaries to foreign lands, at a relative expense, representing the maintenance of home missionaries three to one. We need home missionaries to help maintain a high moral standard among our own people, to turn the new elements of our population, that is practically heathen, into the right way and to prevent the degradation of the better elements through absence of the maintaining power of the preached gospel and religious observances. We, in Canada, are not quite ready, either, to take the better-than-thou stand toward the heathen. The Christian religion is intended to make men better, to regenerate and better the individual life. At the present time, in this country, we are subjected to influences tending to throw Christians into rival and warring divisions in which the aim is not rivalry to see who will the better live and better adorn the faith professed, but to build up one form of religion by pulling down another. When we can take care of our own people in religious matters, when we provide the spiritual meat for our new population that will save them from spiritual starvation; when we can turn our own Christian energies to the true path, to making our own lives conform with what we profess, we can, with better grace, give attention to heathen lands. We must effectively preach the Gospel at Jerusalem before we can consistently and with a clear conscience expend the bulk of our means, the best of our energies, the flower of the ministry, upon the slow responding heathen. Is the divine command to preach the Gospel to every creature, to be interpreted in its literality, to be a formal discharge of Christian responsibility and a mere casting of responsibility upon the heathen, leaving him to his own after devices, while we neglect the effective preaching of the Gospel, and its application to our own citizenship.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

So many candidates for aldermanic honours, remarks the Montreal Herald, fall into one of two categories—men the general public has heard too much of, and men the genral public has heard nothing at all of.

It's a pity to make Mr. Hoyle, of North Ontario, speaker of the Legislature—put him in a position where he cannot speak. He is one of the most ready debaters in the House, if a little inclined to be wordy.

The deliberation of the Ontario Legislature will be conducted with due solemnity and decorum next session according to Hoyle. W. H. Hoyle, M.P.P. for North Ontario, undertaker, is to be the new speaker.

Messrs. Sexsmith, M. P., and Thompson, M.P.P., made a mission ary visit to Lakefield, and Lakefield is to have a new post office building. Where do Havelock and Norwood come in? Are they to be neglected, or are they regarded as so sound in the faith that they will "vote right", without substantial inducements?

"It is rather a pity," says the Montreal Herald, "that Montreal has not some minor municipal governing bodies which would act as the school boards do in Ontario towns and train citizens for the broader sphere of the City Council." The Herald is a little wide of the mark. It is our general experience in Peterborough that an aldermanic body could, with advantage, sit as pupils at the feet of our School Board Gamaliels.

Mr. G. H. Bradbury, M. P., for Selkirk, Manitoba, has the idea that the flag is too freely prostituted in the interests of advertising, such as cigareteers, quack medicines, etc., and is thinking of proposing legislation to limit the use of the flag for advertising purposes. If Mr. Bradbury would make his proposed legislation retro-active, he would hit hard the party guilty of exploiting the flag in the advertising interests of political quackery.

HOW TO REMOVE THE GRIEVANCE.

(Farmers' Sun)

Sir Edmund Walker, in his annual address as President of the Bank of Commerce, complained that our trade with the United States has always been one-sided and is growing more so. During 1911, he said, Canada imported from the United States goods to the value of $293,403,000, and exported to the same country to the value of $119,303,000, leaving a balance of $174,200,000 against us.

The condition complained of can be very easily remedied. All that is necessary is to accept the United States offer of reciprocity in farm products which still remains on the American statute books. Northern and Eastern States, which lie almost alongside of us, are obliged to go outside their own borders for 60 per cent. of the food they consume. Open these markets to the products of Canadian farms, and in a short time the increase in our exports of agricultural products will be sufficient to offset the adverse balance of trade that now stands against us.

THE JESUIT OATH.

(Toronto Star.)

It is unfortunate that the question of mixed marriages, which is practical, and may require legislation, should have become associated with the question of the alleged Jesuit oath which is not practical, and has no bearing upon the conditions of life in Canada. No Roman Catholic in Canada, priest or layman, has the remotest notion of trying to carry out the obligations read by the Rev. C. O. Johnston. Nobody wants to extirpate Protestants and Liberals; to hang, burn, waste, boil, flay, strangle, and bury alive heretics of any kind. No Protestant wants to do these things to his Catholic neighbour, and no Catholic wants to do them to his Protestant neighbour. Then let us act upon our own knowledge of our neighbours, the dictates of our own hearts, our own humanity, our own commonsense, and not muddle our heads and harden our hearts by discussions of alleged oaths.

Catholics deny the existence of this horrible oath, and by doing so they show that their heads are clear and their hearts are sound. What more do we need? Suppose, for the sake of argument that some crazy fanatic in a bygone age had sworn to depose heretical rulers and flay heretics alive, what has that to do with Canada in the twentieth century?

Somebody will perhaps reply "Rome is always the same." That is a piece of rhetorical rubbish. Rome is not always the same. Churches differ in every country and in every age. Every individual has his own religion. A million men may accept the articles of a creed, but everyone will have his own conception of the religion, and make his own application of it to his daily life. Every institution also changes with the ages, and is influenced by the spirit of the age.

A century ago there were two hundred offences for which a person might suffer capital punishment in England. It was a capital offence to counterfeit the stamps that were used for the sale of perfumery or hair powder, to rob a rabbit warren, to cut down a tree, to personate a Greenwich pensioner, or to harbour a smuggler. If somebody were to say that this was an evidence that the English were a bloodthirsty race, he would be laughed at. If he said that although the law had been changed, the spirit still remained, he would be regarded as hopelessly prejudiced.

Even while these laws were on the statute book, common sense and humanity were making them ineffective. While there were two hundred statutory capital offences, there were only twenty-five in which the punishment of death was inflicted during a quarter of a century. The more power the people obtained, the more human and sensible the law became.

It is useless to deny the fact of religious intolerence and persecution, and useless also to try to apportion the blame to one church or another. The difference is not in the church, but in the age. In the dark ages, people are burned, tortured, and killed for heresy. A gleam of light, and burning gives way to imprisonment. Another gleam, and imprisonment gives way to heresy-hunting and social ostracism. Let us try to dispel what darkness still remains and judge our Catholic or Protestant neighbour by his life, not by his creed, and especially not by perverted views of his creed.

Thousands Now Use This Low-Cost Cough Syrup

A Family Supply for 25c, Saving You $2—The Quickest, Best Thing You Ever Used, or Money Refunded.

The prompt and positive results given by this inexpensive cough medicine have caused it to be used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy. It gives instant relief, and will usually wipe out the most obstinate, deep-seated cough inside of 24 hours. It quickly succeeds, even in whooping cough and croup.

A 50-cent bottle of Pinex, when mixed with home-made sugar syrup, makes 16 ounces—a family supply—of the most pleasant and effective cough remedy that money could buy, at a saving of $2. Easily prepared in five minutes—full directions in package.

Children take Pinex Cough Syrup willingly, because it tastes good. It stimulates the appetite, and is slightly laxative—both excellent features. Splendid for hoarseness, throat tickle, bronchitis, etc., and a prompt, successful remedy for incipient lung trouble.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of imported Norway White Pine extract and is rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Simply mix it with sugar syrup or strained honey, in a 16-oz. bottle, and it is ready for use.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will gladly get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

SUN LIFE'S BIG YEAR

Income in 1911 Was $10,557,335, an Increase of $981,881

Substantial increases in the amount of business done, in income, assets and surplus are shown in a report just completed of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada for the year 1911. Figures were given recently of the amount of new assurance written during the year. A later statement shows the total amount of assurance in force at the end of the year to have been $164,572,073, an increase of $21,022,791 over the amount in force in 1910. The income of the company has grown to $10,557,335, an increase of $981,881, or about 12.5 per cent., while the excess of income over expenditure was $5,189,492 in 1911. Assets have been increased by $5,736,095 and now amount to $43,909,995, while the surplus of the company stands at $4,717,073, or over 19 per cent. higher than a year ago. Profits paid to policy-holders during the year amounted to nearly half a million dollars. Some of the principal figures from the company's report of the year's operations are:

	1911.	Increase over 1910.
Assurances issued and paid for	$26,436,781.19	2,994,463.38

Profits paid policyholders	479,138.63
Excess of income over expenditure	$5,189,492.99

PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN FOR A BAD STOMACH

No Dyspepsia, Gas, Heartburn or Indigestion in Five Minutes

If you had some Diapepsin handy and would take a little now your stomach distress or Indigestion would vanish in five minutes and you would feel fine.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, out-of-order stomach before you realize it.

If your meals don't tempt you, or what little you do eat seems to fill you, or lays like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Ask your Pharmacist for a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a little just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no undigested food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odours.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it prevents fermentation and takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is at any drug store waiting for you.

These large 50-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other stomach disturbance.

Water Commission'rs Hold Meeting

The Water Commissioners met yesterday afternoon, when Mr. T. F. Matthews, chairman, and Mr. W. H. Moore were present.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie was heard with reference to a bill of $20.00 against him for water, at 140 Simcoe street. Mr. Gillespie stated that no water had been used from these premises, except for drinking purposes. On motion of Mr. Moore, seconded by the Chairman, the rate was fixed at $4.00 per year, gross.

A letter was read from Mr. Wm McKnight, saying he had not signed a petition for a main on Concession street, and asked to pay for a lawn only for 694 Concession street. Mr. Samuel McKnight was heard in support of the application. The matter was left over.

A report was read from Dr. A. W McPherson, bacteriologist, of the analyses of water made during the year 1911. The report was received.

A letter was read from Davis Thompson Co., saying that if the pump house was insured up to 90 per cent. of value, the insurance rate would be 25 cents. The communication was received.

A letter was read from W. Kennedy, Jr., regarding the testing of the Venture metre.—Received.

A letter was read from the Electric Installation Co., quoting prices for putting lights outside the pumping station.

A letter was read from Patterson and Hewsard, giving quotations for a sign for the pumping station, 14 x 6 ft. 6 in. at $50 or with raised border at $100.00.—Received.

A report was read from Dr. McPherson of examination of water in December.—Received.

A letter was read from W. Kennedy Jr., giving a copy of one he had sent to the John McDougall Co., regarding testing the Venture metre.—Received.

A letter was read from W. H. Meldrum regarding a charge of $1.00 for turning water off and on at No. 388 Water street. The matter was referred to the Superintendent.

A letter was read from Mr. Peter Kerr, applying for a position at the pumping station.—Received.

Accounts.

The following accounts were read and moved to be paid.

OTTUMWA WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Ottumwa, Iowa.—"For years I was almost a constant sufferer from female trouble in all its dreadful forms; shooting pains all over my body, sick headache, spinal weakness, dizziness, depression, and everything that was horrid. I tried many doctors in different parts of the United States, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than all the doctors. I feel it my duty to tell you these facts. My heart is full of gratitude to you for my cure."—Mrs. HARRIET E. WAMPLER, 524 S. Ransom Street, Ottumwa, Iowa.

Consider This Advice.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous medicine, made only from roots and herbs, has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, confidential, and always helpful.

By JOHN MARCH

They entered a richly furnished apartment, the walls were hung with tapestry from the Gobelin looms, representing scriptural stories in still unfaded colours. There were a few bronze and marble casts scattered about, all requiring explanation, and so fulfilling their purpose of promoting conversation. She moved to and fro, chatting, leaving one object for another, glistening and lighting the room as a bird of bright feathers illuminates the whole of a dusky tree by darting in and out half seen, half concealed, among the clustering leaves. Paul's wandering gaze caught the shadowy purple of an oil painting in an untapestried recess. He walked towards it, and silently contemplated the saintly Raphael face. The eyes looking back into his were not unlike his own, large and dark, with tender mournfulness.

"I call that picture 'Paul'!" said a soft voice close to him that had some sweet notes of the thrush in it. "I tell him about my heart's great secret—and those dear dark eyes say such kind, brave, loving words to me."

A little tremulous hand stole through his arm, warm, velvety fingers curled themselves round his.

"Do you know the name of the original?" he asked in a matter of fact tone, gently disengaging himself, while his heart fluttered up and down like a bird on the point of taking flight. "I thought—what's that?" he exclaimed, looking towards the door, strangely startled; "didn't the key turn in the lock?"

"Very likely," she rejoined, not at all concerned, "that stupid lock does sometimes catch. It's no consequence though; we can leave this room by a sliding-panel behind that piece of tapestry representing David and Bathsheba. I think I've shown you most of the curios, but not the enamelled ware. I have some exquisite pieces of majolica."

"Perhaps I may have the pleasure of seeing it another time," he said politely.

"A good many times, I hope," she answered, plucking a crimson cactus from a plant and letting it cling to her hair by its prickly stalk; "we'll go now, or at least when you've answered just a leetle teeny tiny question."

"Well, what is it?" he asked, relieved and smiling down at her, for he had never seen anything more wonderful than her beauty, or her persuasive winning grace.

She raised her round white arms, their seductive curves enhanced by the dazzle of coloured sparks from her diamond bangles, and crossed her hands upon the bosom of his stiff shirt-front. The red blood flushed in her cheeks at each stroke of her panting heart. Her small, passionate lips were slightly parted to give vent to her hurried breathing. Bright-eyed, full-throated, she looked like a wild tropical bird, its brilliant plumage shimmering in the sunshine.

"I love you!" she whispered, in little sobbing gasps, "Paul—darling—can't you—won't you let me be your wife?"

CHAPTER XI.

The Golden Mean.

Hiding as best he could the rage and impatience he felt, Paul wondered whether Rowena Wycherly had been created for his especial torment.

"Once before, in Squire Fleming's summer house, Mrs. Wycherly, I told you I had no affection for you," he said curtly; "surely you are not so silly as to have brought me here on purpose to repeat that statement?"

"That's the point," she said, laughing recklessly. "I want to know why you have no affection for me. What is the matter with me? Am I old or ugly or misshapen that you avoid me? I might as well be a leper, or some dirty, rheumatic, infirm old crone."

"As soon as I became aware of your feelings towards me, Mrs. Wycherly, and being conscious of my inability to return it, I considered it my duty to avoid you."

"Will you please tell me why you cannot return it?"

"Because you are not the kind of woman I could love."

"In what way?"

"In every way; nothing about you appeals to me save your beauty, and that only to the artistic side of my nature. It's unpleasant and difficult to try to explain that the electric fluid of animal magnetism in your composition is powerless to attract any corresponding force in my nature, and—upon my soul, Mrs. Wycherly," he said, laughing despite his annoyance, "I don't know how to make it more intelligible, or how best to expound Dr. Fell's theory, but you must get it clearly and definitely fixed in your mind that I do not, and cannot entertain any sort of affection for you."

She looked at his dark, glossy head thrown slightly back, at the snowy whiteness of his linen, the orchid in his buttonhole, the polish of his boots, and the general handsomeness of his tall lithe person.

"That's strange," she said quietly, "because my feeling for you is that I would rather die than live without you."

There was something in the tone of her voice, in the sudden contraction of her pupils, that sobered him, and showed him the wisdom, the necessity of conciliation.

"I am sorry," he said, approaching her and laying the tips of his fingers on her firm white arm, "sorry you saw fit to re-open such an unsatisfactory discussion. Don't you remember we agreed to be friends, to forget all unprofitable difference? So long as I remain in Weyberne let us be friendly; there is no advantage gained in refusing one's porridge because the salt is denied."

She raised her arms and clung to him with desperate tenderness.

"Don't tease me, Paul," she implored; "don't drive me past a woman's decency."

"My dear Mrs. Wycherly! I don't wish to do anything of the kind," he said, endeavouring to extricate himself; "at the present time my most earnest desire is to prevent your saying more. To what end can such interview tend, except to shame you in your calmer moments?"

Her hands slipped from his neck, fell straight down, and clasped themselves in front of her, while she gazed at him in unfeigned astonishment.

"You don't seem to know in the least what you are talking about," she said slowly; "are you such a simpleton as to imagine I have schemed, planned, plotted, merely to lay bare the deepest, the most sacred feelings of my heart, the aspiration, hope, desire, of my inmost being, just for you and your friend, Felix Fleming, to ridicule? Why, I love you with a fierceness that alarms even myself, with the whole strength of my mind, body, and soul. When a woman of my temperament does that, there are only two roads open to her, one to heaven, the other to hell—listen," she went on, choking back something in her throat, her voice hoarse with the passion that consumed her, "I love you, and if I had my choice I would rather marry you willingly; nevertheless, I would be chained to you, Paul, though at every heartbeat you spurned me from your path. Do you suppose I wanted this crowd here to-night? Bah! that mob below is but the setting to a costly, coveted stone. I couldn't reach the precious gem unmounted, it glowed and gleamed, now near, now far, like a jack-o'-lantern down in the dark, dismal marshes."

He stood drawn to his full height, his dark face blanched.

"So you gave this ball, put yourself to all this trouble and lavish expenditure, just to tell me that you loved me?"

"Don't look at me like that," she said, pulling a petal from the orchid in his coat, back again to her wilful, wayward trifling; "not that alone, but to ask you to marry me."

"And if I refuse?"

"But you won't; why should you? I am rich, beautiful, young, and devoted to you. When I looked in the glass this morning, I knew, though you might make a show of resistance at first, you would succumb in the long run. Don't you think it is more natural for a woman, so gloriously beautiful as I, to wish to gather roses in the sunshine, to long for a lover's arms, for his frenzied kisses, to give herself body and soul, into his dear keeping, than to let her heart throb away its youth in solitude?"

"I can't say," he said, dubiously; "my nature is a cold one, but I am not the only man in creation, Mrs. Wycherly. There are hundreds of men, better born, better bred; moneyed men, worthier in every way than I am. Men whom you could captivate and inflame with the passion you desire, who would be proud to win you, proud to call you wife. Why, in the name of commonsense, have you fixed on me? A nameless pauper, a man who has to earn every mouthful of food he eats, who is in reality no more than a servant in the house of one of your friends, whose means o subsistence depend entirely upon his health and brain power, and should one or the other collapse he would drift like a helpless log into obscurity."

Health Restored Gained 29 Pounds

Many Years an Invalid—Untold Agony From Headaches

Dizziness, Sinking Spells and Excessive Weakness Disappear With Use of

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Nearly every woman will read with interest the letter of Mrs. Geo. Bradshaw, quoted below. It tells of years of great suffering from nervous Headache and other symptoms arising from weak, watery blood and a starved and exhausted condition of the nervous system.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Cosy Nook, Harlowe, Ont., writes: "I am glad to state that I received benefits from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food which I failed to get any place else. I was troubled for many years, in fact from my early womanhood, with weak, watery blood, and given to dropsy. I suffered untold agonies from nervous sick headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells, in fact was a semi-invalid for many years. I tried many kinds of patent medicines and got no help, and tried every new doctor that came along, but all failed to help me. Doctors told me I had no blood, and that my heart and kidneys were diseased, and that I had so many complaints there was not much use in doctoring up one or two. Four years ago I took six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and was glad to see I felt better, and then got six more, and they have cured me of many of my complaints. When I began taking Nerve Food I weighed 110 pounds and to-day I weigh 139, and am 45 years old.

READ WHAT THIS MOTHER SAYS ABOUT IT.

Mrs. Geo. Bateman, of 999 Bedford Avenue, Winnipeg, says:—"Pimples and sores broke out all over my little girl's face and hands. They spread, and got up inflammation. In the end they were one mass of sores! We tried ointment after ointment, but there was no noticeable improvement.

"A neighbour advised my trying Zam-Buk and leaving off all other remedies. I did so at once. Frequent applications of Zam-Buk soothed the pains and allayed the inflammation, and before long the sores began to look healthier. Gradually every scab and pimple disappeared, and the sores were healed completely, leaving the child's face smooth and white as possible.

"Since then, while using an old pair of scissors, they slipped, cutting my left thumb badly. Inflammation set in, and I feared blood poison, but began to apply Zam-Buk. The balm was applied directly, and within a week the wound was nicely healed."

MAYOR BRADBURN ENTERTAINS COUNCIL

as Peterborough. Peterborough is at a disadvantage because she has not got pre-eminence in her particular location, unless you can back it up by what you can do by way of inducing manufacturers to locate here. In connection with this His Worship advocated the building of factories and their subsequent rental to prospective manufacturers. In conclusion he touched on the question of beautifying the city and improving its appearance generally.

Mayor Bradburn, also a member of the Board of Police Commissioners, spoke a few words relative to Judge Huycke's suggestion concerning the question of increasing the police force. His attitude towards the matter was an impartial one.

Public Library Board.

This toast was proposed by Ald. Buller and was responded to by Mr. E. H. D. Hall briefly. He said that there were three thousand members on the roll at present, and the maintenance of the Library was carried on at a considerable expense, which could not be avoided. He also intimated that more assistance would probably be needed, and further, there was a possibility that they would have to call on the City Council for additional funds to meet the increased expenditure. He was also pleased to note that ex-Mayor Morrow had been appointed a member of the Board.

Provincial Legislature.

Ex-Mayor Morrow proposed the toast to the Provincial Legislature, and in his opening remarks congratulated Mayor Bradburn on his election to office. In referring to the police department, he called attention to the fact that in Chief Thompson's 1911 annual report, there was a recommendation calling for the appointment of four additional men to the force. Two of the required number were appointed, and the ex-Mayor expressed the hope that the Board would see fit to fulfill the recommendation this year. As to the Provincial Legislature, the work of which was very much allied with municipal matters, he expressed the hope that the people of Peterborough would deal fairly with the new power proposition. It meant cheaper power and cheaper light.

Mr. E. A. Peck, in responding to the toast, replied that he was in the same position as Ald. Gordon and Mr. T. F. Matthews, inasmuch as he was newly elected. Therefore, he felt it a little out of place to say what he would do when he joined that conglomeration called the Ontario Legislature. The legislature framed by the Provincial House comes home to us more strikingly perhaps, than does the work of the Dominion House, for it is from that source that we derive our educational benefits, municipal organization and many others. He also expressed himself as being strongly in favour of the new power scheme and felt that the city would be benefitted thereby.

Board of Trade.

The next toast on the list was to the Board of Trade. It was proposed by Sheriff Hall and responded to by Mr. V. Eastwood, President of the Board. In his opening remarks, Mr. Eastwood strongly emphasized the need for greater efforts in the procuring of industries for Peterborough, and the betterment of many of the public works. He hoped that every member of the Council would eventually become a member, and regularly attend the meetings which the Board propose to hold from time to time. He also suggested many improvements that might be made to better the city's interests generally.

Chairmen of Committees.

Ald. Morgan proposed a toast to the chairmen of the various committees embracing the Board of Works, with Ald Buller as chairman; Property committee, chairman Ald. Duncan; Legal committee, chairman Ald. Brown; Finance committee, chairman Ald. Anderson; Fire, Water and Light committee, chairman Ald. Johnston; and Manufacturing committee, Ald. Gillespie, chairman.

Ald. Morgan congratulated them one and all upon their election to office. He also hoped that they would consider the many weighty questions throughout the year in a fair minded manner. He instanced the overhead bridge in East City, a bridge in the south and the matter of changing the lights to the centre of the street. He referred to Ald. Johnston as being a hot member, he having officiated in a similar capacity on a former occasion. Therefore he was not a green one by any means.

Ald. Duncan, Gillespie, Brown and Anderson responded briefly. Ald. Buller said that he would endeavour to meet the demands of the East City residents for an overhead bridge and also some sewers if necessary.

Ald. Johnston said that as head of his department he would endeavour to assist in the welfare of the people. He was anxious to see the cedar swamp cleaned off George street and as he had been credited with being a hot member in the past, he would be a hot member in the future.

A toast to Mayor Bradburn was then proposed by Ald. Duncan. In a few brief remarks, he expressed the hope that the citizens would endeavour to assist the Council to carry on the business of the city in harmony, and endeavour in every way possible to boost the town.

The Mayor in replying, thanked those who had made such kindly personal references to him. He felt that the citizens had placed a great responsibility in him and he was prepared to meet it. He outlined his policy which he purposes to put before the people if satisfactory during the year, the principal ones of which are namely: Permanent paving, placing Board of Works under commission, appointment of permanent assessor, reduction of water rates, and garbage collection. He importuned Ald. Johnston as chairman of the Fire, Water and Light committee to take up the cudgels where his predecessors had left off, namely, the removal of the lights to the centre of the streets and better lighting.

City Officials.

Mr. T. F. Matthews here proposed a toast to the city officials incorporating City Clerk Clerk Armstrong, Mr. Adams, Treasurer, Mr. Green Tax Collector and Mr. T. A. S. Hay City Engineer. He commented upon the able manner in which the heads of these departments had carried on the work entrusted to them.

The toast was responded to by each of the gentlemen named, individually, and all with one accord, expressed their appreciation of the kind remarks which were made in reference to them.

Chief Thompson, on being called upon to speak, was pleased to say that it was his ambition as Chief Constable to serve the interests of the city as best he knew how, and whether his stay here was long or short he would always endeavour to deserve the confidence of the citizens of Peterborough.

Chief Howard made a few felicitous remarks in reference to the Mayor, incorporating the hope that the new Council would have a prosperous and successful year. "I can see a great boom in the near future for Peterborough," declared the Chief.

Mr. Green then proposed the toast to the press, after which the banquet was brought to a close by the singing of the national anthem.

Suffered With Nerve Trouble For Two Years.

IT WAS IMPOSSIBLE FOR HIM TO SLEEP.

Diseases of the nervous system are very common. All the organs of the body may be sound while the nervous system alone may be diseased, therefore it is necessary for anyone suffering from any nervous trouble to procure a remedy which will at once quieten the nerves and build up the system.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will do this for you, providing you give them a fair trial.

Mr. Chas. W. Wood, Montreal, Que., writes:—"For two years I had suffered with nerve trouble, and it was impossible for me to sleep. It did not matter what time I went to bed, in the morning I was even worse than the night before. I consulted a doctor, and he gave me a tonic to take a half hour before going to bed. It was all right for a time, but the old trouble returned with greater force than before. One of the boys, who works with me, gave me half a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I took them and I got such satisfaction that I got another box, and before I finished it I could enjoy sleep from 10 p.m. until 6 a.m., and now feel good."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

A Sunday Morning Visit to St. James' Methodist Church

(By Roy Gilray.)

While it would be foolish for these people to try and adopt all the "trimmings" of an adult church, yet there are one or two things which might prove helpful. A hymn-board over the organ, containing the numbers of the hymns would prevent a great deal of confusion just after the commencement of the opening hymn as the ushers pass around supplying books to those who are without them. A handle on the organ to be pumped by a stout boy would relieve the organist of a great amount of rather strenuous work, and enable her to accelerate the time of the hymns, which would add materially to the effectiveness of the congregational singing.

During the announcements the pastor intimated that special evangelistic services would be held in the church for two weeks beginning Jan. 28th. The sermon very appropriately assumed the form of a call to prayer. The text was taken from Acts, 2:1-4, which gives the account of the descent of the Holy Ghost upon the waiting disciples at Jerusalem.

A church's power is the Holy Spirit. This is her equipment, whereby she is enabled to prosecute her great work. To show that the equipment of a church does not consist in things material the speaker referred to a recent discussion that took place concerning the buildings and endowments of a university. One writer said that Professor Blank on a saw log with a student at the other end would constitute an ideal university; therefore, a university consists not so much in buildings and finances as in the minds of teacher and pupil.

The disciples, filled with the Holy Spirit, became the first organized church. Christ, while teaching his followers, assured them: "That if two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done. For where two or three are gathered together in My name, there am I in the midst of them." For these the church equipment did not consist in a building; nor a church polity; nor a choir; nor an ordained minister; but in the power and efficient working of the Holy Ghost.

The disciples were commanded to tarry at Jerusalem until they were endued with power from on high. They all continued with one accord, in one place in prayer and supplication, and after the great sermon by Peter, which resulted in the conversion of about three thousand souls, they all continued steadfastly in the Apostles' doctrine and fellowship and in breaking of bread, and in prayers: all other things were set aside. Prayer was the one and only thing that occupied their attention.

They knew that the word would fall on dull ears, that the people were in the grip of idolatry; they recognized their own feebleness, that they were a band of ignorant men: they realized they were subject to the malice of the Chief Priests ad the Rulers, that the strong arm of Rome might stamp them out at any time: but they were granted the gift of insight into spiritual things. They knew God was going to send them to the uttermost parts of the world, that he was the Saviour of the world, therefore, they tarried and prayed, and their hearts were prepared for the reception of the Holy Ghost.

In like manner, unless the people of God are filled with the Holy Ghost through waiting on Him in prayer, the great work of the Church will not be done. The great need is more power through the Holy Spirit. When that power comes no one will say he has nothing to do. If the work of the Church is not done the fault will rest on those who have failed to pray.

Prayer is the test of unity; it is the test of true discipleship. It produces harmony of working. No jealousy arises betwan men who pray because one may be more effective than the other. No quarrels take place because one man happens to pray before another. No, everyone has a definite work to do.

Prayer removes the idea of distance or strangeness. A man enters a church, where he is unknown; during prayer he lifts up his voice in prayer; immediately that feeling of strangeness vanishes; he becomes a brother, a friend united in fellowship.

Prayer does away with misunderstandings; it is a promoter of harmony.

Success in the work of a Church comes, not in trying to please everybody, which usually ends in disaster, but through leaving the plans with God. If they are not pleasing to Him they will come to nought. If they are in accordance with Him will they will be productive of great results.

The Holy Spirit came in answer to their united prayers. It came as a rushing wind, (compared to air in motion). The air we breathe is a life-giving element, without it we suffocate. Therefore it is a gift of divine life. To impress this thought more firmly the preacher cited the case of a drowning man rescued from the water, apparently lifeless, but by artificial respiration air is introduced into the lungs, circulation and heart stimulated, and finally the man is restored to life. The spirit comes through the breath as the bearer of life. In the same way the Spirit enters the Church and imparts to it life.

The Spirit is also likened to fire, which purifies, consuming the dross, the sin and the selfishness of our natures. The great London Plague of 1665, in which over 100,000 souls died in the short space of six months, was effectually stopped by the great fire that followed. Though 1300 homes and 90 churches were destroyed it proved to be the salvation of the city.

Fire is a producer of energy, of power. If we are to have soul-saving power it will come only through the burning of the Holy Spirit in our hearts. Even Jesus did not begin his ministry until He received the baptism of the Holy Ghost.

We, too, may be baptised with the Spirit, and have this power if we but seek it. We have simply to rely upon the promise contained in Luke 11:13: "How much more shall your Heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him?"

OBITUARY

EVA HANKINSON.

The death occurred last night at 10.35 o'clock, at St. Joseph's Hospital, of Miss Eva Hankinson, the eldest daughter of the late William and Mary Hankinson. The deceased has been ill for th epast two years suffering from pernicious anaemia. She had lived nearly all her life in Peterborough and was well known and highly respected. She is survived by two brothers, Messrs. George W. G. Hankinson, of Sudbury, and C. A. Hankinson, of Campbellford, and one sister, Winnie, of Peterborough.

The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock, from 434½ George street, to the Little Lake cemetery.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS EMERGE TRIUMPHANTLY FROM EVERY TEST.

Ernest St. Pierre Tells How They Rescued Him From the Tortures of Backache and Bright's Disease.

Le Petit Bois Franc, Temiscouta Co., Que., Jan. 15.—(Special)—Ernest St. Pierre, a well-known farmer of this place, is telling his neighbours of his almost miraculous cure from Bright's Disease, and he always winds up with:

"I advise all persons suffering from Backache or Bright's Disease to use Dodd's Kidney Pills." For like thousands of other sufferers in Canada, Mr. St. Pierre found his cure in the good old Canadian Kidney remedy.

And his indeed was a particularly bad case. His eyes were puffed and swollen, his appetite was fitful and he was always tired and nervous, while the pains in his back made any form of work something to be avoided. To-day he is strong and well. Six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills worked the transformation.

More and more in this neighbourhood is it becoming a motto: "If the disease is of the kidneys or from the kidneys, Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure it". They have been tried in many cases of backache, rheumatism, lumbago and Bright's disease, and in no case where they have been given, a fair trial have they failed to cure.

THE ROSARY

When Edward E. Rose's new play, "The Rosary," with John Meehan in the role of "Father Kelly" comes to the Grand on Saturday next for matinee and night, local theatre-goers will have an opportunity to see pictured before them the growing unrest and irreligion of our times. It is a faithful picture of the misery and unhappiness that surely comes upon a man who lacks faith in the supreme good and its triumphs in our world.

Can one evil mind poison a whole household? Is the human brain capable of producing disastrous effects upon a household by adverse suggestive thoughts?

Do we realize adequately how our mental attitudes influence our lives and the lives about us?

And the answer? Well—the play is the answer.

The Rosary has proven to be the sensation of the past year in Chicago and New York—one company played for almost four months in Chicago alone, and the engagement in New York, in fact, in all the large cities, was equally as successful.

Seats on sale Thursday morning, Jan. 18th.

ARMOUR ESTATE, SOUTH EAST CORNER HUNTER AND CONCESSION STS., SITE OF NEW EAST WARD SCHOOL

At a special meeting of the Board of Education, held in the Board Rooms last night, the report of the special building committee for the East and West Wards was presented, and read as follows.

To the Chairman and Board of Education.

Gentlemen,

—Your building committee beg leave to report and recommend as follows—1st, Providing a satisfactory agreement can be entered into between the Board of Education and Mr. Frederick Bartlett, that he be employed as architect for the two new buildings to be erected, one in the East and the other in the West Wards, and that the chairman and secretary be authorized to execute such agreement. 2nd, That the committee be authorized to take the necessary steps to acquire six acres in the East Ward, and being on the corner of Hunter and Concession Streets, and known as the Armour Estate Property, to be used for a site for the East Ward school, and also to acquire at the best possible price property at the corner of Weller Sreet and Monaghan Road, owned by the Toronto Savings and Loan Co. for a site for the West Ward school, or other such property in that vicinity to be approved by the Board.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Dr. M. A. MORRISON, Chairman.

THE RESOLUTION.

The following resolution, moved by Dr. Morrison and seconded by Mr. T. H. Adams, was carried:

That the Board proceed to expropriate for a public school site, a piece of land belonging to the Armour Estate, containing about six acres, and being that part on Block B, east of Concession Street, on Registered Plan No. 1A City of Peterborough, and situated at the north-east corner of Concession and Hunter Streets, and having frontage of 510 feet on Concession Street and 510 feet on Hunter Street, and that the Solicitor of the Board take the necessary steps to carry out the provisions of the resolution.

There were present at the meeting: Mr. J. Crane, chairman; Dr. Morrison, Dr. Burnham, Col. Miller, and Messrs. W. H. Hill, B. F. Ackerman, L. M. Hayes, and T. H. Adams.

On the motion of Mr. Hill, the minutes of last meeting were dispensed with, and the business was proceeded with.

Mr. Crane stated that the object of the meeting was principally to receive the new members, and to discuss the question of the situation of the two proposed public schools.

A letter was received from Mr. J. H. Burnham stating that the gold watch which he had promised as a prize for the public school scholarship was at Schneider's jewellery store.—Received.

DR. MORRISON'S REPORT

Dr. Morrison reported that the Committee had an agent get prices on the different properties in vicinity of the present East Ward school, and he had been able to secure property adjoining the present grounds, extnding them two or three acres, for $6,350.00, not including their own property. This would give 196 feet on Mark street and 342 feet on Robinson Street, and on the east side it would extend back about 346 feet. He thought that this would be a rather expensive site. Another site considered was owned by the Burnham Estate, between St. Luke's Rectory and Mr. Peck's residence, valued at $4,500.00. The land is situated between Rogers and Concession Streets, and contains about three acres.

ARMOUR ESTATE

The next proposition was the Armour Estate, for which $400.00 per acre was offered, but which was refused, for certain restraining circumstances known to the owners, making it necessary to hold the property for a while. This, Dr. Morrison explained, was the most central site for a new school for pupils north and south, while the pupils to the west would have about the same distance to go as those to the north and south. "We should have a large school ground," emphatically stated Dr. Morrison. He pointed out the advantage of getting large grounds by drawing the Board's attention to some of the city's present schools.

He further stated that they had endeavoured to get a site inside the city limits, but could not secure any central enough, and the committee thought they should not pay so much for a site when up-to-date equipment had to be provided for in the building. Summing up the circumstances, the committee recommended the Board to acquire the six acre site of the Armour Estate on the north-east corner of Hunter and Concession Streets.

SITE FOR WEST WARD SCHOOL

Regarding the site for the West Ward school, Dr. Morrison stated that the school territory was moving west and south, and in looking toward the future, the committee concluded that the western site should be situated between Weller street and the Hill. He said that at present they could purchase the site offered by the Toronto Savings and Loan Co., but they did not want to tie themselves down to any property until they see further.

MR. HILL'S VIEWS

Mr. W. H. Hill said he had pleasure in seconding the report, given by Dr. Morrison, and he thought it was the proper course to take. They wanted good buildings and good lots. "Some of our school grounds are a shame and a scandal on the city of Peterborough," said Mr. Hill. "Look at the Queen Alexandra, the boys crowd into the little playgrounds at the rear of the school, and the girls have to go out on the road. If children don't get out and get exercise, they are harder to manage when in school, and they don't get along as well as when they can get exercise.

The school grounds can't be too large. I think that it was a big mistake on the part of the Board to sell the lot at the south end near the King Edward. It has been suggested that a lot near the King Edward be purchased now. It is a mistake to build a big school, with the latest equipment, and not purchase good grounds. I think the Armour's site in the East Ward is good, and four-fifths of the people in East City are in favour of it. Lots in the West Ward are far more expensive, however, and there are not many good lots available, and if you purchase city lots it will cost thousands of dollars more.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON APPOINTMENTS

The following report of the Committee on Appointments was read by Mr. W. H. Hill:

Gentlemen,—Your Committee on Appointments beg leave to report as follows:

Owing to the retirement from the Public Library Board of Mr. D. Walker, your committee recommend that Mr. W. G. Morrow be appointed a member of the Board for the term of three years, from the 1st of Feb., 1912.

During his term as Mayor, Mr. Morrow was an ex-officio member of the Board.

Respectfully submitted.

W. H. HILL, Chairman.

IT WAS STONE IN THE BLADDER

GIN PILLS PASSED IT

"Five years ago, I was taken down with what the doctors called Inflammation of the Bladder—intense pains in the back and loins, and difficulty in urinating, and the attacks, which became more frequent, amounted to unbearable agony. I became so weak that I could not walk across the floor.

My wife read in the papers about GIN PILLS and sent for a box. From the very first, I felt that GIN PILLS were doing me good. The pain was relieved at once, and the attacks were less frequent.

In six weeks, the Stone in the Bladder came away. When I recall how I suffered and how new I am healthy and able to work, I cannot express myself strongly enough when I speak of what GIN PILLS have done for me". JOHN HERMAN, Hamilton, Ont.

ALLOWED TO GO ON SUSPENDED SENTENCE

Something of a surprise was sprung on the police authorities this morning, when Charles A. Carter, charged with stealing $25 from the Union Life Insurance Co., withdrew his plea of not guilty and entered a plea of guilty, through his counsel, Mr. F. D. Kerr. He was allowed to go on suspended sentence.

Mr. Kerr stated that he had gone into the matter with his client, and found hat he was guilty in the eyes of the law, having used money that should have been returned to the Company. He stated that he saw nothing to be gained by contesting on technical grounds, and they accordigly wished to withdraw the plea of not guilty and enter a plea of guilty.

Crown Attorney R. E. Wood then outlined the case to Magistrate Dumble, in order that the latter could ascertain the exact facts of the case. He stated that Carter had been, for some time, in the employ of the Company at Toronto, in their head office, where they had found him to be trustworthy, while under their supervision. As a result of his aparent trustworthiness, they had sent him here, to take charge of the local branch, at a salary of $11.00 per week, which was afterwards increased to $12.00 per week, on condition that the accused visit Lindsay in the interests of the Company, occasionally. Mr. Wood explained that the Company was one of those cheap, and yet dear insurance companies, but the salary should have enabled the accused to live, without using $25.00 of the Company's funds. Mr. Wood pointed out that when the Supervisor came, the accused failed to make the full returns, but now, the Company was not desirous of going to extremes in order to secure the lost money; but yet, they felt it their duty to make an example of him, as a warning to any other of their clerks, who should feel like disposed.

Mr. Kerr, counsel for the defence, stated that the accused was one of those unfortunate youths, who, after years of honesty, made, what could hardly be termed a mistake, through lack of judgment. He wrongly made use of the money at Christmas time, and when the Supervisor came, the acused was found in default, though he had no intention of stealing. Mr. Kerr poited out that Carter had previously ben regarded as honest, and this charge alone would be a stain on his character, and he asked that as this was his first offence, and it being a technical one, that the Magistrate give him an oportunity to make good in future, by allowing him to go on suspended sentence.

"Well, it's easy to smooth over matters, by words," said Magistrate Dumble, "but here are the facts before us. He had been in the business for years, and his good behaviour secured the confidence and trust of the Company. However dreadful an institution may be, all he had to do was to return the money that he secured for them. With full knowledge he broke faith, and indulged his passions, for a while at Christmas, by taking money that did not belong to him. His whole prospect in life depended in his honesty, and I have nothing to do but to deal with the matter according to the law. He is a young man, however, and it would be a dreadful thing to blight his life with a gaol term".

The Magistrate then allowed him to go on suspended sentence, warning him that if he ever got into trouble again, he would pay the penalty for this offence as well as the one that he would then commit.

ENJOYABLE CONCERT AT CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC HALL LAST EVENING

An exceptionally large gathering attended the annual concert given by the Conservatory Orchestra last evening in the Conservatory Music Hall. The audience was a thoroughly appreciative one and the concert was a decided success in every sense of the word.

Miss Jessie Alexander, the popular Toronto elocutionist, who figured prominently in the programme, fully justified her title. Her selections, though for the most part humorous, were mingled with drama and pathos, and her articulation was remarkably crisp. In an excerpt from Shakespeare's Henry VIII. (the court scene) she portrayed to a nicety the character of Katharine, the English queen. Her powers of elocution were prominent in the suppliant manner in which she handled the passage dealing with the pleading of the Queen to the inconstant Henry, commencing with the line:

"In what have I offended you."

And again in a dramatic passage which denoted the exhaustion of the Queen's patience, starting:

"My tears shall turn to sparks of fire."

In the humorous poem, "A Bridge Problem," in which the troubles of a novice are portrayed, Miss Alexander was equally entertaining. "Hyde Park Orators," and "Coronation Crowds," were also delivered, and each was received with loud and prolonged applause.

Mr. Barnaby Nelson, the well-known tenor, is possessed of a fine robust tenor voice, which he used to great advantage. His rendering of "There's a Land," by Francis Allitsen, was very spirited and highly finished, and for this he was loudly applauded. His concluding song, "The Rose in the Bud," was of an entirely different style, having in it music of remarkable sympathy. This, however, he executed in an equally brilliant manner.

The Conservatory Orchestra, which performed under the baton of Mr. R. Gliddon, were truly superb in their renderings of a selection from Gounod's "Faust," in which appeared the beautiful songs "When all was Young," and "All Hail Thou Dwelling, pure and holy" (played by the cornet and clarinet respectively) they discriminated creditably between the delicate setting of the sacred portions of the music and the bold blasts of the military, as instanced in the immortal "Soldiers' Chorus." The Prayer from Flotow, Stradella, was also splendid. The orchestra also rendered the march from Athalie, (Mendelssohn), and the Overture Nabucodonosar (Verdi), and all were exceedingly well received.

The Conservatory Orchestra has attained a very high standard of efficiency and its performance last evening, which displayed remarkable balance, denoted a careful and assiduous training.

Miss McKee proved an efficient accompanist.

WINDOVER REMANDED

Man Charged With Non-support Arraigned in Police Court This Morning

PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Alex. Windover was arraigned before Magistrate Dumble, in the Police Court this morning, charged with non-support of his wife and family. He pleaded not guilty, and the case was enlarged until Friday, in order that a little more evidence could be brought.

County Constable Cochrane was put in the box, and stated that Windover had been neglecting his wife, and five children, and he found that they had been left without any means of heating the house, and without provisions. He had visited the house about three weks ago, but had secured the greater part of his information from ladies who had gone to clean things up at the house, and investigate matters. As a result of the report made to him by hese ladies, he had the children removed to the Shelter, and the wife removed to the Hospital where she now lies in a critical condition. Mr. Cochrane stated that before the children had been taken away, he had sent $5.50 worth of provisions up to them, and a half cord of wood. He stated that he had known Windover for nearly thirty years, and he, for some time past, had been working in the woods, making $35.00 per month, and, in his opinion, there was no reason why he should not have supported his wife and family. Mr. Cochrane said that the children were costing the Children's Aid Society about $8.00 per week, besides clothing.

Mr. Wm. Henry of the Shelter, was then called and stated that he had received instructions from Mr. E. L. Goodwill to take the children to the Shelter and they were still there.

Magistrate Dumble wanted some evidence as to the condition in which the house was found, and as there were no witnesses present an adjournment until Friday was found necessary.

MITCHELL MOTOR CAR COMPANY'S PLANT A WONDERFUL INSTITUTION

Mr. Robt. Moher's Interesting Description of How the Mitchell Car is Manufactured.

IS AT RACINE NOW

The following is a letter from Robt. J. Moher, of the firm of Carey, Moher Bros., of this city, who is at present taking a three months' course with the Mitchell Motor Car Co., of Racine, Wis.:

Well, I am working in the finest shop I ever saw. If not the largest it is one of the largest and best equipped manufacturing plants of its kind in America. It employs from 2500 to 3000 men, all good mechanics, and these are kept very busy. They can't get the cars out fast enough; they are now making every effort to increase their daily output, so as to keep up with the orders sent in.

The cars they are making now are all sold, and every car is shipped as soon as it is finished. They are sending one half of their output to France now. The Mitchell is really a French car. There are here some of the best experts from France; and some of the head men have spent from three to five years in training in France. They are not making any engines with overhead valves; they are all enclosed—even the big six. They are also making all straight lines, and you can get torpedo body in any line.

That $1375 car is a peach, has 35 h.p. The $1575 has from 38 to 40 h.p. The big six has 62 h.p., and the baby six has 50 h.p. That $1375 car is 112 inch wheel base. There is no getting away from the Mitchell, and that baby six has got all the country round here going. There is an oil-gauge on the dash, also a little push pump. The pump is for starting in cold weather. This is an improvement which no other car has yet got hold of.

There are cut-outs on all cars, and all models are equipped with Solar lamps and Presto light tanks. Speedometer is $15 extra, but they equip all cars with Speedometer sprocket.

This $1250 runabout is a dandy. It is grey and trimmed with black. It is the prettiest thing I have yet seen. The big six and the baby six are painted the same as the runabout, or all black if you want it so.

Now, about the test. First the engines go into a room and are inspected. Then they are put in rows and run for 11 hours good and fast at that. If they are all right they are brought out and put on a frame. One by one they are put up on a frame, and are run connected to the wheels. This is called the grease test. Then five men go out on the track and each man has his own part of the engine to watch. They run the engine up and down this track for all it is worth till each man is perfectly satisfied with the test. Then it is taken into a large building called the brakes test department. Here it is kept a-going at 60 miles per hour, the brakes are put on at high speed, and gee! you should see the hind wheels slide! Now comes the final test with the body on. This test is made by the head expert. These cars are sometimes tested several times before leaving the factory.

They have about 400 inspectors here—everything even to a bolt is inspected. I tell you it is easy to get at the transmission or differential of a Mitchell car.

The poor testers, I feel sorry for them. They have to pull out on that track when it is 10 or 15 degrees below zero. They all wear hoods and fur mits.

Now, you can't boost the Mitchell car to much. It has them all beat at the price. By the way, it is as cold here as Canada ever was. I am about 12 minutes walk from the factory and have very good accommodation for $5.50 per week.

Racine has a population of about forty five thousand. It is situated on the shore of Lake Michigan, about 60 miles from Chicago. I can hear the fog horns all through the night.

Well, I think that I have said a good deal in this letter, and yet, no doubt, before my three months are up, I will have many more things to say about the famous Mitchell car.

I like my job, but, oh! you test-track! I have yet to put in my three weeks on it.

Now, give my best regards to all the folks

Your brother,
BOB.

Editor Of Truth Dead

LONDON, ENG., Jan. 16th.—Right Hon. eHnry Labouchere, editor of Truth, and a prominent independent in politics in England, for many years, died this morning at Florence, where he resided on account of failing health. He was aged 81 years. In early days he refused positions in various British cabinets, preferring to always wield the pen of a caustic critic. His paper Truth was notorious for exposures made in political, social and national life. One of his latest was a vigorous criticism of Canadian immigration methods, alleging that girls brought to Canada on the pretension of eas life an dlarge salary in fruit picking in Ontario but really to be farm slaveys.

WEDDING BELLS

SULLIVAN—YOUNG.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at 9.30 this morning in St. Martin's church, Ennismore, when Mr. P. G. Sullivan, of Ennismore, was united in the bond of holy matrimony to Miss Mary, daughter of Mr. John Young, also of Ennismore. The Rev. Father Fitzpatrick performed the ceremony.

The bridesmaid was Miss Lizzie Young, sister of the bride, and the best man, Mr. Edward O'Donoghue. Miss Ballard, the organist, played the wedding march.

At 5 o'clock this evening Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan left for Detroit and on their return will reside in Ennismore.

ANGLESEY—LeGRANDER.

The Sacred Heart church was the scene of a pretty wedding at 6 o'clock this morning, when Mr. William Anglesey and Miss Sophia LeGrander, both of Peterborough, were united in the bond of holy matrimony by the Rev. Father McCauley.

Miss Delphine LeGrander, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, while the best man was Mr. James J. Anglesey, brother of the bridegroom.

After their return from a short visit, Mr. and Mrs. Anglesey will reside on Perry street.

FOSTER'S PREDICTIONS

A weather prophet, who divides with Hicks, the honours of long-range prognostications, is Foster, of Washington, D.C. While the latter pays special attention to the sun, and sun spots, Hicks bases his predictions on the position of the planets, paying particular attention to our old friend, Luna. Foster says:

Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross continent Jan. 13 to 17, warm wave 12 to 16, cool wave 15 to 19. This storm wave is expected to cause rains south and snows north, temperatures averaging below normal with stormy rough weather. The tendency of general temperature will be upward and warmer weather is expected to follow. This will be one of the two most stormy periods of January.

Next disturbance will reach Pacific coast about Jan. 17, cross Pacific slope by close of 18, great central valleys 19 to 21, eastern sections 22. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about Jan. 17, great central valleys 19, eastern sections 21. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about Jan. 20, great central valleys 22, eastern sections 24.

Some but not much rain or snow may be expected on front part of this disturbance and then very little or no precipitation for a week. Temperature will be higher than for two weeks past, and cool wave following is not expected to develop severe cold.

Another disturbance will reach pacific coast about Jan. 23, cross Pacific slope by close of 24, great central valley 25 to 27, eastern sections 28. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about Jan 23, great central valleys 25, eastern sections 27. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about Jan. 26, great central valleys 28, eastern sections 30.

This will cause threatening and stormy warm winter weather but with very little precipitation. This winter thaw will not benefit the winter grain.

Near Feb. 18, an unusually large group of sunspots is expected to appear on the extreme western side of the sun and it will be due to come into view on the eastern limb about March 4. About that time, Feb. 18, severe storms may be expected on various parts of the earth. Sunspots are not plentiful at this time and therefore it is the more difficult to correctly forecast them. This group of spots will probably organize south of the sun's equator, or as we look at the sun, a little above its centre.

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Mr. Wm. Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

THE HEALTHIEST OF EXERCISES.

Walking is splendid winter exercise, and one should avail herself of every opportunity to get out of doors, even though the weather should be disagreeable; but proper clothing should be worn, no matter what the weather. It is folly to allow one's self to get very cold; the feet should be kept warm and dry, and warm undergarments worn; long sleeves and comfortable waists of sensible materials, with the neck covered; the hands should be kept warm, and the wrists protected, and if suitable top garments are worn, with thick-soled shoes, even rain, or snow, or blizzard will not be objectionable within reason.

There is nothing so fine as health; the healthy woman or girl will not need the aid of the beauty doctor, and without health of body and mind there is no beauty worth striving for. The foundation of all remedies for complexion ills is cleanliness, internal and external.

Cold feet and limbs are more often than not caused by indigestion, being due neither to the weakness of the heart or feebleness of circulation, but to the contracting of the small arteries, preventing the blood from entering the parts. Chronic cold feet call for attention, as it is a symptom of a diseased condition somewhere.

FEET RUINED BY FASHIONABLE SHOES.

From nearly every quarter comes the call for a "sure cure" for corns, bunions and other maladies that afflict the feet, and we all know there are few tortures more hard to bear than the suffering such things bring with them. For many years we have been forced to wear shoes that are utterly unlike in shape to the feet they are to incase. These caricatures were "the fashion," and every one who wore foot-gear had either to go barefooted or wear them. A pointed toe crowds the toes together into an unnatural position, while the high heel throws the entire weight of the body upon the front of the foot and toes, which were never intended to bear such a weight. The results of wearing shoes with narrow toes and high heels are flat foot, bunions, corns and interference with the circulation.

In selecting a shoe the following points as to its shape should be considered: The shoe must be fully as wide as the sole of the foot. The heels should be low and broad. The shoe must be so flexible that the foot may be easily bent while raising the foot on the toes in walking. The inner side of the shoe should be in a straight line; any shoe that slopes from the heel outward to the toe is bad. The toe of the shoe should be broad enough to permit all of the toes to lie side by side without crowding. No shoe should be so tight around the ankle as to hinder the circulation.

PETERBORO'S BEAR CATS DEFEATED THE LINDSAY MIDGETS ON THEIR OWN ICE

Won a Gallant Victory Away From Home, Beating the Scugog Seven 10 to 9 in a Wildly Exciting Game Last Night.

EVEN AT HALF TIME

The gallant little blue and white striped sweatered aggregation, the Peterborough junior O. H. A. team showed their real class last night by invading Lindsay and defeating the redoubtable Midgets on their own rink by 10 goals to 9, in one of the fastest and most exciting games of hockey ever played in this district. Incidentally the Petes earned a new name for themselves. Henceforth, and hereafter, they will be known to fame as the Bear Cats. They richly won their title last night by the fierce, relentless manner in which those lightweights tore into the Lindsay team from start to finish. Never did a Peterborough team away from home conduct themselves better than did Captain Hall's gritty aggregation last night and they left Lindsay with the respect of every fan in Scugogville. Outweighed all along the line, and playing on a strange rink, the majority for the first time in a contest away from home, they played like demons for every second of the sixty minutes of that nerve-racking game. And it was some game to win, a thrilling, wildly exciting exhibition between two speedy teams, who played with the abandon that is characteristic of junior O.H.A games. Not for an instant was there any delay. It was ding-dong, slam-bang, hammer-and-tongs from end to end with every man going at top-speed and expending every ounce of energy. Three times in the first half did Lindsay show in front and three times did the Bear Cats pull up even. They were tied at 1 to 1, 3 to 3 and 5 to 5, the latter being the figure at half time.

The Petes went out after the half determined to score the first goal and they were successful. From then on they held the lead. Twice they were two goals ahead and once had widened the gap to three counters. Men on th fence, however, gave Lindsay a chance, and they pulled up to within one goal of tieing the score. The Petes however, held them safe for the balance of the game and skated off deserving winners.

Every man on the Peterborough line-up had his share in the victory. There was not a weak spot anywhere from goal out to centre. The defence was steady and reliable and stayed on the ice, while that little forward line were like four hornets. They were always going, combining nicely and checking back all the way. They would come flashing down together, lose the rubber, wheel around and come tearing back to overtake the Lindsay line. On nearly every Lindsay rush those blue and white stripes were sandwiched in between the solid blue of th, Scugog line and these consistent methods coupled with the great checking of the defence had much to do with the victory.

Dwyer showed his old townspeople a thing or two about goal minding, his work being good all through. He handled some shots from close in in fine fashion. Milloy and Kenneally checked in grand style and their rushes always carried the rubber out of the danger zone. It would be unfair to specialize in mentioning the forward line. All four played brilliant, gingery rockey from start to finish. Hall was always in his place in centre and a glance over the summary will reveal the accuracy of his shooting. Weir was closely looked after, but the little rover was too slippery to be tied up and was always going. Clancy's rushes along the boards were brilliant and his speed especially in back-checking remarkable. Cook at right wing only weighs 118 pounds, but every ounce of it is gameness and the way the little fellow kept working, had the fans all pulling for him. At one stage in the second half he was the only Peterborough forward on the ice, but he kept right on going.

For Lindsay, Denison at rover, and Scott and Mercer were the best. Denison was very dangerous when he got going, although the back checking of the Petes had him pretty well tied up. Scot and Mercer both rushed nicely. McConnell was the best of the defence, while Henley in goal was good.

The Teams.

They were at it like demons just as soon as Harvey Sproule gave the word. From the drop of the puck, the pace was lightning fast, and the excitement intense. Peterborough were first to get away cleanly. Clancy came down with a beautiful rush and shot dead on. McConnell relieved with a nice rush, which ended when it reached the Peterborough defence, but Denison, the Lindsay idol, secured nearly centre, and culminated a nice dodging rush along the boards by tipping the rubber past Dwyer, and Lindsay were in front, 1 to 0, while the Scugog rooters threatened to raise the roof.

Peterborough came right back, and Cook almost scored on a nice rush. A moment later he was benched for tripping, and Peterborough was shy a man. When Clancy, however, slipped down the boards and beat Henley with a low, swift shot from the side, those 150 Peterborough supporters gave a wonderful display of lung-power. Peterborough 1, Lindsay 1.

With the score tied, the pace grew hotter and the two teams battled at top speed. Denison came along with one of his dazzling rushes, but Dwyer made a phenomenal stop, saving a sure goal. Lindsay were not to be denied, and in four minutes an accurate scoop shot from the boards, by Mercer, put them ahead 2 to 1.

It was rush, and counter-rush with no let up in the play. Clancy secured at his own goal and carried the puck the length of the rink for the prettiest individual rush of the night. He was tearing in on Henley when McMahon tripped him, saving a goal but earning a trip to the penalty box. Kenneally came through with a pretty rush, but there was nothing doing in the scoring line. Lindsay increased their lead at this stage, when Mercer broke away, in company with Denison, the two combining for a pretty goal by the latter. The Bear Cats from Peterborough were not stopped for a moment by the two goal lead against them, and went at Lindsay like demons to even up. It just took them ninety seconds to accomplish the feat. Clancy tore in and scored on a sizzling shot in one minute, and then Cook fought his way down the wing and centred beautifully to Hall, who batted the tying goal past Henley. Even up at 3 to 3 with exactly fifteen minutes played.

Once more Lindsay spurted and tok the lead, Scott came up the centre with a speedy dash, and although Peterborough's cross-rink defence seemed to have him sandwiched, he squeezed through, taking the rubber with him, and beat Dwyer from the mouth of the net, and Lindsay were in front again. They made their lead two exactly thirty seconds after, when Mercer and Denison combined neatly, the former scoring.

It was up to the Bear Cats and they came back by unlinking some more speed. Weir, Cook and Hall flashed down together and on a neat shot from well in, Hall found an opening and Lindsay's lead was cut in two. It almost vanished altogether a moment later, when Hall and Clancy, on a beautiful combined effort, worked through the defence, only to have Clancy's shot miss by inches. The play was fast and furious. Clancy and his wing-mate, Mercer, were benched for mixing it up, and Clancy was not back on the ice long, before he was sent away again. Both goals were threatened in turn, and it was one grand little exhibition with the fans wild with excitement. Denison was benched for slashing, and with the Lindsay Captain on the side-line Kenneally made a rink-length rush, beating the Lindsay defence. He was steaming in on Henley all alone but the Lindsay goaler sallied out and met him, stopping the shot, and averting what looked like a certain goal. A few seconds later, however, the Bear Cats tied it up when Clancy came down the side and sent a sizzler at Henley, who blocked it neatly. Hall, however, dashed in like a flash and hammered the rebound past Henley before he could clear. Once more even, and only a few minutes until half-time. Mercer dumped Clancy and was penalised and just before the wing man got back on the ice McMahon was benched for a heavy body-check. Half-time.

"Get the first goal in this half and the game is yours" was the encouragement given the Peterborough team, in their dressing-room, at half-time, and the Bear Cats opened out the second half at a furious clip. From the face-off they bussed around the Lindsay nets, and Henley had a busy time stopping four or five hard shots. Clancy was penalized for tripping. In four minutes the Petes took the lead, never to be headed. Kenneally made a nice rush and although he was blocked the rubber sifted out to Cook, who beat Henley with a nice shot and the Bear Cats were in front. For seven minutes the teams battled along with Peterborough having the better of the argument. Those little forwards were combining nicely and checking back like fiends, and the defence was steadily and accurately handling the Lindsay attacks. Hall nearly scored after a pretty combined rush and then Weir pushed another counter past Henley and the Petes were two to the good. Weir was chased for loafing, and while he was off Lindsay closed up the gap when Denison scored on a combined attack. Slam bang came the Bear Cats back with another score, Hall fooling Henley, after taking a nicely-placed pass from Clancy. Score 8 to 6. The punch was not all gone out of the Lindsay attack, however, as Denison showed by scoring a moment later. Dwyer fell in making a stop and before he could regain his feet Denison had slammed the rubber into the net. 8 to 7. The excitement was at fever heat at this stage, but the Bear Cats kept their heads in the midst of the noise and renewed heir fierce attack. In a minute Hall had slammed another through in a scrimmage and then Clancy, Hall and Weir came down together and the little rover finished off a nice rush by tipping the rubber into the nets. It was 10 to 7, with nine and one-half minutes to go, but no let up in the play. Scott was off for tripping Milloy. The Peterborough point player fell into the boards and cut his knee, but went right on playing. Just at this stage was where the game closed up and the excitement was fiercest. After Scott had served his sentence, Clancy was benched for tripping, and a moment later Weir followed him for the same offence, leaving the Bear Cats five to seven. Scott was chased again, leaving the conditions a little more even, but then Sproule gave Hall two minutes for loafing offside. Some ticklish situation. With only four men to six the Petes fought desperately. Little Cook was the only Bear Cat forward left on the ice, but he and the defence battled valiantly and it wasn't until Kenneally made a careless pass across his nets that Lindsay was able to score. The pass went to Denison, who was camped in front of the nets and he beat Dwyer, leaving the score 10 to 8. Clancy got back in the game and the battle went on with both sides working overtime. The sides were even again when, with two minutes to play, Mercer scored for Lindsay on a swift shot from the side, the rubber tearing a hole in the nets.

Were those last two minutes exciting, with Peterborough one goal to the good and Lindsay working like demons? The fans had yelled themselves hoarse, but they had something left and showed it in the dying stages. "Hold them, hold them!" came from the Peterborough rooters, and hold them the Bear Cats did. With their full team on the blue and white striped aggregation were back on the offensive again, and time was called with the puck near Lindsay's nets.

She Had a Bad Cold, So He Recommended
Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.
Mrs. James Warren, Edmonton, Alta., writes:—"Just a few words in favor of your Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A short time ago I contracted a bad cold, and tried several remedies, but had no good results. I asked my druggist to give me some good cough medicine he could recommend, so he told me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and I can safely say I have never tried anything like it. The first dose gave me relief, and I was completely cured of my cough before I had finished one bottle. It is the best cough remedy I have ever tried, and I can recommend it to everyone."
Obstinate coughs and colds yield to the grateful, soothing action of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.
It is a remedy without an equal for coughs, colds, bronchitis, and all affection of the throat or lungs.
Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

BIG CAPTURE OF WHALES.

The people of Balallan, a village on Loch Erisort, Isle of Lewis, in the Outer Hebrides, have had an exciting and profitable experience. Fishermen sighted a school of fifty-four whales and drove them up the loch until the whales reached the rapids. Then the entire male population of Balallan formed a bridge of boats across the loch to prevent the whales from escaping, and drove the big fellows into shallow water, where they were killed.

A POWERFUL AND EFFECTIVE CURE
For Catarrh, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, Asthma.
Soothing Balsams Are Carried to the Sore, Congested Membranes — Cure Quickly and Completely.
Diseases of the breathing organs are, as you know, excited by germs so minute that only the microscope can reveal them; they are lodged in the tissues, develop there, and cause all the trouble. That is how consumption starts.
If the cause of the disease can be carried by air, why not the remedy? This conclusion lies at the root of the Catarrhozone treatment. The instrument through which you breathe fragrant, healing Catarrhozone splits up into minute particles this invaluable healing and curative agent, thereby enabling the air to carry it to the remotest ramifications of the breathing organs, and diffuses itself over their entire surfaces.
CATARRHOZONE ALWAYS CURES.
It would be absolutely impossible to breathe through a Catarrhozone inhaler without carrying this liquid to the remotest parts of the breathing apparatus. Upon healthy tissue it has no action, but upon diseased tissue and upon the micro-organisms which infect diseased tissues its action is so wonderfully curative that the disease is completely abolished. Then the tissue heals.
EARLY TREATMENT IS WISE.
Catarrhozone is an ideal remedy for diseases of the throat, lungs, and nasal passages. If you have catarrh, or bronchitis, or asthma, all are equally curable by Catarrhozone. These diseases are all modifications of an inflammatory condition of the lining membranes of the throat and nasal passages. Under these conditions we call it catarrh. When it extends to the bronchial tubes, we call it bronchitis. The condition is the same, the causes which produce the diseases are identical, and the remedy, Catarrhozone, acts equally promptly and eminently upon the different forms of this disease. Your case is curable. Get Catarrhozone to-day; two months' treatment (guaranteed) price $1; small size 50c. Sold by all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

The coming of "The Rosary" to the Grand Opera House on Saturday, night, will be of especial interest to the people of Peterborough, as Mr. Dick Simons of Peterborough, has an important part in the cast, as has his talented wife, Miss Mae Tipton.

CARE OF THE SKIN IN COLD WEATHER.

The raw, cold winds are very damaging to the face and hands, exposed to the weather. The housewife has many occasions to wet her hands, and the children suffer a great deal with chapped lips, faces and hands; especially about the wrists and back of the hands, where the surface is carelessly dried.

To keep the face, hands and wrists from getting rough and chapped, cleanse well with a good vegetable-oil soap and quite warm water, rinse with cold water to remove compounds; have a basin, and put in it a handful of oatmeal; pour over the meal one quart of boiling water, stirring well; let stand until quite milky, squeeze all the milk out of the meal, then strain, wash the skin with the liquid and let dry on. This is harmless, inexpensive and effectual.

Here is something so harmless that one need have no fear of using it, yet is said to be a most excellent bleach. Beat the white of an egg to a stiff froth, add the juice of a lemon, and place in a pan of water on the stove so that the hot water around the pomade will not cook or scorch the egg; stir into a smooth paste. As soon as you have stirred the mixture to a thick cream, take it from the heat and use. After washing the face and neck, take a little of the pomade and cover the face and neck the same as in using cold cream. Rub well into the skin. As soon as the egg begins to dry, rub the face with a soft towel, which takes off the paste and leaves the complexion soft, beautiful and white.

INTERESTING LETTER DESCRIPTIVE OF THE CONDITIONS IN CHINA

The following letter has been received by a relative in the city from Mr. H. D. Robertson, one of the Canadian missionaries in China:

Since the 7th of September we have been living inside the city walls while the Governor's troops have been clearing the country of people who questioned his right to rule this province. I supose the Toronto papers have kept you well informed as to the whole movement, and there is little need of my going into detail. But there are one or two phases of the present conditions which may, perhaps, appeal to you as interesting. From the very beginning the military organization of the authorities has been a source of wonder and admiration on the part of the foreigners here. The officers made good use of the telephone system installed during the present year and also seemed to understand perfectly the value of mounted men. What is generally regarded as the real battle of the present trouble took place at Shinchin, a large city just 40 miles from Chengtu. And as the soldiers left the city to attack this stronghold of the rebels, a gang of men went along puting up small poles on which telephone wires were strung, and thus the Governor was in constant communication with his General of the troops. When the telegraph poles were cut down for a distance of almost 100 miles along the main road, to Chungking, a gang of men were put to work almost immediately, and in about three weeks' time their poles were all up and telegraphic communication again established. This line has since been cut, and we had no communication with the outside world for almost two weeks, until yesterday, when a message was brought by couriers from a place 100 miles away. The Governor's troops have used all kinds of guns, from the ordinary rifle to the shell-firing cannon, and with good effect. They have a rapid-firing small gun of German manufacture, which seems to be a really terrible weapon. We understand that the troops in the first instance did not number over 6,000, all told, and yet the Governor has kept order in this great city, sent troops out in every direction, and cleared the country for at least 50 miles from the city. We, here, think this was pretty good work.

Of course, the other side did not have the equipment, nor the training of the troops but their numbers were overwhelming. At one time the main roads leading from each of the four gates of the city were held by armies numbering 20 or 30 thousand men in each case. In addition to their ancient weapons and antiquated firearm they had a kind of cannon which they loaded with all sorts of stuff, in lieu of proper ammunition—pieces of wire, broken crockery, bits of iron, stones and brick, are some of the materials said to have been used for this purpose. But of more advantage than weapons was the sympathetic help given by the populace in general. There is no doubt but that the hatred of the officials and dissatisfaction with their rule is almost universal, and the people helped in every way possible. Despite all these things the foreign-drilled troops succeeded in clearing the country and restoring at least a semblance of order. But now we enter on the second stage of the trouble when the bands which were opposing the troops degenerated into irresponsible robber bands, which went from place to place forcing loans from rich men, and systemetically levying toll on whole cities. A band of a thousand, or more men would occupy a place, and, after a systematic raid, would decamp, unless overtaken by the soldiers, so that they had just succeeded in clearing these bands out of the radius of fifty miles, and we were beginning to plan to return to our homes when news came that there was serious trouble in several provinces down river. And now that we have had no news for so long we are in a very uncertain state of mind. Last night a telegram came to the Consul from Chungking, saying that the foreigners there were being taken to Shanghai by the gunboats, and we do not know what this news means, either. But the natural conclusion is that the trouble in other places has become so serious that this step is deemed necessary. Of course, we cannot get away from this city now, no matter what happens. It would take such a number of troops to protect us that the Governor would never consent to our going, and I have a suspicion that he rather desires our presence in this city as a surety against general rioting. It surely is a wonderful thing that there has been absolutely no feeling of ill-will shown towards missionaries except in one remote place among the hill people. In a city 80 miles from Chengtu a man and his wife, and a single lady were alone and unprotected when the official was killed and the rebels occupied the place, and set up their own government. Then the robber bands came and occupied the city for over a week. Then the soldiers attacked and occupied the city and the old officials were restored again. During all this time these people were left undisturbed and constantly distributed medicines and did what they could for the wounded. In another city an English Church clergyman and his family were alone. When the robber bands came to occupy the city at dark, one evening, they entered a gate only a few steps from his door. They at once ran amuck through the city yelling and making a terrible display of their rapacity. When they returned and saw that the missionary's home and church were not lighted up there were calls of kill, kill! but the leaders soon stopped that. The next day, when certain of these chaps came to carry away some stones for making a barricade, the missionary rated them so severely for stealing that they went off and left him in peace. When the soldiers from Chengtu battered down the city gate, with their big guns, his house and church were riddled, but no one was hurt. He and his family are now here in Chengtu. In the city foreigners have been goin gabout almost as usual and no bad feeling has ever been noticed. As far as we can see there has been no reason for keeping everyone here on this street, since the first four or five days, but the Governor continues to refuse requests to be allowed to return home. Of course missionary work is at a standstill. We are carrying on our school behind the church and have about 50 students. The doctors are doing dispensary work, but that is all. Up till last Sunday we had preaching services in the church as usual, but owing to reports being spread on the street of all sorts of things being done by the foreigners, we have been requested to discontinue all preaching. In all the other stations except Chungking, occupied by our Missions, the missionaries have been in Chungsing for British Consul at Chungking to leave, and they haveen in Chungking for some time. The Chinese Christians are placed in a very awkward position, as it has been very hard for them to maintain a neutral stititude, and just now the whole country seems to be unsettled. There is a great fear that China is about to disappear as a nation. And it would seem to me that it is a very possible thing that the Powers will decide to help the present dynasty, put down rebellions, or they may follow the lead of Japan and Russia and desire the breaking up of the kingdom, everyone getting a share. It is quite clear to my mind that there is no force at present in China strong enough to hold the provinces together and govern the nation once the powers-that-be in Pekin are removed. The revolutionists have acted several years too soon. If they had waited until the idea of constitutional government was more familiar to the people at large, and until the Provincial Assemblies and the National Assembly had met several times and began to feel their powers of organization and development, then, I think, they would have succeeded, and foreign powers would have recognized the people's government. But at praent, I do not see how the foreign nations can look to anyone but the people in power at Pekin. And I am firmly of the opinion that the passing of China as a nation at this time would be a calamity in the history of the world beyond our present appreciation. I cannot but hope tha ta way will be found out of the present trouble and China will come out before the world with tattered garments, perhaps, but with a determination to replace these with new ones of higher ideals in public life, a more real appreciation of the value of foreign intercourse and a real movement towards the acceptance of the Christian doctrines as the truth as revealed by God and man.

As for ourselves we have been able to maintain good spirits from the very first. The children have both been particularly well and they are now a great source of happiness to us both. I would have sent you a cablegram on several occasions only I thought I could not add anything to your information and these messages cost so much it did not seem necessary. At one time it looked as if we might be home for Christmas, but at present we seem to be tied up here. We can only hope the newspapers do not scare you too badly and that the Christmas time may bring nothing to mar your joy and pleasure. Love to all at the Christmas dinner, from your relations in China.

Very sincerely,
H. D. ROBERTSON.

A COMPLEXION BEAUTIFIER.

For a sallow complexion nothing is better than to eat freely of common garden carrots. One way to prepare these is to boil the roots to a pulp in a little water, mash and rub through a colander or sieve with the water in which they were boiled; season to suit with salt and pepper and a little butter; dilute with hot water until drinkable, and take as much as you please of this every morning. As the vegetable is a food and perfectly harmless, use as much as you wish, continuing for some time, unless it disagrees with your digestion.

Report Of Work Done In Laboratory During 1911 By The City Bacteriologist

City Water Tested Regularly From Two to Three Times a Week During the Year, and at Present Shows No Signs of Infection of a Dangerous Nature.

The following is a report of the Medical Health Officer, Dr. McPherson, on the condition of the water during 1911:

To the Chairman and Members of the Water Commissioners, Peterborough, Ont.—

Gentlemen,—I beg to make a short report on the work done in the laboratory during the year 1911.

About mid-summer, I furnished you a report, dealing with the work of the previous nine months, so that it will not be necessary to go into the same in detail. During this year, the city water has been tested regularly from two to three times a week, and a record kept. Each month a report has been furnished you showing the condition of the water during the previous month. These reports show the chlorine to average between three and four parts in a million, with very little variation in the different seasons.

The presence of organisms producing gas and a change of colours was not in evidence from Oct. 1910 until May 28, 1911. During June the signs became more marked, but the amount of gas produced in the first twenty-four hours was not sufficient to warrant any suspicion of the colour bacillus. From the beginning of July until the 10th of October, the water was not free from suspicion, but at no time did the water show signs of a marked infection. Typhoid organisms were apparently absent, as shown by the absence of any cases of typhoid among those who were using the city water supply. Since Oct. 10th, the water has been free from dangerous organisms.

The presence of these gas producing germs cannot be laid down to any one cause. There are many conditions in and around the waters above the pumping station that might be responsible. These, I dealt with in my previous report, and I will not mention them again, but I hope that you will keep urging the provincial authorities to take action during the winter to have the conditions changed on the rivers and in and around Stoney Lake.

Before closing, I want to refer to other work done in the laboratory. As you know, it was established for the purpose of examining the city water supply. But it has always been found very useful in connection with the health work of the city. Prior to the establishment, all specimens of water, milk, suspects of diphtheria from the city, were sent to Toronto for examination. Now, they are done in the laboratory. During the year, samples from about 20 wells and three sets of samples of river water taken below the city, as well as weekly samples of milk and a number of diphtheria specimens were examined. This is a matter of saving, as well as of convenience to the city. For example, in cases of diphtheria, we can get a report the same day, or if a culture is made, the following day. Thus we could have a report on a swab before the other would leave the city, and in case of a culture before the specimen would reach Toronto. With the milk and water, we save time and also the expense connected with the packing and express to and from Toronto.

I just mention this to let you know that the laboratory is serving a good and useful purpose and justifies its establishment.

Respectfully yours,
W. McPHERSON,
City Bacteriologist.

MONTREAL, JAN. 17.—Dr. Sperber had a narrow escape from suffocation, carrying out his bed-ridden mother and other helpers were also badly burned, when a fire this morning destroyed the premises owned by the Pidgeon Realty Co. The loss will be fifty thousand dollars. The fire was caused by matches, thrown away by a man lighting his pipe.

A LIBERAL OFFER

We Guarantee to Relieve Dyspepsia. If We Fail the Medicine Costs Nothing.

To unquestionably prove to the people that indigestion and dyspepsia can be permanently relieved and that Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets will bring about this result, we will furnish the medicine absolutely free if it fails to give satisfaction to any one using it.

The remarkable success of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets is due to the high degree of scientific skill used in devising their formula as well as to the care exercised in their manufacture, whereby the well known properties of Bismuth-Subnitrate and Pepsin have been combined with Carminatives and other agents.

Bismuth-Subnitrate and Pepsin are constantly employed and recognized by the entire medical profession as invaluable in the treatment of indigestion and dyspepsia.

The Pepsin used in Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets is carefully prepared so as to develop its greatest efficiency. Pepsin supplies to the digestive apparatus one of the most important elements of the digestive fluid. Without it the digestion and assimilation of food are impossible.

The Carminatives possess properties which aid in relieving the disturbances and pain caused by undigested food. This combination of these ingredients makes a remedy invaluable for the complete relief of indigestion and dyspepsia.

We are so certain of this that we urge you to try Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets on our own personal guarantee. Three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies only at our store,—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

PRINCESS PATRICIA STARTS ON HER LONG VOYAGE

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, JAN. 16.—Starting on her long 15,000 mile trip round Cape Horn, to Victoria, the Canadian Pacific Railway's new steamship, "The Princess Patricia," formerly the Queen Alexandria, has left the yards at Greenock, Scotland. C. P. R. officials expect that the boat will arrive at Victoria about the end of March. She is to call at St. Vincent, Cape Verde Islands, Montevideo, Punta, Arenas, Sorenal, Callao, and San Francisco, to take on coal. Eighty days will be required for the long run. The Princess Patricia will be one of the fastest vessels on the Pacific Coast. When operating on the slide the vessel, which is a turbine, gained much fame for her speed. She has maintained a speed of over twenty-two knots for a long course and her speed will make her a valuable addition to the Canadian Pacific Railway's Pacific Coast fleet. According to announcement made at Vancouver some time ago, the "Patricia" will be operated on the Vancouver-Nanaimo run, and she is expected to cut down the time for the trip from three to two hours.

East City People Want Street Car Accommodation

The following petition, to be presented to the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, is being circulated and largely signed:

"We, the undersigned residents and ratepayers of No. 6 Ward, respectfully wish to draw your attention to the full necessity of street railway accommodation in our part of the city. In our Ward there is a population of considerably over 2000 people, the great majority of which would require to use cars on almost every occasion they come to the city. It is almost prohibitive living in the north end of the Ward for a man to obtain a situation at the Canadian General. The distance is too great to be covered on foot.

We wish you would place before your directors the matter in such shape that they would go into it thoroughly and we hope to finally arrange for extending the line so that it would include our Ward.

It is one of the important matters on our side of the river and we would appreciate very much its being taken up with the view of assisting us in getting the service.

FISKE O'HARA MAKES A PLEA FOR IRISH MUSIC

The following article by Fiske O'Hara, the Irish singer, who appeared here last week, will be read with interest:

One of the strangest things to a musician or singer is the neglect of the national music of Ireland. When one realizes the glorious heritage of song that the grand old race of bards left behind them, it is hard to understand why it is thrown aside without any definite effort being made to revive it or cultivate the national school of music founded in times more ancient than man can determine.

Centuries before the present musical scale was invented, the Irish race was composing music with a complete system of notation. Long ere Christianity was introduced into Ireland, there was a set of musical scales and a method of writing music. When the Christian missionaries arrived in Ireland they brought the Ambrosian scales or modes, and the bards, seeing the superiority of the system, at once adopted it. Many of the melodies that have come down to us from ancient times bear all the marks of having been composed in these early ages and still bear all the ancient characteristics in spite of the fact that they had been changed to suit modern ideas. How many of our young students of Irish history know that the harp was introduced into Italy from Ireland? We have the word of Galileo, the father of the astronomer, for that fact. And how many know that Gryffyth Ap Conan, Prince of North Wales, brought over from Ireland a band of fifty harpers to note down the national music of Wales? This we are told in the ancient Welsh Chronicles. With the greatest wealth of folk-songs of any people on the face of the earth why should we not make an effort to bring them before the world in proper shape? Better still, why not educate our own young people, and the old ones too, for that matter, with the best of our natural airs? We should have an Irish Choral Society in every town where there are ten Irish families, and in every large city there should be dozens of branches. The Irish have just as beautiful voices as the Welsh, yet the latter have a hundred singing clubs where we have one. This should not be the case. Let all of our young people who have good voices and an ear for music club together and start the movement. It will not be long until the world will ring with the beauty of the melodies that long ago stirred the echoes of the hills and valleys of old Innisfail and the world will awaken to the fact that there is a mine of music in the old land of which it never dreamed.

OLDEST FRAME HOUSE IN U. S. BEING RAZED BY WORKMEN

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y., JAN. 16.—The oldest frame house in the United States is being razed by workmen to-day by order of the authorities. It was built in 1648 by Thomas Sayre, an English gentleman, who came to this country in Cromwell's time and was one of the original settlers near Southampton in 1610. The Sayre house is the centre of the village and has long been a point of historic interest. With proper caretaking the old house would have stood for a century yet, but it was allowed to decay and crumble. All the material in the old building, with the exception of the glass, was home-made. The timber, boards, shingles, laths and bricks were turned out within a block or two of the house and even the nails were manufactured by the old village blacksmith. Huge fire-places warmed it.

During the revolutionary war the house was used by British officers. The property is owned by a direct descendant of Sayre.

Chatham Farmer Drowns Himself In A Well

Examiner Special:

CHATHAM, ONT., JAN. 17.—Benjamin Weaver, aged fifty and unmarried, well to do, was found frozen in the water at the bottom of a well on his farm, 8th concession of Chatham Township, last night. Mark Moyer, a neighbour, was passing the place when attracted by the neighing of Weaver's horses, and he found a note on the door, stating that Weaver had committed suicide, also a text of Scripture adressed to Frank Weaver, brother of the deceased, and with the request that the Methodist minister preach his sermon. Weaver had deliberately put on a heavy overcoat, cap and mitts, and descended into the well on a ladder. The water came over his head and after he drowned he was frozen in. The body had to be sawn and chopped out of solid ice. There was no reason given for the rash deed.

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S

"I was a great sufferer from eczema and milk crusts for years," writes Mr. John W. Nase, Limestone, N.B. "Five years ago this today Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is soft as a child's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

DANGEROUS LEVEL CROSSINGS

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, ONT., JAN. 17.—That the Dominion Railway Commission intends to do all possible to wipe out the deadly level crossings forthwith, is indicated by the fact that the railway officials of all lines in Ontario have been asked to show why gates or watchmen are not installed at one hundred and sixty-five crossings, held to be dangerous.

MATCHED TO FIGHT

CHICAGO, JAN. 17.—The reputation of Toronto, (Ontario) as a prize-fighting centre, was further enhanced to-day when "Spike" Kelly and "Jack" Palmer were matched to fight ten rounds at 145 pounds on Feb. 5.

THE GOOD ROADS CRUSADE.

The Executive of the Ontario Good Roads Association is completing arrangements for a Provincial deputation to attend at Ottawa on Thursday, the 8th day of February, and wait upon Premier Borden and the members of his Cabinet to present their views in reference to Federal aid for good roads and how it can best be distributed and applied throughout Canada, and Ontario in particular. An effort was made to bring this deputation together in December, but owing to the early adjournment of the house and other matters, a satisfactory date could not be secured. In response to the notices sent out in November, more than one-half of the county councils of the Province expressed their approval of the idea by appointing delegates. A similar notice will go before the city, town and county councils this month, and it is hoped that all will arrange to be represented. A meeting for the organization of the deputation will be held in the council chamber of the city hall, Ottawa, on the morning of the day appointed, commencing at 9 o'clock.

The annual convention of the Ontario Good Roads Association will be held at Toronto on the 26th, 27th, and 28th days of February. In view of the added interest created by the question of Federal aid, it is expected that the meeting will be the largest in the history of the Association.

GOOD ROADS.

In another place on this page is published a bulletin issued by the Good Roads Association of Ontario. Paragraph III begins with the statement, that the proposal of a system of provincial highways "is a new idea, received with favour by the provincial authorities since the offer of Federal aid was announced." It is no "new idea." Time after time within the past two years, the Examiner, has urged as a duty upon the "Provincial authorities," the assumption of a much larger and more practical responsibility, in the matter of Provincial highways. It was pointed out that the Provincial revenue belonged to the whole people, and that its expenditure in the construction of a system of main county highways, with provision for the coincident construction of co-lateral highways or side highways, leading from the interior to the main line of highway, would be of indescribable popular advantage. The large expenditure that would be involved would be abundantly justified by the results. The Province of Quebec, looked upon by some superior Ontarians, as backward, if not retrograde, and unenterprising, proposes to set apart the splendid sum of ten million dollars to provide a system of Provincial highways. Can Ontario afford to have the way of enterprise and public spirit shown her by Quebec? Can Ontario afford to be left behind by her sister province? Ontario should strike out boldly and take the lead in a matter that shall meet the demands of an advanced civilization. While the Hydro-Electric power distribution scheme represents a great potential benefit and advantage to cities and towns, the benefits it confers, and the advantages it gives, are dwarfed into insignificance by those that would come to the province at large from a general extension of good roads,—that is, good roads—to all parts of the country. Hydro-Electric power may help a farmer here and there to chop his grain, cut his silage, or pump his water, but the farmer's greatest need, the greatest possible boon, is good roads. Every farmer, in the back of his mind, has the belief and conviction that good roads, that is, really good roads, distributed where he is required to travel, would be a greater benefit, mean a greater saving compared with present conditions—than any other single advantage, or half a dozen, advantages, that can be brought within his reach. Not only the farmer, but in these days of automobiles, every citizen is interested in good roads. There is, therefore, not only justification for the Province taking an extensive, expansive and expensive, interest in good roads, but no excuse for not doing it; for not liberally expending the people's money in the people's interest—in the form of a general provincial system of good roads.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Canada is a complaisant country—ski in winter and skeeter in summer.

His Royal Highness our Governor-General is acclimatising himself to Canadian conditions on the sliding scale. He is beginning to ski.

The filling of the Senate vacancy, caused by the death of Senator Thos. McKay, of Truro, N.S., will not change the political complexion of the red chamber. He was made a senator in 1881, whn Sir John Macdonald was premier.

Another opportunity for the Borden government to do a little dodging. Mr. E. A. Lancaster, M.P., a government supporter, says he is going to introduce his bill directed against the "ne temere decree." It is stated that the government will not take the responsibility of legislation which was so strongly urged upon the Laurier government and delay action or decision as long as possible.

Dr. G. R. Parkin, director of the Rhodes scholarships examinations for university education, is a cold blooded optimist. In addressing a meeting of the Royal Geographical Society in London, Eng., on Saturday night, he said that Canada's occasional abnormal temperature was one of her best assets, because it ruled out a coloured or black population, thus preventing such difficulties as had been encountered in South Africa and threatened Australia from Asiatic immigration and recruiting of aboriginals from the South Sea Islands.

THE PRACTICABILITY OF HUDSON BAY NAVIGATION

Before hoping for a new ocean route to Europe via Hudson Bay, we must have all possible information as to navigation in that water. It would be futile to allow optimism to run away with common sense in such an important matter. The reports received to date on the navigability of Hudson Bay are not encouraging. On the other hand they have not been sufficiently numerous or detailed to be entirely discouraging. The latest report, that of officers of the Dominion Hydrographic branch, does not give assuring opinions of the safety of Hudson Bay for navigation by vessels of ordinary construction. The survey parties, for instance, on July 18th at Fort Burwell, just inside the strait, found the water still frozen, and next day encountered an ice field sixty miles across.

Captain Dalton, who commanded this Hudson Bay trip, thus summarizes his experience: "Any vessel navigating the bay must be prepared to meet ice. Whilst none of that met with on this voyage could have been dangerous to the Stanley, or sealers, and others specially-constructed vessels now trading in the district, I am of the opinion that it might be dangerous to a ship not so built. I certainly do not think any cargo vessel of ordinary construction would have been able to find or force her way through the large field met before Churchill, but would have been obliged to remain in the ice until it was loosened by winds or currents."

Captain Dalton reports that the harbour of Churchill is easily reached. Then he proceeds to say: "Churchill harbour, although of not very great extent, as it at present stands, appears to me to be adapted to easy enlargement, the eastern shore having good water close to it. The entrance is narrow, and I do not imagine any sea could get up that would inconvenience loading operations alongside wharves, but the heavy tide and current from the Churchill River, running against a strong breeze, makes boat work difficult at times.

"The Hudson Bay vessels have found much difficulty in making and holding their positions in Nelson Roads, and on more than one occasion have been obliged, after waiting some days for favourable conditions, to abandon all idea of discharging. They have then carried their cargoes on to Churchill, from whence it had to be drawn by dog teams during the winter. The usual procedure for the Hudson Bay vessels is to close the land as much as possible on the rising tide, and, on their signals being observed by officials ashore, to setam out and anchor at a distance of about eighteen miles and await the boats."

These reasons do not necessarily chill our enthusiasm for the Hudson Bay route, but they are further reasons for the exercise of considerable caution in dealing with any schemes, provincial or federal, which comprise in part the navigation of Hudson Bay.—Monetary Times.

CITIZENS TO PETITION FOR A GARBAGE BY-LAW

Some of the leading citizens have undertaken to petition the Council to have a garbage system established. The district to be covered, extends west to Park street, east to Water street, north to Brock street, and south to Charlotte street. The petition is now being framed up, and will be circulated immediately, and it is expected that it will be largely signed. It will be handed in at the first meeting of the council. Only those who sign the petition will be requested to financially sustain it.

This is the first aggressive step toward forming a garbage system for the city, and as it only covers a certain district, other districts can form up likewise if they feel so disposed.

A number of citizens have expressed their sincere desire to have a garbage system established and its need is apparently generally felt in the city.

Funeral Of Mrs. McGuire

The funeral of the late Mrs. Ellen McGuire, of Havelock, took place this morning at 10 o'clock from the residence of her nephew, Mr. Alfred H. Lehane, 323 Reid street.

A solemn requiem High mass was celebrated by her son, Rev. M. J. McGuire, parish priest of Douro, assisted by Rev. Fr. McColl as deacon, and Rev. Fr. Scanlon, sub-deacon. Rev. Dr. O'Brien acted as Master of Ceremonies. The funeral sermon was preached by Rev. Fr. Fitzpatrick, of Ennismore. His Lordship, Bishop O'Connor recited the last prayers.

In the sanctuary were Archdeacon Casey of Lindsay, Fr. Peter McGuire Downeyville, Fr. Whibbs of Campbellford, Fr. Bretherton of Hastings, Fr. McAuley of the Sacred Heart parish, and Fathers O'Brien and McCarthy of the Cathedral.

The pallbearers were two of her sons, W .H. McGuire of Toronto, and Sarsfield of Havelock, her two nephews, Alf. H. Lehane of this city and James Lehane of Toronto, also Mr. V. J. McElderry and Mr. Leonard Lonergan of this city.

The late Mrs. McGuire formerly belonged to this parish, where she was well known and highly respected by all who knew her. She is survived by eight sons and five daughters. The sons are, Rev. Fr. McGuire, Douro; Richard, of Ursner, Neb.; Tom, of Newberry, Mich.; Louis and Martin, of Chicago; Andrew, of Cleveland; Wm. H. of Toronto and Sarsfield at home. The daughters are, Sister St. Gertrude of St. Andrews West, Ont.; Mrs. M. Ryan, of Westwood; Lizzie, Katie, Mary at home. She also leaves two sisters, Mrs. McEvay Ryan of Toronto and Mrs. E. L. Corkery of Lindsay.

An English Woman and Her Two Children Will Be Deported

An English woman named Mrs. Wittier was arrested at the home of a farmer named Heard, on the 6th line of Smith yesterday, on a charge of vagrancy, having no home and no visible means of support. High County Constable Cochrane made the arrest and lodged the prisoner in the county gaol here. The circumstances of the case are most regrettable. It appears that Mrs. Wittier and her two little children had been residing in Lakefield and she had been expelled from that town because of bad character. She had been at Heard's home for about two weeks.

She will be arraigned in the county police court before Magistrate Edmison to-morrow, when an endeavour will be made to have her and the children deported back to England.

A WEAK, ACHING BACK CAUSED HER MUCH MISERY

Could Not Work and Had No Ambition For Anything.

Those who have never been troubled with kidney trouble do not know the suffering and misery which those afflicted undergo.

Weak, lame or aching back comes from the kidneys, and when the kidneys are out of order the whole system becomes deranged.

Doan's Kidney Pills are a specific for all kidney troubles

Mrs. W. R. Hodge, Fielding, Sask., writes:—"A few lines highly recommending Doan's Kidney Pills. For this last year I have been troubled very much with nasty sick headaches, and a weak, aching back which caused me much misery, for I could not work and had no ambition for anything. My kidneys were very badly out of order, and kept me from sleeping at nights, I tried many kinds of pills and medicines but it seemed almost in vain. I began to give up in despair of ever being well and strong again, when a kind neighbor advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, which I did, and am thankful for the relief I obtained from them, for now I am never in trouble with a sore back or sick headaches. I will always say Doan's Kidney Pills for mine, and can highly recommend them to any sufferers."

TORTURED BY BILIOUSNESS

AND TERRIBLE SICK HEADACHES

Both Completely Cured by "Fruit-a-tives"

DRESDEN, Ont. July 17th, 1910

"I was a dreadful sufferer for many years from Sick Headaches and Biliousness, or Torpid Liver. I tried many remedies and physicians, but nothing seemed to do me any good. I finally said 'I'll try Fruit-a-tives' and after the first box, I was so much better that I continued using these fruit tablets and they have entirely cured me.

"I cheerfully can recommend "Fruit-a-tives" to anyone who suffers from Headaches, Biliousness or Stomach Trouble." MRS. ISAAC VANSICKLE.

Thousands of people have had the same experience as Mrs. VanSickle. They have tried doctors and taken all sorts of medicine, only to find that "Fruit-a-tives" is the one and only remedy that actually cures these troubles.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices, and is the greatest Liver Cure ever discovered. It acts directly on Liver, Kidneys and Skin—sweetens the stomach and purifies the blood.

50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c—at all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

Just about every day of my life I am newly impressed with the vast possibilities in the science of motion study for the household. I think I explained to you before that the science of motion study is the science of arranging one's surroundings and training one's self so as to do all routine work with the fewest and least tiring motions possible.

Applied to business establishments this science has saved thousands of dollars of money.

Applied to homes, I know it would save thousands of hours of labour.

Will you permit me to enter on a little personal history and tell you some of the ways in which I have found motions being wasted in my own household in order to make my idea plainer?

When I was boiling eggs the other day I noticed that I had to go to the pantry once to see the kitchen clock. Three times during the process of boiling those eggs—once to see what time it was when I put them in and twice to see if they were done—I took those steps. Absolutely wasted energy, wasn't it? And probably wasted many times a day in that kitchen.

I reached for my dictionary to look up a word one day and it suddenly occurred to me that I was demonstrating a motion leak. My dictionary is my largest book, and for the sake of appearances has been placed at the further end of my book rack, and I have to reach over several books to get it. And yet it is the volume I use the most frequently. Needless to say, appearances were thrown to the winds and the dictionary put it in its proper place.

Again, there is a large chair at the foot of my bed. Every time I walk around my bed in the process of making it, I must walk around that chair also. Only a few steps each time, to be sure, but how many thousand steps in a week, or a year, or a lifetime?

Just one more example. The coal shovel with which we put on the furnace coal has always stood, neither close by the furnace nor close by the coal bin, but against a chimney several feet away from either. That means that both before and after we put on coal, we walked several needless steps to get the shovel and replace it. Why does it stand there? Nobody knows. Simply for the reason that governs most household arrangements—that it always has.

I know that some better housewife than I are thinking that none of these leaks which I have mentioned would have existed at all in well-regulated homes. Perhaps not. Doubtless, these particular ones don't exist in yours, but Madame, I wouldn't be too sure that no others do. In the arrangement of the pantry, in the arrangement of the garments in your wardrobe, of the china in your china-closet, in your kitchen, and, indeed, all over your house, there are a thousand chances for motion leaks.

Even some of the most systematic business establishments have found that there were many leaks in their systems. Perhaps you are the rara avis who is the exception to this universal rule. But, before you decide that, don't you think it would be worth while to look about you and see if you can't find a few motion leaks in your household?

By JOHN MARCH

"I want to save you from such a fate. I don't care a straw for the world's opinion. Whether you were born with a golden spoon in your mouth or a metal one, it's all the same to me. You are an educated, exceptionally clever man, and as my husband your position in the county is at once established."

"But——"

"No," she said in a caressing voice, "no other man will do. It's you, Paul, dearest, you I want, and I must have you by fair means or foul. Listen to me," she said, dropping her voice to a tender, pathetic cadence, nestling against him and holding his right arm around her bare shoulders, "at sixteen I was married to my husband, and for five years I have loathed him. My father, a confidential clerk in an important legal firm, raised money on certain deeds and documents belonging to Guy Wycherly, a wealthy client. Mr. Wycherly was willing to hush up the matter and send the defaulting clerk to California on condition that the daughter, half woman, half child, beautiful as an artist's dream, should be the ransom. My whole being smarted with the hatred of him, the fibres of my nerves quivered and ached with the long-drawn-out agony of the hideous union. I had never loved, and my odious marriage set me at odds with all the world. I have never been given an opportunity of discovering the furious, overmastering passion hidden away in some remote heart cell until I met you, Paul. Do you remember our first meeting on the Terrace at Weyberne Hall? You asked me if I would have both cream and sugar in my tea, and then a little spider came with a run from an overhead branch and tumbled straight into my cup. I looked up into your smiling eyes, and—oh, heavens! I was frightened, terrified —I—" She hid her face on his breast and held her quivering lips to the smooth, glossy surface of his shirt. "Paul," she resumed, prayerfully, after a brief space, lifting a pleading face, marvellous in its perfectibility of beauty and desire, "be merciful and yield. Don't make me use force. Darling, give in. I want you, I must have you, I won't live without you. Paul, dearest, you'll give in now—won't you?"

He looked slowly round the handsome room. Some spiritual sense, what we commonly term human instinct, made him sensitive to approaching danger, and aware also that he was a prisoner in Mrs. Wycherly's boudoir. Had he been able to see through the door of solid oak panelling he could not have been more certain that Denham, in the lemon yellow livery, stood on guard outside.

A shadowy, half-formed thought that had been lurking idly in the background of his brain suddenly sprang into prominence. Figuratively speaking, he realized that it was the one and only trump card he possessed, and that he had kept it up his sleeve too long already, but he resolved to play it now to the best of his ability.

"It's no use trying to keep it back any longer, Mrs. Wycherly," he said with a dash of regret in his voice. "Still, I am sure I may trust your discretion, as any sort of imposture or false pretences would jeopardise my position. I must tell you, but I know before hand the secret is safe in your keeping. The truth is, Mrs. Wycherly, I'm a married man, my wife——"

"Liar!" she cried, bringing out the word with a rich contralto note that made the chandelier ring.

"Mrs. Wycherly!" he exclaimed, confronting her fierce outbreak of wrath with angry resentment.

"It's a lie," she repeated, "a silly sickly lie, and—bah!" laughing immoderately, "the first one you've told!"

"Come, Mrs. Wycherly" he said, frowning, "I've been patient enough, let us end the farce now."

"I wish with all my heart you would end it,"

He held out his arm; she placed her hand on it and looked at him without moving.

"May I take you downstairs?" he asked, regaining a measure of his old courtesy.

"As my promised husband you may, not otherwise."

"My dear lady!" he exclaimed, somewhat contemptuously, "you really make me laugh—you can't compel a man to marry you."

(To be continued.)

Crippled With Sore Back

Kidneys Were Badly Diseased and She Didn't Know It

Was Completely Cured by Less Than Three Boxes of

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Women are very often deceived and mistaken in regard ot kidney disease. The pains in the back are attributed to other derangements, and kidney disease is allowed to run on and on until beyond the reach of medical science.

There is needless suffering, and life itself is risked, because backache is not recognized as the most marked symptom of kidney disease.

There is no treatment which so quickly relieves and cures kidney pains in the back as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. As proof of this read Mrs. Patterson's letter:

Mrs. Richard Patterson, Haldimand, Gaspe Co., Que., writes: "I will gladly say that I was cured of kidney trouble by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. When I began using this medicine I was crippled with sore back and did not know what was the trouble. In looking over Dr. Chase's Almanac I saw Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills advertised and decided to try them.

"I had not used two boxes before my back was all right, and before I had completed the third box was entirely cured. There has been no return of the old kidney trouble, and I therefore believe the cure to be permanent."

THE LITTLE LAKE CEMETERY BOARD'S ANNUAL MEETING

Business Gathering Held Monday in the Council Chamber at Which Reports Were Received of Last Year's Work —Officers Are Elected for 1912.

The annual meeting of the shareholders of the Little Lake Cemetery Company took place in the Council Chamber at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon before Mr. W. H. Moore, (President), Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P.P., (Sec.-Treasurer), Messrs. W. G. Morrow, C. Stapleton, B. Shortley, J. J. Lundy, E. H. D. Hall, T. A. S. Hay, A. Stevenson, and Dr. George Burnham, (directors). Mr. W. H. Moore, the President, occupied the chair.

After the minutes of the last meeting had been read and confirmed the President read his report, as follows:

President W. H. Moore presented the directors' report as follows to the shareholders of The Little Lake Cemetery Company:

The directors present their report for the past year as follows:

It having become evident that a great source of danger existed in the possible happening of fire to a number of wooden buildings that occupied a part of the Cemetery grounds, and were used for barns, stable, sheddings an ice house, that had been erected for more than thirty years, and had become dangerous to occupy, and by which if fire occurred would do incalculable damage to the beautiful group of pine trees near where they stood, your directors decided to pull them down and to build a new stables with sheds and ice house on the company's property fronting on Water street, one hundred and fifty feet south of the superintendent's residence. This they have done in the brick and ample loft room for hay, oat and cellar underneath. The whole is well built, of lasting materials, and most of the old buildings have been taken down, and all things put to rights. The cost of the new stables and sheds has been $1,500. The ground recovered, when put in condition, will on sale more than repay the expenditure on the buildings.

By the removal of a number of hedges in the Cemetery during the past year and the improvement of the lots they enclosed, and the levelling up of many sunken graves, the general appearance of the grounds has been rendered more attractive, and your directors are gratified to learn that this action has received the commendation of lot owners.

At the close of the year 1911 the company owned city debentures to the value of $12,917.31 as an investment for the perpetual maintenance of the Cemetery. There was also at the same time in bank to the credit of the company $3,390.38. A new debenture for $1,000, bearing four and one-half per cent interest, has been purchased. There remains on hand over $2,000, for which probably another debenture may be obtained, and will make a total of $15,913.71 held in reserve for future care of the Cemetery.

There will also be laid before you the reports of the secretary-treasurer and the superintendent, from which it will be seen the company has had, in a financial sense, a most prosperous year. Your directors also believe it has been one in which continued advance has been made towards rendering the grounds more worthy the name of "God's Acre."

All of which is respectfully submitted.

W. H. Moore, President.

15th January, 1912.

We further certify that we have examined the books of the superintendent for the year 1911, and find them carefully and correctly kept. All moneys received by him appear to have been promptly paid over to the treasurer.

James A. Hall,
T. C. Quartermaine,
Auditors.

Peterborough, 13th Jan., 1912.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT.

Mr. Frank Wise, superintendent, read the following report:

Although the year has been a very busy one at the Cemetery, very little new work has been undertaken within the Cemetery grounds.

The fences and hedges ordered removed have all been taken away excepting three dollar hedges, which will be removed early next spring.

A new stable and shed has been erected on the corner of Ware and Hunter streets, costing about $1,500. This will allow the removal of the old sheds inside the grounds, which for a number of years have been an eyesore to the entrance of your Cemetery. This work is being proceeded with as quickly as possible.

Now that the old buildings are being removed from near the entrance gates, I would like to see an attempt made at replacing them with a substantial stone and iron structure, as the old gates and fence are quite beyond repair.

Your greenhouses were able to supply the demand for plants and flowers, of which there were over 20,000 disposed of. These were distributed between 400 urns and 225 beds and borders. This in over each shows the vases and beds supplied by the several florists of the city.

About one-half the lots whereon the old receiving vault stood has been disposed of, and I expect in a short time they will be all sold, as this is in a very desirable location.

Respectfully submitted.

Frank Wise, Superintendent.

On the proposition of Mr. B. Shortly, the present auditors were unanimously re-elected for the ensuing year. The Secretary-Treasurer then read an application from the auditors, asking for an increase in their fee, from fifteen to twenty-five dollars, and, after a brief discussion, it was resolved to increase the auditors' fee to $20.00.

The election of Directors followed. On the proposition of Mr. W. G. Morrow, seconded by Mr. C. Stapleton, the Secretary-Treasurer was asked to cast a vote for the re-election of the old directors, and the following were named: Messrs. W. H. Moore, C. Stapleton, B. Shortley, W. G. Morrow, J. J. Lundy, E. H. D. Hall, T. A. S. Hay, A. Stevenson, and Dr. George Burnham. — Carried unanimously.

The Directors' Meeting.

Immediately following the meeting of the shareholders, the annual meeting of the directors took place.

Mr. Lundy to propose the re-election of the President, Mr. W. H. Moore. John B. Shortley said:

"I think I am voicing the opinion of all the members of the Board when I say that he is entitled to another year, and, perhaps, many more. We are indebted to Mr. Moore for being so zealous and so attentive to the business of the cemetery last year. He has certainly given a lot of his time to its affairs and I have pleasure in moving that he be re-elected."

Mr. T. A. S. Hay seconded, saying: "I do not think we can improve things; and if Mr. Moore will occupy the position another year I shall have pleasure in seconding the motion.—Carried unanimously.

On the proposition of Mr. A. Stevenson, seconded by Dr. George Burnham, the Managing Committee of last year, namely, Messrs. T. A. S. Hay, B. Shortly, W. G. Morrow, and W. H. Moore, was unanimously re-elected.

On the Secretary-Treasurer referring to a clause in the minutes of the last meeting to the effect that he salary of the Superintendent, Mr. Frank Wise, be increased from eight hundred to nine hundred dollars, the President said:

"Mr. Wise gave me to understand that he would not bind himself for three years, for that salary."

Mr. Shortly: "Now, we cannot afford to lose him."

Mr. Moore: "We can at some price."

Mr. Shortly: "He keeps his plots splendidly and his work has increased considerably: I therefore propose that his salary be increased to one thousand dollars per year, subject to his signing a contract for three years.—Carried.

June and December—Dr. Malcolm McCulloch and J. Green.

Subsequently each committee met, and elected its chairman as follows:

Supervision—W. Madill.

Finance—R. Fair.

Property—W. Aldridge.

Building—J. J. McBain.

A special building committee, composed of Messrs. McBain, Madill, Aldridge, Dr. McCulloch, W. H. Hill and Richard Hall, was elected to consider certain additions and improvements to the hospital.

NO MORE CONSTIPATION, BILIOUS HEADACHE, BAD BREATH, SOUR STOMACH OR LAZY LIVER

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box will keep you feeling good for months. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then to keep their stomach, liver and bowels regulated and never know a miserable moment. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleaning, too, occasionally.

Civic Services, Finances and Rate of Taxation

Article No. 4

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Some of the advantages for manufacturing that Peterborough possesses have been pointed out. There are other matters that promoters of industries look into. They wish to locate where there are good civic services and where the finances of the municipality are in a sound condition—that is promoters of substantial industries, and not promoters who are looking principally for an opportunity to pull something for themselves out of the flotation.

Sanitation is an important matter, and in this connection a system of sewers is requisite. This city has over twenty-eight miles of common sewers with about 2,400 services. It has fifty-five miles of concrete sidewalks, and in sewers and permanent sidewalks has expended over $400,000. The waterworks, owned by the city, is adequate and complete, the new dam, pumping station, and machinery, furnished an excellent system. There are nearly forty miles of water mains, on which are set nearly 260 hydrants, for fire protection, and from which there are 3,000 services.

A competent fire brigade, continuously on duty, with a complete equipment in a commodious station furnish protection from fire, and the department, along with the waterworks system, is recognized as being so efficient that low fire insurance rates are given.

The common schools, of which there are nine, have a reputation of being among the best in the Province, and in addition there are the Collegiate Institute, and Normal School for teacher training. A reference to the hospitals, parks, churches, etc., would complete an attractive list of public conveniences and institutions.

The municipal finances are in an enviable condition. The surplus of assets over liabilities amounts to the tidy sum of $354,386. Of these assets, the waterworks and valuable real estate owned by the city are revenue producing. In the sinking funds there is a surplus of $35,000.

The question of taxation is a tender one with the average citizen, and an important one for the prospective citizen. A comparison of the taxation here with other cities is an educative one for the citizen and prospective citizen alike. There are 18 cities in Ontario. A recent Government return gives the sums raised in 1910 in these cities for Municipal and school purposes. Taking these returns of the sums raised, and using the Dominion census to ascertain the population of the cities, it is found that the amount of taxes levied per head of population for municipal (apart from school) purposes varies from $3.83 to $18.80. If one heard comments made in Peterborough, at times, he would imagine that the highest rate is in this city. But it is not—far from it. The lowest rate is in a city where the ownership of a steam railway, operated by the C. P. R., gave returns that reduced the taxes, and I understand that all over sight of obligations also assisted, and that now the rate has been raised, so that in a recent letter in a paper in that city, there is the familiar reference to an 'already high rate of taxation". So this city might fairly be left out of the comparison.

Counting this particular city in, however, Peterborough stands third lowest among the eighteen cities in the rate of taxation per head for municipal purposes, wih a rate of $6.97 per head. Only two cities have a lower rate, and fifteen have a higher rate. The rate per head of taxes for school purposes is higher than in the majority of the cities, but taking the combined taxation for all municipal and school purposes per head of population there are only four cities with a lower rate than Peterborough, and thirteen with a higher rate. Peterborough's rate is $3.54 higher than the lowest (the railway -owning city) and $13.67 lower than the highest.

In civic services and conveniences in sound financial condition, and in low rate of taxation, Peterborough offers intending citizens and manufacturing establishments attractive conditions.

Yours truly,
Civis Sum.

SKATING PARTY

The Young People's Association of St. Andrew's church held a very successful skating party Monday night at Jackson park. About 50 of the young people of the church were present. After skating till about 10 o'clock they returned to the church, where a dainty luncheon was served, and a most pleasant and enjoyable evening was brought to a close by singing "Auld Lang Syne."

Horse Struck By G.T.R. Train

OMEMEE, JAN. 15—Mr. Wm. Connell, a farmer residing near Omemee Junction, lost a valuable colt and had another horse severely injured by a train on the G.T.R., on Saturday evening. The animals were being led to water when they broke free and dashed through the gate leading to the railroad and down the track. It is said that Mr. Connell signaled the train, which was approaching, but the engineer apparently did not see the signal. We understand that the G.T.R. will be asked to make good the loss.

DON'T BUY BOTTLED PROMISES

Newbro's Herpicide is Bottled Results—Results Are What You Want

A feeling of uncertainty, a dread of possible disappointment, always goes with an "off brand" hair preparation. That is part of the purchase, just as much so as the label on the bottle.

You don't get this with a bottle of Newbro's Herpicide. You number among your acquaintances and friends hundreds who have used Herpicide with satisfaction, and you know that you can do the same. The results are always right.

Newbro's Herpicide kills the dandruff germ and stops falling hair.

A COURSE IN STOCK JUDGING

Following is the programme of the free course in stock judging to be held on Jan. 22 and 23, on the lot near the Customs house:

Monday, January 22nd—

9. 30to 12 a.m.—Dairy Cattle, R. S. Stevenson, Ancaster.

1.30 to 4.30 p.m., Beef Cattle, John Campbell, Woodville.

Tuesday, January 23—

9.30 to 12 a.m., Heavy Horses, C. M. MacRae, Ottawa.

1.30 to 4.30 p.m., Light Horses, C. M. MacRae, Ottawa.

The object of the course is to stimulate interest in the production of good live stock, and to illustrate in a practical way the correct conformation and market requirements in the various classes of stock discussed.

A lecture by the instructor, based on the animals in the ring, illustrating the ideal type desired in each class, showing where defects may occur and emphasizing the strong points of the breed; an opportunity for each one to personally examine and place the animals in each class; a discussion of the placings, led by the instructor, dealing thoroughly with any special points and comparisons, illustrated by each class, and the placing of the animals by the judge and the discussions of his reasons.

MY PRAYER.

Ah! not the praise of men, but one kind thought
Within a child's pure heart;
Not pleasant paths, but rough ways even wrought;
The martyr grace a part,
With all that keeps my spirit earthward bent;
One Sacramental tear
For gifts abused, grace squandered, time mis-spent;
Of staining sin the fear;
Be this my prayer—for these, dear Lord, I plead;
Keep far the earthly sweet;
And e'en though I should falter, do Thou lead
Me to Thy Sacred Feet.

Next Meeting Announced

The date for the next meeting of the Canadian Club of Peterborough has been announced for Thursday, Feb. 1st. The speaker for the evening will be Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, K. C., of Toronto. The subject will be announced later.

"THE ROSARY"

Can one evil mind breeding evil thoughts exert an adverse influence upon an entire family, bring that family to ruin, and the members of the household remain in ignorance of the reason for the unhappiness?

That is the question that "The Rosary" a beautiful new play from the pen of Edw. E. Rose, in which John Meehan is starring in the role of "Father Kelly," to be produced at The Grand on Saturday next, Jan. 20. Matinee and night, answers in the affirmative. Go and see it. The plan opens to-morrow morning.

THE WEATHER

Although to-day is comparatively mild, it was quite cold during the night, six degrees below zero being registered. This morning, however, it was four above zero.—W. P.

The Household Pest

Many exterminator compounds used against bed bugs have a pungent odor and their use is therefore objectionable. Keating's Powder is odorless, stainless and harmless except to insect life—yet it is thoroughly efficient and never-failing. Kills bugs, drives them away and prevents their coming. QUICK RELIEF FROM THAT PERSISTENT, RASKING COUGH

We mean the kind of cough it gives one a cold shivers just to hear—the dry, deep-seated hack—hack—hack—that seems as if it were tearing the very vitals. That's the kind of cough that means business.

Fortunately, though, that is also one of the kinds of cough for which Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne was first prescribed, and which it has been relieving with great promptness and regularity ever since.

Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne is absolutely free from harmful drugs of any kind, and is safe even for children. It is pleasant to take, and acts quickly, relieving the irritation, loosening the phlegm, promoting expectoration, and so stopping the cough. Thousands declare it to be the best cough syrup they have ever tried.

Your Druggist will gladly recommend it, and will supply you with either a 25c. or 50c. bottle. The National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited. 116

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The general secretary, Mr. H. M. Gilchrist, presented his report as follows: Again at the close of another year we thank God as we look back over twelve months of association service. We cannot review the year without feeling gratitude to God for all His goodness to us. The year 1911 has been filled with opportunity, and while many of these have been allowed to pass without being improved, yet on the whole the association has accomplished many things immensely worth while.

The association has given to every young man in Peterborough an opportunity to make good. To make good spiritually, by means of the Bible classes and religious meetings. To make up for deficiencies in educating. To find outlet for the nervous strain in healthful play. To keep his body in a fair condition of fitness as a basis for intellectual and spiritual fitness. Opportunity has been written big over our door to the men who could read.

We have also given the citizens of Peterborough the opportunity to convert money into character. This is of no mean importance. The contributors have put $3,600 into character building in this work, and though they may not see the results as evident as in other investments they have made, yet the results are more lasting and more worth while.

It must be a source of profound joy to you as a board that the financial condition of the association is so much improved since the last annual meeting. We are convinced that with a sufficient number of the directors working to secure contributions it would be quite easy to secure all the money necessary to run this association. The problem is not where can the money be obtained but who can be secured to solicit the money from those who are willing to give.

The statistics are interesting. Those of the religious work department are as follows:

MEETINGS FOR MEN.

Held in the building, 1; total attendance, 84.

Held in Theatre, 9; total attendance, 767.

Held in four shops, 40; total attendance, 938.

BIBLE STUDY.

Training Class, 7; total attendance, 24.

Sunday Morning Bible Study Club, 45; total attendance, 292.

Sunday Afternoon Class, 14; total attendance, 89.

The boys' department has been handicapped in many ways this past year but the following figures show that there has been a good deal of work accomplished:

BOYS' DEPARTMENT.

Attendance at rooms	9881
Attendance at summer camp ..	21
Bible Class, sessions held	46
Bible Class attendance	601
Special social events	38
Attendance at social events	591
Outings held	41
Attendance at outings	672
Attendance at swimming classes	625
Non-members taught to swim ..	49

We have a smaller membership this year, largely because of the fact that no campaign was held and very little advertising done. However, we have the satisfaction of knowing that more membership fees have been received than were taken in from a larger number of members last year.

STATISTICS OF MEMBERSHIP.

Full members	261
Limited members	21
Boy members	121
Total members	403
Active members	136
Associate members	146

The whole work of the association is in that condition where foundations are being laid for a broad and permanent work being done in the future. The citizens are supporting the association as never before, and the opportunity for adaptation of the work to the needs of the men of the city are daily increasing. There is needed now a hearty participation by the active members in associated effort to make the association a mighty factor in the development in Peterborough of strong and efficient Christian manhood.

Respectfully submitted,
H. M. GILCHRIST, General Secretary.

PHYSICAL DEPARTMENT.

The report of the physical department for year ending December 31, 1911, was given by Mr. J. J. Thompson as follows:

I beg to present for your consideration the following report of the physical department for the year ending December 31st, 1911. It has been a great pleasure to me personally to have had charge of this department for the past year, and I trust that the following report may be to your entire satisfaction.

Leaders' Corps.—During the past year three Leaders' Corps have been increasing the efficiency of this department by their faithful service, which has been given most unselfishly, and often at considerable personal sacrifice. This no doubt has gone a long way towards making this department so popular as well as efficient. I refer to the Senior, Intermediate and Junior Leaders' Corps.

Basketball.—Basketball has had a large place on our class programme, there being 35 organized teams playing in class leagues. Outside games, to say nothing of the many inter-class games, were played during the season. The City Basketball League also furnished some exciting contests. Altogether, we have had a very good season in basketball.

Athletics.—This line of physical activity has still found a place on our programme during the past year, our association being represented in the Hexathlon contests by junior and senior teams. Three of the four cups offered for the city athletic championship were won by our members. Our Pentathlon team finished a good second at Belleville, May 24th last. The above list of events, as well as the association outdoor and indoor contests, furnished our members plenty of opportunity to engage in athletics.

Exhibitions—During the year which has just closed the members of the physical department gave nine exhibitions of physical work as carried on in our gymnasium, three of these being held in our own gymnasium, the others being held as follows: Two in the Town Hall at Warsaw, one in Town Hall, Lakefield, one in T.A.S. Gymnasium, and one each in the Armouries and Charlotte Street Church. These entertainments helped to place our work before the public, as well as sustain the interest.

Tennis Club.—The Tennis Club has had a most successful season. Our members were successful in again winning the "Kerr Trophy" emblematic of the city tennis championship, making the third year in succession that the club has held this trophy. The courts have certainly been a great help to the association in maintaining the interest during the summer months.

First Aid to the Injured Class.—Five men received certificates from the St. John's Ambulance Society last year, and ten men are now enrolled in a similar class.

Teams.—Teams were formed in baseball, football, hockey, which gave the members ample opportunity to enjoy these different lines of sport.

Boys' Camp.—Twenty-one boys enjoyed two weeks' outing at Sandy Point, where the boys spent a most enjoyable time. Leagues were formed in baseball and football, the remaining time being spent boating, fishing, hyking, berry picking, camp fires, swimming, etc.

Senior Camp.—A senior camp was held for two weeks in July, with headquarters at Juniper Island. Trips were made to different parts of the lake. Every one reported an enjoyable time.

Hykes.—Several hykes were held for the boys during the year.

Extension Work.—Extension work was conducted at Warsaw for St. Paul's Junior Brotherhood. Open house for schoolboys every Thursday afternoon. Assisted 57th Regiment to conduct Coronation day sports. Trades and Labour Council Labour Day sports. Conducted city aquatic championships. Conditioned Peterborough hockey teams. Conducted free swimming campaign for schoolboys.

Wrestling Class.—Was again in charge of Mr. H. B. Cowan, who has been most faithful in his attendance, for which we are most grateful.

Toronto Man Cured of Intolerable Itch

Mr. J. R. Hooper, Toronto.

By Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment

"I just want to say a good word for Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Four or five years ago I was in Port Arthur, and I had an attack of the itch. It certainly was an intolerable nuisance. The itching was principally at nights before I went to bed. The thighs were especially affected.

"I went to two doctors about it, and tried more than one remedy. I was beginning to think the complaint was incurable, when I was telling my trouble to a barber, and he said that he would guarantee to cure me. He told me to take a hot bath, use Cuticura Soap, and then apply Cuticura Ointment. I took his advice, and, sure enough, the itch vanished. I had probably been troubled with the itch for two or three months before I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and they completely cured me of that intolerable nuisance. After one warm bath with Cuticura Soap and use of the Cuticura Ointment I was never troubled with the itching again. Anything in this testimonial I would be prepared to swear to in a court of law." (Signed) J. R. Hooper, 208 Parliament Street, Toronto, Jan. 10, 1911.

For more than a generation Cuticura Soap and Ointment have afforded the speediest, simplest and most economical treatment for skin and scalp humors. Sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. A liberal sample of each, with 32-pg. book, sent free, to any address, by the Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., 53 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A.

WELL KNOWN WRITER DEAD

Editor of Truth, One of Most Prominent Writers in England, Dies at Ripe Age

HAD STRENUOUS CAREER

Florence, Italy, Jan. 17.—Henry Labouchere, the editor and proprietor of The London Truth, died at his villa here yesterday morning.

Owing to failing ill-health he had resided in Italy since 1906.

Henry Dupre Labouchere was during his long life one of the best-known of English journalists and members of Parliament. Born in London in 1831 and the inheritor of estates which left him free to follow his own bent, his earlier life was full of incidents of a highly romantic character. Educated at Eton, he entered the diplomatic service in 1854 and for a part of his term was stationed at Washington.

Labouchere left the diplomatic service in 1856 and three years later was elected a member of Parliament for Middlesex. He sat for one year, and was again elected for Northampton in 1880, which constituency remained staunch to him till his final retirement in 1905.

Labouchere, although a very wealthy man, was throughout his Parliamentary career the exponent of advanced Radicalism and in 1880 placed himself at the head of its advocates. Refusing all offers of office, he was one of the most influential private members of the House of Commons, and his catching of the Speaker's eye meant a full audience, delighted with his wit and humor, however obnoxious were the opinions he advocated.

Perhaps, however, Labouchere was most widely known through his own journal, Truth. This was an offspring of The World, founded by Edmond Yates, with which Labouchere was at first associated as city editor. On their later separation not only London, but the country waited every week for the lambasting the rival editors gave each other every issue while retaining their personal friendship.

As editor of Truth Labouchere was the determined foe of all social, financial and administrative fakers. No man defended more libel actions, and in exceedingly few cases was he found in default. As a journalist he ranked with the best and his letters to The London Daily News during the investment of Paris by the German forces were and are of great historic interest. As member for Northampton he had Charles Bradlaugh as his colleague, from 1880 till Bradlaugh's death in 1891.

Two Killed In Wreck.

Halifax, N.S., Jan. 17—An I.C.R. locomotive, on board of which were nine men, yesterday collided with the head of a train of 29 new cars from the Nova Scotia Car Works, which were being run down from the works to the freight yards of the Intercolonial at Halifax. Of the nine men seven were workmen returning to their homes at the end of the day. Two were killed in the collision, Arthur Lilley, aged 26, and Leo Mullins, aged 28.

James Robicheau of Moncton, a lineman, had his leg broken in two places, probably necessitating amputation. The other men on the engine escaped unhurt.

Potatoes on Free List.

Washington, Jan. 17.—A suspension for six months of the tariff duty of 27 cents per bushel on potatoes was proposed in a bill introduced yesterday by Rep. Ayres of New York. The bill stated that the scarcity of potatoes in the markets of the United States has raised the prices to a point almost prohibitive to the consumers.

VIEWS ARE CHANGED

Government Turns Down Opinions It Held Recently

MR. ARMSTRONG ON CANAL

Ottawa, Jan. 17.—Orthodoxy in politics depends apparently on whether one sits to the left or to the right of the Speaker. There was an interesting exemplification of this in the Commons yesterday, apropos of a long discussion on the bill to amend the Inquiries Act, submitted by the Minister of Justice. The object of the bill is to give more extended powers to commissions appointed by the Government in the way of deputing experts to take evidence and conduct sub-inquiries. The special purpose of the bill is to throw wide open the door for the investigation of the recently appointed Civil Service Commission. Hon. Dr. Pugsley quietly sprang a further amendment strongly reminiscent of what has been heard for years from the left of the Speaker, when Mr. Borden and his colleagues were there located. It was to the effect that the minority in Parliament had the right to demand an investigation. The amendment was promptly defeated.

Hon. F. D. Monk painted an alarming picture of the hordes of lawyers, which would overrun the commission if every employe who might suspect that his conduct might be impugned were given the right to be represented by counsel. He had no objection to any civil servant, whose conduct was actually called in question before the commission being so represented.

J. A. M. Armstrong (North York) burst forth into a psalm of thanksgiving over the abandonment of the Newmarket Canal, which he described as a political octopus, which had saved Hon. A. B. Aylesworth's political scalp in 1908.

Substantial progress was made with the estimates, about $2,500,000 being voted for public buildings at the capital and in Quebec and Nova Scotia.

Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden introduced a bill to authorize the transfer of public records, documents and other historical material from the various Departments to the public Archives, to be placed in the custody of an officer to be called the Dominion Archivist, with the rank and salary of a deputy head; to provide for the purchase of records, documents and material, and for expenses in connection therewith, and to provide for the appointment of such officers and clerks as are required for the proper care of the Archives.

When the House was in committee on the bill of Hon. C. J. Doherty to amend the Inquiries' Act by conferring on commissioners the power to employ such experts to take evidence for submission to the commission, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. Wm. Pugsley urged that parties who might be investigated by such commissions, be given the right to be represented by counsel, and Mr. Pugsley moved an amendment to attain this end.

The Premier did not think this necessary, as it was at present within the discretion of commissions to hear counsel.

Hon. C. J. Doherty saw the difficulty in the amendment that if a Department were to be investigated, every employe of that Department might be said to be subject to or about to be investigated, and it might result in a formidable army of counsel before anything were suggested implying any imputation on employes. He had no objection, however, to give to anyone whose conduct was impugned before the commission, the right to be represented by counsel. That would only be justice.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier objected to the wide powers granted to commissioners to deput power to sub-commissioners, and moved to strike out that provision in the bill.

Hon. C. J. Doherty declared that they were only giving back to commissioners powers which they formerly held. Commissioners and sub-commissioners alike were moreover subject to the control of the courts of the land.

A. K. MacLean (Halifax) objected to the provision for the employment of "any qualified person" to take evidence, not in regard to any technical point, but with regard to the subject matter of the enquiry in general. It would permit commissioners to delegate their entire powers to others.

Hon. C. J. Doherty said he was willing to insert a provision that all delegation of powers under the act be with the approval of the Governor-in-council.

Hon. Mr. Pugsley moved an amendment providing for minority investigation on the appeal of forty members.

The Premier declared that he could hardly believed his ears when he heard that the leader of the Opposition was sconder of this motion. In former days, when not forty but eighty members of the House had petitioned, he had said: "There will be no investigation" and "The Government should investigate its own Departments."

Hon. Mr. Pugsley's amendment was lost and the other amendments were allowed to stand over and the committee reported progress.

Starving, Sell Children.

London, Jan. 17.—A telegram says that the starving peasantry in the Government of Orenburg, on the River Ural, Russia, owing to not having received any assistance from the authorities to relieve famine, are selling their children to the Khirgese Nomads in the Government of Saratov.

More than 70 per cent. of the children are stricken with a fearful epidemic in some of the villages.

Socialists For Woman Suffrage.

Washington, Jan. 17.—A constitutional amendment for woman's suffrage was introduced yesterday by Representative Berger of Wisconsin. A great petition is now being circulated by the Socialist party, and Representative Berger declared yesterday that a million petitioners would be on the roll in favor of votes for women when the document finally is presented to Congress.

CYCLIST RISKS LIFE

New York — Jim Eanora, one of the best known trick bicycle riders in the United States, risks his life at every public appearance and knows how necessary it is for him to have a steady nerve and unfailing strength.

The slightest weakness might cost him his life, or injure him severely, and this letter from him is of great interest on that account. He says:

"I do trick bicycle riding as a professional and work hard, and so I was always tired and weak. I got so I had no strength and felt all run down, but since using three bottles of Vinol I feel fine again. I have recommended Vinol to others and they too are using it with good results."

Your strength is just as valuable to you, and we want to say to you that there is nothing so good as Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron remedy without oil, for making weak and wornout people robust, rugged and well. It is good for children and old people too, and we give your money back unless Vinol does all we claim. U. S. MAY INTERFERE.

Unrest In Cuba Causes Anxiety at Washington.

Washington, Jan. 17.—The attitude of the United States toward Cuba is shown in the following note, presented yesterday to the Cuban Government:

"The situation in Cuba, as now reported, causes grave concern to the Government of the United States.

"That the laws to safeguard free republican government shall be enforced and not defied is essential and obvious to the maintenance of law, order and stability indispensible to the status of the Republic of Cuba, in the continued well-being of which the United States has always evinced and cannot escape a vital interest.

"The President of the United States looks to the President and Government of Cuba to prevent the threatened situation which would compel the Government of the United States, much against its desires, to consider what measures it must take in pursuance of the obligations of its relations to Cuba."

Sensation In Havana.

Havana, Jan. 17.—The news of threatened intervention by the United States in Cuban affairs, which was published in the late editions of the Havana afternoon papers, coming without the least warning, created intense excitement in the clubs and cafes, and in all places of public gathering it was the absorbing topic of conversation. Astonishment and resentment against American interference were mingled with very general incredulity.

Later, as the news was fully confirmed, the impression became general that the suggestion of intervention would probably have a good effect in calming the existing agitation and in quieting political excitement.

Belleville Agricultural Society.

Belleville, Jan. 17.—At the annual meeting of the Belleville Agricultural Society, held in this city yesterday afternoon, the officers elected were: Hon. presidents, Mayor Vermilyea and W. B. Deacon; president, C. H. Weese; second vice-president, H. K. Deneys; directors: L. M. Terwilliger, W. W. Anderson, P. Mott, E. W. Brooks, S. Wellbanks, R. C. Garbutt, S. E. Haight, W. H. Martin and H. Ketcheson; hon. directors: W. C. Farley and Col. Ponte; treasurer, G. Horton; secretary, R. H. Ketcheson.

The president and secretary were appointed to attend the annual meeting of the Fairs' Association at Toronto.

Sept. 10 and 11 were the dates set for the holding of the fair this year. The financial statement was satisfactory.

Box-Packing Schools.

Toronto, Jan. 17.—Schools to give instruction in packing fruit in boxes will be started next week to Prince Edward, Hastings, Northumberland and Durham counties. The schools will be under the supervision of W. F. Kidd of Simcoe.

BOMB HURLED AT YUAN

Chinese Premier Narrowly Escapes Assassination.

ASSASSINS ARE CAUGHT

Pekin, Jan. 17.—An unsuccessful attempt was made yesterday morning to assassinate Premier Yuan Shi Kai, one of the central figures in the national upheaval in the Chinese Empire.

Premier Yuan Shi Kai's assailants were three well-dressed Chinamen, who are stated to be prominent revolutionaries.

They were standing on the sidewalk when the Premier's carriage approached. As the vehicle reached within a distance of about 30 yards from the spot where they were standing, one of them threw a large bomb in its direction, but his aim was so bad that the missile exploded at a distance of twenty feet from the carriage.

The vehicle rattled and shook from the shock of the explosion, but Premier Yuan Shi Kai escaped unscathed. He appeared, in fact, not to be greatly perturbed by the attempt.

The havoc caused by the explosion was immense. Immediately around the carriage, a policeman, a soldier and two horses were struck dead. Twelve other soldiers and several civilians, with a number of horses were also badly wounded.

Without waiting to see the effect of their deed, the perpetrators rushed toward a neighboring tea house. Soldiers and police, however, were close on their heels and they were arrested before they were able to make their escape by a rear door. The other men who are suspected of being accomplices in the attempted assassination, have since been arrested.

Congratulations from all quarters, including the legations, have been pouring in on Yuan Shi Kai throughout the day. The attack made against the Premier apparently has removed doubts in the minds of the Manchus as to his loyalty. The foreign residents declare that Yuan Shi Kai's death would throw North China into a state of lawlessness, demanding immediate intervention by the powers.

The belief is general that Yuan Shi Kai is necessary to the transition from the old to the new order; otherwise, a change would make a shambles of Pekin. The bomb-thrower, who is a native of Kwei Chow, it is expected, will be executed to-day.

Rising Was Planned.

London, Jan. 17.—The bomb-thrower who attempted the life of Yuan Shi Kai has confessed that the assassination of the Premier was to have been the signal for a general rising in Pekin, says a despatch. The whole southeast portion of the city is now picketed with troops, and a house to house search resulted in the discovery of a bomb factory and the arrest of several men having bombs in their possession.

There are persistent rumors of an attempt to poison the Empress Dowager, who, however, becoming suspicious refused to partake of the fatal cup.

Bottle Crossed Ocean.

New York, Jan. 17.—The adventures of a whisky bottle, which drifted with the ocean currents all the way across the Atlantic are told in a letter received from England by J. S. Lavin, a New York engineering expert. Mr. Lavin threw the bottle over the rail of the houseboat off the Long Island coast in August, 1909. He left a card with his name and address inside, and has just received a response from Merionetshire, Wales, saying that the bottle was picked up there on Dec. 20. It took the bottle nearly two years and four months to cross the ocean when picked up.

The odor of whisky was still strong, according to the Welsh preacher who found it.

Osaka Fire Swept.

Osaka, Japan, Jan. 17.—A series of fires which broke out at one o'clock yesterday morning swept unchecked across the southern half of this city, fanned by a strong wind. The conflagration was not under control until late in the afternoon, when, according to official figures, 5,295 buildings had been destroyed and 30,000 persons rendered homeless. During the first four hours the flames consumed more than 1,300 houses.

Sore Chest Croup

You often have pains in the muscles, in the side, the back, the neck, or chest. If the inflammation is severe the pain will be intense.

Nothing so quickly cures local inflammation, so thoroughly drives out pain, as "Nerviline," which is without an equal for penetrating, soothing, pain-relieving power.

Nerviline simply can't fail to cure, because it's a perfect antidote for all the pains and aches that invade the family.

Nerviline

"For ten years we have used Polson's Nerviline in our home," writes Mrs. M. E. Graves of Freeport. "For hard, croupy colds there is nothing better. In case of a chill, sudden cold, or neuralgia, Nerviline cures before the trouble gets serious. I have used Nerviline for chronic rheumatism and lame back and find it a wonderful remedy."

All dealers sell Nerviline in large 25c bottles. Get it to-day.

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skilful. I wrote them and got THE NEW METHOD TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $18 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $31 and never loose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment.

PETERBORO' INTERMEDIATES DEFEAT THE BELLEVILLE TEAM BY A CRICKET SCORE

Score Last Night Was 30 to 1 in Favour of Peterborough—Game Degenerated into a Farce in the Second Half.

SCORE WAS 11 TO 1 AT HALF

The Belleville-Peterborough Intermediate game at Brock Street Rink, last night, was a farce, the homesters winning by the abnormally large score of 30 goals to 1. Hardly seems enough, does it?

Half way home the figures were Peterborough 11, Belleville 1.

The Dead City team scored the first goal, fell around in the road enough to hold Peterborough for five minutes and then faded away to nothing, while the Petes started to score at a rate that would have made a Burrough's adding machine a comfort to the official record-takers. At that the locals did not have to play, nor did they play, gilt-edged hockey to amass those thirty counters. A thousand fans saw the game and their chief interest was in making Irl Hicks' guesses at the size of the score.

There may be worse teams in the O.H.A. than that Belleville aggregation, but for the good name of that august body, it is hoped that there are not many. The seven sleepers from Belleville had nothing but their sticks, and after five minutes' play were dead to the world. In the second half the locals piled up nineteen goals—a score every ninety seconds, and missed some lovely opportunities at that. There were long periods when the rubber did not get any nearer to the Peterborough goal than the face-off spot in the centre, and the defence was hardly needed in the last half, Derocher having nothing to do but take care of a couple of long shots.

The most useful man on the Belleville line-up was Goal-keeper Lafleur, who came in very handy for raking the rubber out of the nets after a score. The game could hardly have got along without him. Wallace, the 200-pound point man had trouble in keeping his feet, and more trouble in regaining them, after he had taken a tumble. Cover-point Connolly was a great convenience as a sign-post to let the Peterborough forwards know they were getting in close, but outside of that it was hard to account for his presence on the ice. Dawkins, at right wing was the only forward to do any work. For Peterborough Park did the most effective, as well as the most spectacular work. The little centre was steaming into the Belleville nets all evening, scoring no less than sixteen goals. At one period he banged in eight counters in succession, which is undoubtedly an O. H. A. record. Four or five times he carried the rubber from the face-off through the Belleville defence for a score, and a similar number of times he went round behind the nets, secured the puck and shoved it round the post for goals. Goal-keeper LaFleur grew very peevish at these tactics, and started a fight in the second half, but Park kept coming in. Kelly and Coughlin got five goals each from the wings and at that they did not exert themselves. Giroux was good while he was on. He retired near half-time with Symons, who was hurt and the game was finished with six men aside. The defence once more showed their calibre. In three games only three goals have been scored against Peterborough, who are yet to be scored upon after half-time. These figures speak well for the great work of the defence.

An extended reference to last night's comedy is not necessary. The appended summary tells the story.

Harry Burgoyne of Toronto, made his initial local appearance, as referee. Worse men have handled the ball here and also better.

The teams lined up as follows:

The Lindsay papers give the Bear Cats full credit for their clever win in Lindsay, although they were very much at fault when they say the Petes had the advantage in weight. The Post says:

Lindsay juniors fell before Peterborough's O.H.A. septette last evening in one of the most exciting hockey matches ever witnessed on local ice. The score was 10-9 and its closeness illustrates the see-saw nature of the struggle. It was a hard game to lose, but credit must be given to the winners, for their victory, as well as the losers for the plucky fight put up.

The teams were pretty evenly matched, although the visitors had it on the locals in weight. Condition and training told, however, and the Petes excelled in this respect. The kiddies have been handled by "King" Dillon and Gene Hurtbuise, the two rugby veterans, and they were trained to the minute. They had the stamina and staying powers and were on to all the tricks of the game. They also followed up splendidly, checked back nicely and took advantage of every opening.

The locals need not feel a bit discouraged over their defeat. They felt the loss of Captain Callaghan keenly but put up a plucky fight to the close. They were up against an aggregation that had been splendidly coached and that appeared to be right at home on the local ice. The Peterborough team ought to have no trouble in disposing of Cobourg and Port Hope on their own ice. How far they can go in the series remains to be seen. Lindsay is practically out of the race, unless the unexpected happens, and has no hesitation in wishing the Petes every success in their championship aspirations.

The Warder has the following:

The Midgets were defeated on their own home pond and there is no use quibbling over the defeat; they lost to a much heavier and better team, the score being 5 to 5 at half time, and 10 to 9 at full time in favour of the Petes.

It was a case of class right through, and the visitors through diligent and systematic training, appear to be in the "pink" and look good for the district honours. On the other hand the local Midgets did not pull together, there being only a faint semblance of combination. The two wing men had a tendency to play too much in centre ice, the result being that when the Petes passed the puck out to the board their wing men got away like shooting stars unopposed and Henley was literally peppered with fierce shots from the side.

Certainly the Electric City brought to Lindsay no feeble, but rather players in good condition and girt for combat; players who were grit to the core. At times the Midgets looked like winners and the forwards swift as panthers in triumph, fierce as a bear in defeat, went at the visiting defence hammer and tongs, but it was no use. The Porridge-eaters were camping on the job with both eyes open and ready to meet the enemy.

All praise to the local juniors, they did their best—what more could be done; they lost to a better team, and have no kick coming. If excuses are in order it might be said that the verdict placed upon Capt. Callaghan by the O.H.A. (and by the way, that august body never did have any particular liking for Lindsay) did the trick for Peterborough and lost the game and perhaps the district, for Lindsay. He was one of the bright and shining stars on the Lindsay team and his absence was greatly felt. Verily, the Lindsay juniors are up against it badly and all that can be done is to grin and bear it.

The Midgets couldn't hope to win in this haphazard system of teamwushing. The Peterborough seven played good combination, mostly of the three-men style, and they had the weight and condition to carry them through to victory.

Peterborough at times were inclined to group in centre, but they were pretty much all over the Midgets, and it didn't matter much. Their style was fast, clever, individual play in magnificent stick handling, especially Hall at centre, until the puck was worked outside the Midget line and then the oatmeal lads swung into line to bear down on the unprotected and easily drawn-out defence. And these lads could shoot hard and fast and notched goals.

The Bear Cats For Port Hope

The Peterborough junior O.H.A. team journeys to Port Hope to-morrow to play an O.H.A. game with the juniors of the Lakeshore town. It is important that the Bear Cats should grab off this contest, and Capt. Hall and his men are going into the game determined to annex another win. The line-up will be as follows:

Goal—Dwyer.
Point—Milloy.
Cover—Kennedy.
Rover—Weir.
Centre—Hall.
Left wing—Claney.
Spare—M. Coughlin.

The team will have a twenty-minute workout at Brock street rink tonight at 7 o'clock in final preparation for the game.

A full attendance is expected.

The team will leave for Port Hope on the 11.45 G.T.R. to-morrow morning.

Curlers Win Out In Toronto

Peterborough curlers are likely aspirants of the Ontario Tankard silverware. They broke even in the game with Bobcaygeon yesterday, Skip Giroux coming out ahead with 13 points, and Skip Lang fell behind by 4 points.

Bobcaygeon and Cannington played last evening and Lindsay and Peterborough clash this afternoon.

Five rinks of Peterborough curlers went to Toronto yesterday afternoon and succeeding in beating the Church street club in a friendly game by 22 shots.

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

The Northern Lights challenge any team in the city, seventeen years of age, or under, to a game of hockey to be played on the Brock street rink as soon as arrangements can be made. For any particulars apply to Fred Bevoy, Captain.

Peterborough's Bear Cats are a lightweight bunch. The average weight of the Junior O. H. A. team is only 135 pounds, the respective weights being as follows:

Dwyer, goal, 156 pounds.
Milloy, point, 133 pounds.
Kennealy, cover, 130 pounds.
Weir, rover, 127 pounds.
Hall, centre, 148 pounds.
Cook, right wing, 118 pounds.
Clancy, left wing, 139 pounds.

The Peterboorough Junior and Intermediate O.H.A. teams are both out in front in their respective groups. Lindsay's unexpected defeat of Trenton last night pretty near settles the hash of Lawson Whitehead's squad, and the battle of the district appears to be between Lindsay and Peterborough. The junior fight is between Cobourg and the Bear Cats, with the latter leading.

Following is the standing:

INTERMEDIATES

	Won	Lost	Goals For	Goals Agst.
Peterborough	3	0	47	3
Lindsay	2	1	21	22
Trenton	1	2	17	24
Belleville	0	6	6	42

JUNIOR

Peterborough	3	0	29	22
Cobourg	2	1	19	13
Lindsay	1	2	26	24
Port Hope	0	3	7	23

Goal—Wilson.
Point—Elliott.
Cover-point—Campbell.
Rover—McPhee.
Centre—Anderson.
Left Wing—Hill.
Spares—Rae, Rose and Allen.

Players are asked to be at Brock St. rink at 7.45.

All Saints and T.A.S. will meet in a Trent Valley League game at Brock street rink to-morrow night. Both teams are strong and the game should be well worth seeing.

Trenton suffered an unexpected trimming on their own ice at the hands of the Lindsay team last night. The score was 7 to 1 in favour of Lindsay.

In a junior game at Cobourg last night, Cobourg defeated Port Hope by 5 goals to 2.

ANOTHER DISMISSAL

WINDSOR, ONT., JAN. 17.—A private wire from Ottawa announced the dismissal of Peter Corbett, Chief of the Immigration staff, and Arsene Dufour, special officer, to go into effect on February 1st. No reason for this action was given although it is suggested as a result of the officials taking part in the recent elections.

A. Austin of Maidstone Township, recommended by Oliver Wilcox, M. P. for North Essex, succeeded Corbett, and Ernest Bondy of Sandwich, West, is to succeed Dufour.

WAS A GREAT SUFFERER FOR FIVE YEARS FROM DYSPEPSIA.

Dyspepsia is one of the most prevalent troubles of civilized life, and thousands of people suffer untold agony after every meal, for nearly everything that enters a weak dyspeptic stomach acts as an irritant.

The long train of distressing symptoms, which render life a burden to the victim of dyspepsia, may be promptly cured by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters. Mrs. Wm. J. Boyne, Lepreau, N.B., writes:—"I thought I would write and tell you of the good Burdock Blood Bitters has done me and also tell you how thankful I am.

"For five years I had been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, and tried different doctors and proprietary medicines, but could get no relief. One day a friend told me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I did not have much faith in it, but I thought I would give it a trial. To-day I am completely cured, and I will always recommend it."

Burdock Blood Bitters has been on the market for about thirty-five years and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

ARE YOU AILING

WEAK AND NERVOUS

To-day the common complaint with weak men and women is lack of kidney vitality. Here you have the cause of your ill-health.

Wouldn't it be wise to use a time-tested remedy like Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they cure that "ailing" feeling in one night. Next morning you feel like new—bright, fresh, and happy. Appetite improves, dull, sallow color grows ruddy and clear, proving that great good is being done by this scientific medicine.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills A Sure Cure

No Appetite—Bad Color—General Debility.

"I was run down," writes Mr. Albert E. Dixon, of Fairhaven P. O. "My color was dull, and appetite was poor, and I constantly suffered from rheumatism.

"I found it hard to sleep and felt worn out and tired all the time. Dr. Hamilton's Pills made an instant change. I grew strong, my blood was restored, rheumatism vanished. To-day I am vigorous, cheery, and healthy in every respect."

Take Dr. Hamilton's Pills when you're well, when you're sick, whenever you think a purifying tonic will do you good. Sold everywhere in yellow boxes. 25c each, or five for $1.00. Insist on having only Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut.

Best Cure For Skin Sores

IS ZAM-BUK

An illustration of the way in which Zam-Buk cures even the most serious and chronic cases of ulcers, eruptions and sores is provided by Mr. R. H. Barker, of Glencairn, Ont. He says:

"I would not have believed that any remedy could cure so quickly, and at the same time so effectively, as Zam-Buk cured me.

"My face became covered with a kind of rash, which itched and irritated. This rash then turned to sores, which discharged freely and began to spread. I first tried one thing and then another, but nothing seemed to do me any good, and the eruption got worse and worse, until my face was just covered with running sores.

"Apart from the pain (which was very bad), my face was such a terrible sight that I was not fit to go out. This was my state when some one advised me to try Zam-Buk. I got a supply, and, marvellous as it may sound, within little under a month, every sore on my face was healed. I was so amazed that I have told the facts to several persons, and I have no objection to your stating my experience for the benefit of other sufferers."

Zam-Buk is purely herbal in composition, and is the ideal balm for babies and young children, for whose tender skin coarse ointments are so dangerous. Zam-Buk is a sure cure for cold sores, chaped hands, frost bite, blood-poison, varicose sores, piles, scalp sores, ringworm, inflamed patches, babies' eruptions and chapped places, cuts, burns, bruises and skin injuries generally. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. Refuse harmful substitutes.

OBITUARY

WILLIAM EYRES.

In the death of Mr. William Eyres, 168 Antrim street, Peterborough has lost one of its most highly respected citizens. The late Mr. Eyres took up residence in this city following his retirement from active labour, as an agriculturist. He was 80 years of age and was born in Cavan Township, where he lived for over 40 years, moving thence to Mariposa, Victoria County, where he resided for a period of twelve years, after which he removed to Peterborough.

In early life Mr. Eyres was united in marriage to Miss Mary Jane Meharry. After a happy union of 49 years, he was left a widower. A few years later he was united in marriage to Miss Cove of Cavan.

He is survived by Mrs. Eyres together with six children. These are Mr. W. T. P. Eyres of Brooks, Alta., Mr. H. C. Eyres of Saskatoon, Mr. F. S. Eyres also of Saskatoon, Mrs. S. H. Might, Calgary, Mrs. J. C. Dafoe, and Mrs. J. J. Rush of Gainsboro, Saskatoon.

In politics, the deceased was a Liberal, and in religion, a Methodist.

Mr. Eyres was chairman of the Board of Health for a number of years, and in that capacity did capable and useful service to the city. He leaves behind him the memory of a life of usefulness, marked by the characteristics that distinguish the highest type of a Christian gentleman and a name held in respect and esteem by all who knew, or knew of him.

The funeral will take place on Friday morning, to Millbrook, via 11.40 (G.T.R.) train. Service will be held at the house, 168 Antrim street, at 10 o'clock. Rev. I. Couch will officiate.

WEDDING BELLS

MOHER—WHIBBS.

St. Paul's church, Lakefield, was the scene of a quiet, but pretty, wedding on Wednesday morning, Jan. 10, at 8 o'clock, when Miss Nellie Whibbs and Mr. Daniel Moher were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by the Rev. F. J. O'Brien. The bride was attired in a plum-coloured suit of French serge and wore a black picture hat with willow plume, and was attended by Miss Mamie O'Keefe of Peterborough, niece of the bride, while Mr. Harold Kennealey of Lakefield, assisted the groom. The wedding march was played by Miss M. Allen, where the wedding breakfast After the ceremony, the bridal party accompanied by a few of their most intimate friends, drove to the home of the bride's brother-in-law, Mr. P. the Queen Alexandra, has left the was served. The presents were numerous and costly, testifying to the high esteem in which the couple were held.

Mr. and Mrs. Moher will reside in Lakefield.

Marriage Is Legal

Special to The Examiner:

Dublin, Ireland, Jan. 17.—The marriage of Usher, a wealthy Galway landlord, to his housemaid and at midnight by a Roman Catholic priest in the presence of only one witness has been declared legal and binding. This is interesting, as the ne temere decree calls for two witnesses.

TORONTO, JAN. 17.—The decision in the Dublin marriage case is very important in view of the Ne Temere decree, as it practically declares that the Ne Temere decree has no effect in Ireland. The young husband was a Protestant until shortly before marrying. The Ne Temere decree says there must be two witnesses.

BAD COLD IN THE CHEST

"I am happy to tell you that I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and was promptly cured of a very bad cold in the chest," writes Miss Josephine Gauthier, Dover South, Ont. OLD AGE PENSIONS

Canada Shall Have System Says J. H. Burnham

NOT NEEDED SAYS WHITE

Ottawa, Jan. 18.—Old-age pensions formed the principal subject of discussion by the House of Commons yesterday afternoon. The matter was brought up by J. H. Burnham (West Peterboro), who moved a resolution calling for a special committee of enquiry. He stated that only 30,000 persons would be under the provisions of such a scheme in Canada.

Hon. W. T. White was sympathetic towards the object, but doubted the wisdom of the inauguration of such a system at the present time. He offered Government annuities as a substitute.

"If you reject old age pension in Canada," said Mr. Burnham, in introducing the matter, "you reject a modern, progressive, scientific substitute for indiscriminate charity and poor relief." The children's aid movement had met with all sorts of objections of similar character to those which were being urged against old age pensions. They said: "Why not let the people alone?" and complained that it meant spending a vast amount of money. This objection ignored the offset of relief from the enormous burden of indiscriminate charity which now rested on the people.

In Canada, said Mr. Burnham, no more than 30,000 persons would come under an old age pension scheme. There were, of course, more than that number over 70 years of age, but no old age pension system would contemplate payment to persons who were not in need of it.

Such a scheme, he urged, could only be worked adequately and without waste by the Government. In Germany, England and, he believed shortly in the United States, Canada had examples which she could not afford to set aside.

Hon. W. T. White expressed sympathy with the object of Mr. Burnham's resolution. There was no spectacle which appealed to their pity more than that of impoverished old age. The real question, as far as Canada was concerned, was whether the conditions warranted legislation of that sort and whether public opinion was sufficiently educated to it. So far as he was aware there had been no agitation in the press or elsewhere for old age pensions in Canada. In Great Britain the establishment of old age pensions was preceded by an agitation extending almost over a generation.

There was much to be said in favor of that legislation in England where employment was very precarious and where sweated industries and excessive drinking also were frequent causes of impoverishment.

"I think," said Mr. White, "that if we admit that a pension should be given to the man who had served the state on the battlefield, that man who has lived a sober, honest, industrious life should be made an allowance sufficient at least to meet the necessities of existence, if the conditions warrant it."

In Canada, however, there was little or none of non-employment, the old were well cared for by their sons and daughters, there were very few sweated industries, and, with reasonable thrift, a sober and honest artisan could raise his family and provide for his old age. In case of sickness he was well taken care of by provincial and municipal charity.

He did not think that old age pensions had operated, in countries where they had been tried, to impair thrift.

He drew the attention of the House, however, to the Government annuities system, which he thought might render the proposed pension unnecessary.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux: "How many persons have availed themselves of these annuities?"

Hon. Geo. E. Foster: "A very fair number."

Alphonse Verville (Maisonneuve) was for pensions always. Judges and civil servants, who were paid high salaries, received pensions. Why should not the poor man receive old age assistance?

W. F. Nickle (Kingston) made his maiden speech in the Commons yesterday. He did not hold with the argument of the Minister of Finance, that there had been no agitation in Canada for old age pensions, such as had taken place in England. In regard to this economic question. Owing to the movement from the country to the city and the establishment of great centralized industries with the striving for cheapened cost of production, the man who could no longer do a fair day's work was turned out.

"We have got beyond the days of individualism," said Mr. Nickle, "this is the day of a so-called socialism; not the socialism that takes from a man what he has, but which guarantees for every man a chance.

"If men's lives and limbs are to be sacrificed on the altar of cheaper production, then they must also be taken into account in reckoning the cost of production."

Dr. Clarke (Red Deer) denied that individualism was extinct. He was not in favor of pensions, though, if they were to be paid, there was better excuse for giving them to the poor man to the rich.

They should be extremely careful of embarking on this scheme merely because it had been adopted in Great Britain where there were 580 persons to the square mile, as against 1 3-4 in Canada.

Port Hope Agricultural Society.

Port Hope, Jan. 18.—The annual meeting of the Agricultural Society for this district was held in the Town Hall on Jan. 17, at which the following officers were elected: Hon. president, John Hume, Barlow Cumberland, J. A. Culverwell and Mayor Mulholland; presidents, Wm. Davidson; vice-presidents, A. E. Meadows and W. H. Symons; directors, Fred. White, Wm. Berry, S. O. Taylor, W. G. Noble, Geo. Bamsey, H. C. Weatherspoon, W. A. Walker, Wm. O'Hara, R. A. Weston; secretary-treasurer, A. Walker.

Irish Players Arrested.

Philadelphia, Jan. 18.—Warrants for the arrest of every member of the cast of "The Play Boy of the Western World," were served yesterday afternoon and bail entered for a hearing before a magistrate. The players are charged with "Taking part in a theatrical performance of an immoral character, or which might tend to corrupt morals." The warrants were sworn to by Irishmen, who were opposed to the production.

Hockey Spectator Hurt.

Barrie, Jan. 18.—While watching a hockey game last night from the penalty box, John Barr, manager of the Barrie Carriage Co., was knocked to the ground by a blow under the left eye from the puck, which inflicted an ugly wound and necessitated his being taken to his home.

Lady Laurier Ashore.

Halifax, N.S., Jan. 18.—The Dominion Government steamer Lady Laurier is ashore at Perry Point, about 25 miles from Barrington. The steamer had been on the western shore on lighthouse work for the Department of Marine. She entered Barrington harbor Tuesday and several hours later started for Halifax, when she struck bottom. Soon the engine room was flooded so that it was decided to beach the steamer, and she was headed for Perry Point, where she was grounded on a muddy bottom with six feet of water in the hold.

PEACE IS AT HAND

Premiers Agree to Republican Guarantees of Safety

DISTURBANCE IN MONGOLIA

Nanking, Jan. 18.—It is believed that the negotiations looking to a peaceful settlement are approaching a conclusion. The formal document has been drawn up for signature, and Tang Shao Yi has been exchanging telegrams with President Sun Yat Sen. It is understood that they have finally agreed concerning guarantees.

Certain Republicans positively decline to accept Yuan Shi Kai as President of the republic in place of Dr. Sun, but the former may hold the Premiership in the Provisional Government, and, when peace is restored and the constitution drawn up, Yuan Shi Kai may have an opportunity to secure his election. Dr. Sun, however is persisting in his determination to retire.

The President yesterday declared that no loans had been contracted by the Republicans.

Princes Accept.

Shanghai, Jan. 18.—Tang Shao Yi has received a telegram from Pekin that as a result of yesterday's discussions the Imperial princes are unanimously in favor of the acceptance of the Republican terms. The Mongolian contingent raised some difficulties, which, however, are thought to be surmountable. It is reported that the Republicans hope now to raise a loan in the United States on security of various Wu Chang properties.

Five steamers with troops aboard are lying at Woo Sung, above Shanghai, under orders to proceed to Chi Fu.

Unrest in Mongolia.

Pekin, Jan. 18.—The revolutionary movement in Mongolia is making considerable progress. According to consular despatches received here, the seizure of the Manchurian town of Khaifar by the revolutionaries and the proclamation of autonomy of Mongols of that region are confirmed. The Imperial troops stationed in the town did not offer any opposition.

The Russian railway guards, who have formed a cordon around the Russian settlement and railway station in Khailar for some weeks past, have permitted some of the Manchus to take refuge there.

Frequent reports reach Pekin that the Mongols have taken cities sometimes with and sometimes without opposition.

The attitude of the Republicans in connection with the loss of provinces hitherto attached to the empire is being watched with considerable interest by foreign observers.

In Russian circles it is contended that there is danger of a great and really modern army being organised by the Republican Government, but doubt is expressed by the military attaches of other foreign nations that the Russian statesmen really fear such an occurrence.

There seems to be a desire on the part of the British and Japanese Governments to prevent any anti-Russian press campaign at the present moment in view of the possibility of a partition of China, but in diplomatic circles here it is generally recognized that China has lost the right to retain vast territories which she has proved herself incapable of developing.

Field Crop Winners.

Ottawa, Jan. 18.—The prize winners in the Ontario standing field crop competitions were announced yesterday. They are:

Oats—First prize, Geo. Brown, Millbrook; second prize, Geo. Bopse, Merivale; third, W. G. Wilson, Woodville.

Barley—First prize, S. E. Bonisteel, Frankford; second, D. I. Rose, Frankford.

Wheat—First prize, Samuel McMillan, Cobden; second, John Ireton, Queen's Line.

Potatoes—First, F. W. Walker, Royston; second, Jas. Reid, Ozdrift; third, William Jenkin, Emsdale.

One hundred and four agricultural societies, 1,800 farmers and 28,000 acres were judged by sixty judges sent out by the Ontario Department of Agriculture for this competition.

Snow Helps Settlement.

London, Jan. 18.—No new developments in the labor disputes occurred last night. The sudden appearance of severe wintry weather, covering the country with snow, is considered a factor on the side of a peaceful settlement of both the cotton and coal troubles. Many operatives in Lancashire were already suffering distress because of the loss of wages, and charitable institutions are busy affording relief.

The severe weather will greatly increase the suffering, but at the same time will dispose the operatives to acceptance of a compromise.

U. S. PREPARED.

Everything Is Ready For Intervention In Cuba.

Washington, Jan. 18.—While officials of the army do not expect actual intervention in Cuba as a result of the message sent Tuesday, they are ready.

As a result of the painstaking work of American officers during the last period of occupation in Cuba almost every inch of the island has been surveyed and explored; every road and trail is known and mapped and it would be quite impossible for any guerilla force to operate successfully against American soldiers as did the Cuban patriots against the Spaniards. Outside of that special work the general staff has not found it necessary to prepare any plans for the despatch of a military expedition with Cuba as the sole objective.

Transportation service for a preliminary invading army of approximately 4,980 men is available for immediate use in the United States army transports Meade, Kilpatrick, Sumner and McClelland. These vessels are now lying at Newport News in readiness for immediate service.

In addition to the regular transports, it would be necessary to charter merchant vessels for the transportation of horses to be used in a campaign. But officials of the army declare that they do not anticipate any trouble in obtaining ships for this purpose.

Legislature Opens Feb. 7.

Toronto, Jan. 18.—Wednesday, Feb. 7, is the date of the official opening of the Ontario Legislature. Sir James Whitney made the announcement yesterday afternoon. The Premier did not give any intimation as to who the new Speaker will be, but it is expected that the mantle will fall upon William H. Hoyle, M.P.P. from North Ontario. Mr. Hoyle's home is in Cannington, and he has been a member of the Legislature since 1898. A lot of interesting legislation, or would-be legislation, will be under discussion at the coming session. Red-hot arguments and rapid-fire passages-at-arms are anticipated. The political issues before the two parties in the recent election will be comparatively fresh topics for debate on the floor of the House. Among the questions that are to be threshed out will be: Bilingual schools, the daddy of 'em all; the Hydro-electric policy, the Ne Temere decree, temperance issues, immigration, good roads and colonization roads, and the bill to provide compensation for injured workmen. Looming up larger and larger as the days go by is also the big question of the development of New Ontario, a proposition second to none in importance. To deal adequately with this question there will have to be more than politics. It will require statesmanship of the highest order.

G.T.R. Brakeman Killed.

Toronto, Jan. 18.—William Deacon, 40 years of age, a brakeman on the G.T.R., whose home was in Stratford, Ont., was crushed and killed between an engine and a freight car at a switch at the foot of Portland street at eight o'clock last night.

Deacon had come down with his train from Stratford and after the passengers had been let off at the Union Station it was being hauled back into the yards. As it approached the switch, Deacon was standing on the side of the engine. The car, which stood on a track, which also ran into the switch, was sufficiently into its own track to let the engine pass, but not the man who was crushed between it and the engine.

The body was removed to the morgue where Coroner J. M. Cotton will hold an inquest.

Dislikes Word "Colonial."

London, Jan. 18.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Arthur Hawkes, emigration commissioner, told a Colonial Institute gathering yesterday he had rather be called a German than a colonial. This was in deprecation of the idea sometimes apparent here that there is an inferiority in the overseas Government compared with the Home Government, which was especially resented in Canada owing to the proximity of the United States, where the boast of emancipation used to be heard.

To Testify Against Packers.

Chicago, Jan. 18.—New interest was added to the trial of the Chicago packers yesterday when Walter A. Wall, formerly an employe of Morris & Co., arrived here, prepared to take the stand against the defendants as one of the Government's witnesses.

Wall was former branch house manager for Morris & Co., at East St. Louis, Ill., and St. Joseph, Mo., and is said to have an intimate knowledge of the details of the packers' business methods.

Britain's Y.M.C.A. Campaign.

London, Jan. 18.—With the close of the campaign to raise £100,000 in aid of the Young Men's Christian Association five days "off, energies have been redoubled. The total now is 26,347 pounds, but there is an air of confidence among the collectors, due to hints of large donations to come.

The stock exchange has taken up the matter, and large subscriptions are expected from a body of man noted for their generosity.

UNIONISTS ARE HOSTILE

They Plan to Prevent Winston Churchill's Meeting

TO STIFLE FREE SPEECH

Belfast, Ireland, Jan. 18.—Arrangements made by the Unionists to freeze out Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, at his intended demonstration in favor of home rule, which is to take place here on Feb. 8, include the bivouacking of 5,000 stalwarts inside Ulster Hall some days in advance of the meeting. They will have orders to hold the hall against all comers.

Anti-home rulers are to be brought in the city on special trains on the day of the meeting and it is anticipated that 75,000 of them will be available for picket duty in order to block all the approaches to Ulster Hall or any other possible meeting place.

Stocking Tactics Condemned.

London, Jan. 18.—The decision of the Ulster Unionists to prevent the home rule meeting at Belfast, Feb. 8, has placed the Unionist party in something like a dilemma. Even in Ulster a large body of the loyalists agree that the decision was ill-advised, while several influential Conservative papers condemn the attempt thus to stifle free speech as calculated to do the loyal cause more harm than good.

They admit that thus challenged it would be cowardice on the part of Mr. Churchill to draw back now, and since it can only be supposed that serious rioting would be the outcome of the meeting at Belfast, they hope the promoters of the affair will withdraw their invitation to Mr. Churchill and thus avert serious danger.

Quebec's Road Plans.

Quebec, Jan. 18.—Yesterday afternoon at the sitting of the House, Hon. Mr. Taschereau, Minister of Public Works, outlined the system of public highways upon which the Government propose to guarantee a loan of $10,000,000, which sum will be available for the towns and municipalities of the province, on payment of half the interest rate of two per cent.

The Minister declared that the project included the macadamizing of four highways between Montreal and Quebec, two on the north and two on the south shore, of a highway from Quebec to the United States boundary by way of Sherbrooke and Beauce County, of a highway from Quebec to Gaspe, and of a highway from Quebec to Tadousac.

Mr. Taschereau added that they contemplated a macadamized roadway from Montreal to Sherbrooke, one from Montreal to Ottawa, and another roadway from Montreal in the American border. He declared that the $10,000,000 which was to be placed at the disposal of municipalities of the province would enable them to construct 3,300 miles of roads.

Two Killed in Wreck.

Martinsville, Ind., Jan. 18.—Two men were killed and six others injured, one probably fatally, when a limited interurban car, outbound from Indianapolis, on the Indianapolis and Martinsville line, ran head-on into a work train four miles out of Martinsville, yesterday afternoon.

The dead are: Thomas Weddle of Martinsville, section foreman of Interurban line; Merle Apple of Martinsville, conductor on work train.

B. Caldwell, Brooklyn, motorman in the limited car, had his back and head injured and will probably die.

The exact cause of the collision is not known. The work train was standing on a siding at Riverside curve when the limited, which was trying to make up lost time, ran into it.

Jessamine a Paranoiac?

Toronto, Jan. 18.—If T. C. Robinette, K.C., is successful in having the death sentence passed upon Joseph Jessamine commuted to life imprisonment, he will have established a precedent in the abating of the life penalty on grounds of insanity in Canada, for the peculiar description of insanity with which Jessamine is said to be affected is one upon which commutation has not yet been made in this country. He is said to be a paranoiac, which is the case with the notorious Harry K. Thaw, which is to say that he suffers from an irresistible impulse to kill, while conscious of the criminal nature of the act. Jessamine has not been told of the decision of the Court of Appeal that he must die.

Couldn't Rejoin Army.

Glatz, Prussian Silesia, Jan. 18.—The commandant of the fortress here is reported to have declared that Capt. B. F. Trench, who attempted to commit suicide on Jan. 15, has explained his attempt by asserting that he had received notification from his superiors that he would not be allowed either to enter the army or navy after his release.

Capt. Trench was serving a four-year term of imprisonment in the fortress, having been convicted of espionage upon the German fortification at Borkum in 1910. After the escape of Capt. Lux, the French officer, who was imprisoned in the same fortress on a similar charge, Capt. Trench's guards were doubled, but, despite this, he contrived to make a rope, and nearly succeeded in ending his life.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

It is likely that a bill will be introduced in the Commons this season providing for stringent regulations in regard to pure food.

A caucus of the Quebec Government was held yesterday, at which it is understood the question of provincial elections was discussed. Nothing is expected before 1913.

A representative of the Gideons' Society of the Commercial Travelers' Association was in Berlin yesterday and placed in the nine hotels two hundred copies of the Bible.

Four persons are known to have been killed and another is believed to be dead as a result of an explosion in a mine of the Central City Coal & Iron Co. at Central City, Ky., yesterday.

George Sime, while entering his house at Grand Valley yesterday with a gun in his hand, slipped on the step, causing the gun to go off and inflicting such serious wounds that he died in a few minutes.

Two Finns, John Nanto and O. Henderson, were killed and five others injured at the Canadian Northern Railway construction camp Tuesday, 4 miles northeast of Minaki, by drilling into an unexploded charge.

A serious accident occurred at the Imperial Opera House, St. Petersburg, yesterday afternoon. During a rehearsal the floor collapsed, and twenty of the female members of the chorus were taken from the wreckage badly hurt.

What Value Do You Put On Your Eyesight?

We have people come to us after they have tried all kinds of cheap Glasses, bought from some house to house fakir, or picked out of an assortment of "cheap glasses" in a haphazard way. In buying glasses to suit your Sight, you cannot afford to take any chance. The small difference of price should not be considered when the question of Eyesight is involved. Remember we guarantee all our work, and our prices are very reasonable, considering the quality of goods we handle.

DOCTORS FAILED TO HELP HER

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Pound, Wis.—"I am glad to announce that I have been cured of dyspepsia and female troubles by your medicine. I had been troubled with both for fourteen years and consulted different doctors, but failed to get any relief. After using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier I can say I am a well woman. I can't find words to express my thanks for the good your medicine has done me. You may publish this if you wish." —Mrs. HERMAN SIXTH, Pound, Wis.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills, and suffering women owe it to themselves to at least give this medicine a trial. Proof is abundant that it has cured thousands of others, and why should it not cure you?

If you want special advice write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. It is free and always helpful.

"THE SECRET OF PAUL FARLEY"

By JOHN MARCH

"Laugh by all means," she said, with a quietness that was more formidable than any violence, "I can wait until your mirth has subsided. Up here, away from the world, alone with you, I can wait until the crack of doom."

"Wait for what?" he asked, beginning to stamp his foot.

"For your decision. Once again, Paul Farley, will you marry me?"

"No," he said, standing erect, in calm composure. "I will not, and nothing on earth shall make me."

"Then you take the consequences of your refusal?" she asked, throwing out her arms as if freeing her self from imaginary bonds.

"Will you tell me the consequences that I may get it over quickly?" he asked, inclined to smile at her dramatic gestures.

"I'll show you," she said, going to the untapestried recess and taking some object from a table patterned with rich mosaic work. "This little friend has stood me in good stead before to-day."

"Mrs. Wycherly," he shouted, springing towards her, "for heaven's sake don't act like a mad woman!"

"Keep back," she commanded, in a hoarse, warning voice, "or I'll kill you outright."

He stood still, fascinated, his eyes on hers, staring at her strange beauyt. He did not for a moment doubt her, it was no idle boast, the woman was in deadly earnest.

"I don't know whether you are afraid of death," she said in a voice so altered and distorted that it terrified him to listen to her, "but I am not. I would rather lie peacefully in my coffin than drag out a long, solitary, miserable existence. I have suffered enough, as much as a human heart can bear before the ultimate, the final breakdown. My bodily health all along has been good, but in mind I have been ill, terribly ill, and now that this crisis has come and death is at my elbow, it's not so very dreadful to go away with him."

"Mrs. Wycherly," he whispered, his heart in his throat, "you can't mean to do yourself a mischief? You won't surely do anything so wild and wicked. You say you love me, and yet you would embitter my life with the poisoned knowledge that I had been the cause of your awful, irreparable sin."

She smiled, a pitying smile, as if she felt a great compassion for his simplicity.

"I am not going to leave you behind a prey either to remorse or as booty for Agnes Fleming, or any other woman vulture who may cross your path. I shall send you first, and wherever you go I shall follow. I mean to keep alongside of you, Paul, whether it be here in the quiet country lanes of Weyberne, or through the misty, interminable space of some other sphere. If the choice rested with me I would rather have you in the flesh—there could be no two opinions about that, and feeling so strongly on that point, I'll give you a further grace of three minutes to decide whether you will take me as your wife, and with me sufficient gold to purchase all that the world can give or the heart desire, or to lie there, a corpse, across this carpet."

Their eyes travelled simultaneously to a handsome ormolu clock on a bracket, and as they looked, it gave a startling whirr, chimed, and struck twelve.

"The witching hour of midnight!" she said, with a soft laugh, lowering her arm a morsel, so that the nozzle of the pistol covered the region of his heart, and then a silence settled over the room, which fell thicker, heavier, and deadlier as the minutes ticked themselves out.

Faintly, at intervals, he could hear the deeply-toned, long-drawn notes of the bass viol. They were dancing again, his friends, flirting, laughing, joking, all unconscious of his peril. He grew sorry for himself, intensely sorry for his lonely position, for the solitude that encompassed him. But in and out, weaving its way through all the powerful, vivid emotions that crowded about him, came a new horror which stood out like a golden light in a dark forest, hung like a blood-red moon above a snowy landscape, it drained the strength from his quavering knees, and dried the warm juicy sap bounding through his veins—the horror of the shattering of his grand intellect!

A familiar face, handsome, strong, and capable, swam past his smarting eyeballs, and was swallowed by the recess. "Felix," he breathed inwardly, "where are you, Felix? Oh, heavens, send that strong man, send his clear brain, his plain commonsense, his sturdy understanding." His mind became permeated with Felix. Would Felix come—would Felix save him—what would Felix do in his place? What would he advise? Should he accept any sort of compromise as a respite and trust to Felix, afterwards to—could Felix—Felix——"

"Will you have me for your wife, Paul?"

Her voice seemed to come from a long way off. A second elapsed before the sense of her words penetrated his brain. He quivered, hesitated, drew the back of his hand across his eyes, looked from the clock to the beautiful woman holding a swift, sudden death in her white hand, and said, "Yes."

Her arm dropped to her side, the weapon slid to the skin rug. The fateful interview had come to a close, the strain was over, her face was ashen white, all her varied, fitful, feverish, excited mannerism had gone; she looked like one to whom some long expected event had at last happened. She went to him, clasped her arms round him, drew his head to her, kissed his damp forehead and both his cheeks.

"You shall never regret it, Paul," she said tenderly, stroking his smooth, dark hair. "I will be so good to you. I won't be jealous or exacting; you shall do as you like, and when once we are married I shall always be ready to supply you with the means to——"

"Thank you," he said, gently, "but you must let me go now—I have already neglected several partners."

"Kiss me, then," she said, turning up her face, an elf-smile in her bewitching eyes.

He stooped and kissed her on the lips. She clung to him with a sudden gust of passion as if the contact of her lips had added fuel to the flame burning beneath the heave and swell of her perfect bosom.

"You'll marry me soon, won't you, Paul?" she asked, letting him go reluctantly.

"We'll talk of that another day," he said decisively, "your duty now is to your guests."

"I mean to love, honour, and obey," she said, with a joyous laugh, "so I'll commence being obedient at once."

She drew a tiny silver whistle from the body of her gown, communicating a subtle, cautious meaning to her summons. His acute, sensitive ear caught the slight grating of the turning lock, and before she fully realized his purpose, he bowed, strode to the door, opened it, dashed past the stalwart yellow statue, and leaped down the stairs like a deer.

Meanwhile Felix, after a long and unsuccessful search for Paul, promptly found Agnes another partner, and went away to solace himself with a third cigar. He was leaning against the wall in the corridor, leisurely smoking and watching the bustling servants, the sauntering, thronging, light-hearted couples, his keen eyes on the lookout for a dark, refined, intellectual face, when suddenly and unexpectedly, he saw his renegade friend come bounding down the stairs.

"Hello, there, Farley!" he exclaimed, stepping forward too late to intercept his rapid progress.

"What on earth's the matter?" he asked himself, staring at the open doorway through which Paul had disappeared into the night. "The fellow came down that stairway as if the devil himself were behind him." And without more ado he followed him out into the grounds.

The Squire's eyes were strong and long-sighted, and used to scanning uncertain objects on dark nights in all weathers, and without the aid of the moon through the rifted clouds he could have discerned Paul's white shirt-front against the background of sable landscape. He was on the further side of the huge sweep of lawn, sitting on a rustic bench, his arms folded, his chin on his breast.

"What cheer? Anything special on the carpet?" he asked with jaunty indifference, sitting down beside him, and taking a good steady look at his pale face.

"I—I'm not well, perhaps I've danced too much, anyway don't bother me, Felix," he said deprecatingly, putting a shaky hand on his shoulder.

It was the first time he had used his Christian name, and Felix made a mental note of it.

"But you won't stay here without hat or coat?" he inquired, "you're not used to an outdoor life, you'll take cold."

"No, I'll—I think I'll go home. Would you mind fetching my cap and Inverness?" he asked diffidently. "I would rather not return to the house."

"Certainly, I will," he said, jumping up with alacrity. "Can I do anything else for you? What will you have to take? I daresay I can smuggle a halfbottle of champagne, or Rhine wine if you prefer it. Sir Thomas and I split a bottle of dry hock of really a very decent bouquet, would you——"

"Don't bring me anything, it would choke me," he protested. "This lovely fresh wind is stimulant enough."

"Delicious!" Felix breathed, moving off, then returning a few steps, he said: "Report says, Farley, that our charming hostess has some genuine Tokay in her wine-bin—pure blood of the grape, you know—so genuine and desirable that connoisseurs of the vineyard have offered her $180 a dozen for her hoard. If Mrs. Wycherly only knew your knees were jostling one another and your teeth chattering she would doubtless gather up her flimsy skirts, beard the spiders in their webs, and dive into the bowels of her cavernous cellar for your sole and entire delectation."

He said it jestingly, with no other design or motive than to rally his desponding friend, but Paul, watching him over the grass, knew that the gist of his innocent remark was the essence of truth, soon to be an embodied fact, and he groaned aloud in his impotence to do aught save wait on events.

He looked up at the firmament, and as he did so a star shot across it and appeared to drop into the misty swamp of the marshes. Presently another followed suit, and then another in quick succession. He sat watching the sky and musing, when suddenly the phenomena presented a simple soothing suggestion, a way to settle a point that had teased him for the last ten minutes.

"If I see another shooting star before Felix returns I'll take it as a good omen, and tell him now to-night without troubling to think the matter out first. If not I'll keep it to my—"

Felix touched him before he was aware of his approach. The phenomena had not had time to repeat itself, and the few spare stars in the dark heavens twinkled palely as if assuring him they had no intention of falling from their high estate."

"You've been quick," he said.

"I meant to be," Felix rejoined briskly. "Get up, that vapoury moisture hovering above the marshland will wet you to the skin in no time."

He rose somewhat stiffly, and swayed as if he were not quite sober.

"I don't think there's much amiss with you beyond a touch of vertigo," Felix said in a casual way, helping with his coat, "but, I say, my dear fellow, if ever you are in any trouble, if ever you should need any sort of help—I don't care whether it is pecuniary or otherwise—or any advice, where an older man can trot out his experience for the benefit of the younger, you know where to look for a staunch friend who'll be proud and gratified to do his level best for you."

"Thank you," he said huskily, "I know you would," he groped about a moment, found and wrung his hand.

"Would you like me to walk back with you" Felix asked.

"No, thanks; I would rather be alone," he said, withdrawing his hand a trifle forcibly from the Squire's detaining clasp and turning on his heel, "good-night, and thank you."

"Better so," he said himself, twisting a silk wrapper round his throat, "better tell Agnes first, a woman's wits—I'll think it out carefully, sleep on it, and see what sort of an aspect the wretched business wears to-morrow. The mischief take the craggy jade!"

CHAPTER XII.

The Paragraph in the Papers.

It was eight o'clock, the breakfast hour at the Manor House.

Felix sat in his accustomed place at the foot of the table, the Morning Post propped against the silver dish cover in front of him. Four hours back they were dancing at The Larches, and now the October sunlight streamed into the parlour, putting the Squire's cheerful fire to the blush. Agnes was not yet at her post behind the cosy, so Felix had poured out a cup of coffee, helped himself to a couple of rashers of bacon and one or two fine mushrooms. Two letters lay beside his plate, which he turned over with some curiosity, opened, and read while he ate.

The first was rather a humble, but withal a manly, honest, straightforward epistle from Dr. Hunter, asking permission to pay his addresses to Agnes. The second was an anonymous one, ill-spelt and curiously worded. It informed him that young Mr. Farley, up at the Hall, was courting a certain gent.'s sister, that they did their billing and cooing under the eaves of a disused mouldy summer house, reeking with dry and damp rot, and moreover, it was possible, highly probable, the little love-birds would chirrup there on the next evening.

"A droll idea that!" he muttered, as the door opened to admit Agnes.

He smiled to himself, and threw a fine glance of trustful affection towards her as she seated herself at the breakfast table.

"You're a sensible girl, Aggie, and generally able to bring things into their proper focus. Read that, and tell me your opinion of it," he said, tossing Dr. Hunter's letter into her lap.

The other, whose skulking author was hitting in the dark, and for the nonce hitting harmlessly, he smoothed out, put carefully and deliberately into its flimsy envelope, slipped it into his breast pocket, and went on with his breakfast, resuming his perusal of the leading article from where he left off at the last break.

"Hum!" he remarked, sotto voce, for no one's special benefit, "these daily records of casualties and series of mishaps, the lack of foresight and inability on our side, present the uncomfortable suggestion that the British Army is degenerating into merely a home profession for our wealthier classes."

He took a piece of toast from the rack, buttered it, turned the paper, and leaned it back again in its former position upon the cover. He bent forward, crunching the crisp, dry crust, running a keen, quick eye over the fresh page, until a paragraph containing several familiar names caught his attention and arrested further progress.

A sharp, short exclamation and a low peculiar whistle, indicative of dismay or astonishment, caused Agnes to lift a flushed face and eyelashes fringed with suspicious moisture.

"Why, Felix," she said, surprised, "how funny you look! I mean you look flabby, liverish, out of sorts."

"Caught Farley's complaint, no doubt," he said, with an uneasy laugh. "He was a bit bowled over last night, or rather this morning. By the way, Agnes, I don't think I've heard you express an opinion one way or the other about that young man. How do you like him? What do you think of him?"

"I like him very much," she said, heartily and naturally. "I took to him the first time I saw him."

"You thought him a well-behaved, clever fellow, cultivated manners, and all that sort of thing; no humbug, eh?"

"Yes, I did, and I think so now," she said, smiling.

"Did it ever strike you there was anything between him and Mrs. Wycherly?"

"Never. He has told me more than once he disliked her. If there had been I'm certain you would have known of it."

"I'm not so sure, he is very reserved, a young man evidently who can keep his own counsel, as to-day's paper can certify."

"Is there anything about him in the paper?" she asked with interest; "I expect he's done something horribly, gloriously clever."

The Best Way To Make Porridge

EVERY housewife has a little different way of making porridge.

Some wet the oats in cold water first, others stir the oats into boiling water. Some prefer porridge very thick, others thin it out; some like it flaky, others like it jellied.

All these ways can't be the best way.

We think there is one best way—that's the Tillson's way.

Here it is:—

Put one and two-thirds cupfuls of boiling water in the inner part of a double boiler. Have the water boiling briskly, sprinkle in one cupful of Tillson's Rolled Oats slowly, so as not to stop the boiling of the water. Add one-third teaspoonful of salt, cover, cook one minute, then place the inner saucepan in the outer in which the water should be boiling. Cook fourteen minutes. Avoid all stirring as this breaks the oats and makes the porridge pasty.

Just out of curiosity get a package of Tillson's Rolled Oats and make your porridge this way for two or three mornings. See if you don't decide that of all the ways of making porridge, this way produces the tastiest results.

Teacher Cured of Barber's Itch

Tells of Cures Among His Pupils That Were Remarkable

Raw, Inflamed, Itching Skin is Soothed and Healed by

Dr. Chase's Ointment

Barber's Itch is a form of Ringworm, which, when once started, is most annoying and unsightly, and most difficult to cure. Barbers often refuse to shave anyone having this disease, for fear of passing it on to other customers.

But you can cure Barber's Itch and keep the skin wonderfully soft, and healthy by applying Dr. Chase's Ointment. Just read what this teacher has to say about the healing power of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Chas. C. Poirier, Upper Caraquet, N. B., writes: "Two years ago while teaching at Shippegan I caught Barber's Itch. A friend told me Dr. Chase's Ointment would cure me, as it had him. When I went for a box I thought it dear, but when I found how good it was I thought it cheap.

"Not only was I cured by that single box, but it also cured two of my pupils, and this too quickly to be believed. One of them, a girl, had a running sore on the chin, which the doctor had tried in vain to cure. The other had a sore on the ear; water running out of it all the time. I can certify to the cure of these cases."

Wherever there is itching skin or a sore that refuses to heal you can apply Dr. Chase's Ointment with positive assurance that the results will be entirely satisfactory. The soothing, healing power of this great ointment is truly wonderful. 60c a box, at all dealers, or Edmandson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

NASAL CATARRH

Responsible for Much Deafness, Hoarseness, Bronchitis and Stomach Trouble.

Medicated Air Will Cure

These are common diseases, but not less dangerous and difficult to cure on that account. In our climate the weather changes quickly. We are careless. Disease attacks us before we know it. A large majority of our people have nose, lung, or throat troubles, and find it hard to get cured.

It's remarkable with what tenacity both the medical profession and the lait. adhere to the old theory that these diseases can be reached and combated by dosing. And this despite the fact that failure to cure in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred attends this mode of treatment.

STOMACH MEDICINE CAN'T CURE.

At best it is a roundabout way of trying to reach the disease which is in the air passages of the throat, nose, bronchial tubes and lungs. Leave the stomach alone—use a remedy that air will carry into the minutest air cells, into the tiniest cavities of the affected organs.

LIQUID REMEDIES DANGEROUS.

Doctors say only "Catarrhozone" can cure—you inhale it along with the air you breath—it goes where the living disease germs are gnawing into your system—it kills these germs—it heals, soothes. It CURES.

CATARRHOZONE GUARANTEED.

Wouldn't it be wise to use Catarrhozone now—to-day—and be cured permanently?

You can send the soothing vapor of the pine woods, the richest balsams and healing essences, right to the cause of your trouble by inhaling Catarrhozone.

Little drops of wonderful curative power are distributed through the whole breathing apparatus in two seconds.

Like a miracle, that's how Catarrhozone works in bronchitis, catarrh, colds, and irritable throat. You simply breath its oily, fragrant vapor and every trace of congestion and disease flees as before fire.

So safe, infants can use it; so sure to cure, doctors prescribe it, so beneficial in preventing winter ills, no person can afford to do without Catarrhozone. Used in thousands of cases without failure. Try it yourself" 25c, 50c, $1.00 sizes. Sold by all dealers, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

SEEN AND HEARD

BEAUTY TELLS.

Miss Amelia Bingham, president of the Professional Women's League, said at a recent luncheon in New York:

"Times are changing for the better, but in our sex it is still the pretty and frivolous that succeeds rather than the sensible and hard-working.

"I recall the story of the Gerton girls. The four Gerton girls were all good-looking; indeed, the three younger ones were beautiful; while Annie, the eldest, easily made up in capability and horse sense what she lacked in looks.

"A young chap, very eligible, called on the girls frequently, but seemed unable to decide which to marry. So Annie put on her thinking cap, and, one evening when the young chap called, she appeared with her pretty arms bare to the elbow and her hands white with flour.

"'Oh, you must excuse my appearance,' she said. 'I have been working in the kitchen all day. I baked bread and pies and cake this morning, and afterward, as the cook was ill, I prepared dinner.'

"'Miss Annie, is that so?' said the young man. He looked at her deeply impressed. Then, after a moment's thought, he said:

"'Miss Annie, there is a question I wish to ask you, and on your answer will depend much of my life's happiness.'

"'Yes?' she said, with a blush, and she drew a little nearer. 'Yes? what is it?'

"'Miss Annie,' said the young man, in deep, earnest tones, 'I am thinking of proposing to your sister Kate—will you make your home with us?'"—New York Times.

STARTING WITH NOTHING.

Dr. John T. M. Johnstone, president of the National Reserve Bank of Kansas City, at a recent meeting of the directors of that bank, arose and asked that each one present who had begun business with a capital of $10,000 stand up. There were 25 directors of the bank in the room, and their wealth would aggregate $20,000,000. Not a man of the 25 arose.

Dr. Johnston then put another proposition. He said:

"Each man of you who had $5,000 with which to begin business stand up."

The 25 directors looked around at each other, but not one of them stood up.

"Each of you who had $1,000 stand up," persisted Dr. Johnston.

The directors looked at each other and laughed, but none of them arose.

Dr. Johnston kept putting the proposition, lowering the amount by $100 each time, and when he got down to $150 one of the directors stood up and said that was the amount of his capital when he began business.

The majority of the others began without a dollar.

Dr. Johnston himself, estimated to be worth well on toward a half million dollars, began his business without even a pair of shoes.—Oklahoma City Times.

LOOKING UP HISTORY.

As a small boy was standing on one of the best library chairs and clawing with his grubby hands some of the choicest bindings in the bookcase his progenitor entered suddenly and cried, rather sharply: "What are you doing at that bookcase, Wilfred?"

"Trying to find the History of the United States father."

"What for?"

"Why, Joe Billings at our school says Mike Deakin played with Giants year before last and I say he didn't."—Indianapolis Sun.

FACTS FOR THE CURIOUS

Porto Rico is the most easterly of the four Antilles—Cuba, Haiti, Jamaica, Porto Rico.

The 21 stars shown on the yellow and green flag of Brazil represent the United States of Brazil, comprising an area 200,000 square miles greater than the 48 states of the United States.

The police of London rarely avail themselves of the permission to carry firearms at night, although automatic revolvers are at their service. One hundred years ago Sir Richard Ford's famous night patrol each carried a brace of pistols, a cutlass and a heavy truncheon.

Consul Thompson writes that the town of Linden in Germany makes money on the roadside fruit trees owned by the municipality. This past year the scheme yielded over $5,000. The Consul adds: "This application of the beautiful, practical and economic possibilities embraced in the control of such public property as roads is a fine illustration of the community thrift of the German. During the three or four weeks' period of ripening sharp-eyed old watchmen on bicycles patrol the roads, being particularly active on Sundays, when the people are out in large numbers."

An Egyptologist and an Assyriologist were disputing about the relative advancement of the two ancient peoples whom they were studying. "Why, sir," cried the Egyptologist, "we find remains of wires in Egypt, which proves they understood electricity!" "Pshaw!" answered the Assyriologist, "we don't find any wires in Assyria, and that shows that they understood wireless telegraphy!"—McCall's Magazine.

A POINT TO REMEMBER.

William Dean Howells, at a tea at Kittery Point, talked in his wonted brilliant fashion about literature.

"Good literature is always condemned on its first appearance," he said. "That is because, being original, it is new and strange.

"Shelley's work was bitterly condemned at first. So was Coleridge's. So was Wordsworth's. So was Stephen Crane's."

Mr. Howell paused, then added impressively:

"Stones are only thrown at those trees which are heavy with fruit."—Washington Star.

HOW IT WORKS.

Hsu Ping-Cheu, Chinese Consul at San Francisco, discussed at a recent dinner his country's customs.

"There is one custom," said a young girl, "that I can't understand—and that is the Chinese custom of committing suicide by eating gold leaf. I can't understand how gold leaf can kill."

"The partaker, no doubt," smiled the consul, "succumbs from a consciousness of inward gilt."—New York Tribune.

The French Admiralty has had $5,000,000 worth of suspected powder thrown into the sea. This action followed the loss by explosion of the $10,000,000 Liberte and her crew of 250.

BANISH THOSE GRAY HAIRS!
Kill the Dandruff Germs—Stop Hair Falling

Thousands of mothers are looking younger. Their gray hairs are gone. The natural color has come back, and with it a new growth of soft, glossy, luxuriant hair. Why should you look old before your time, when you can look years younger by using

WYETH'S SAGE SULPHUR HAIR REMEDY

Dandruff Cured
Three applications removed all the dandruff and left my scalp clean, white and smooth.
Wm. Crook, Rochester, N. Y.

Restores Gray Hair to Natural Color

If other "so-called" Restorers have failed, don't give up hope, but give WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR REMEDY a trial. You run no risk. If it is not exactly as represented, your money will be refunded.

PROFIT BY OTHERS' EXPERIENCE

Gray Hair Restored
My hair was getting quite gray and falling out rapidly and I was troubled with a terrible itching of the scalp. My head was full of dandruff, which fell upon my clothes and kept me continually brushing it off. While on a visit to Rochester I heard of your Sage and Sulphur for the hair. I got a bottle and used it. A few applications relieved the itching, my hair stopped falling out and gradually came back to its natural color. It is now a nice dark brown color, soft, glossy and pliable. Several of my friends want to use it, and I want to know what you will charge me for six bottles of it.
MISS E. A. ROSS,
Sharon, Mercer Co., Pa.

Gray Hair on a Bald Head
For two or three years my hair had been falling out and getting quite thin until the top of my head was entirely bald. About four months ago I commenced using Sage and Sulphur. The first bottle seemed to do some good and I kept using it regularly until now I have used four bottles. The whole top of my head is fairly covered and keeps coming in thicker. I shall keep on using it a while longer, as I notice a constant improvement.

TOOMBS' SIX MONTHS OF PERIL AS A FUGITIVE

STORY Told in Detail for the First Time of the Game of Hide and Seek That the Confederate General Played with the Federal Troops Before He Finally Escaped from the Country

ROBERT TOOMBS

OBERT TOOMBS was easily the most picturesque figure among the leaders of Southern thought during those momentous years which led up to the time when the South finally decided to try the issue of battle with the North. As impetuous as the torrents which go coursing through the rocky gorges of his native highlands in Northeast Georgia, he was as nonchalant as the sweep of the floodtide. His was the day when the orator on the hustings swayed public opinion, and the man who could win the applause of the crowd could feel confident of the ground upon which he stood. The great mass of people did not then have the opportunity of reading and evolving their own thoughts in regard to public matters, and of necessity left this largely to their leaders.

Up to the time when it was realized that the great struggle between the North and the South was approaching, and almost inevitable, the success of Robert Toombs in the forum and on the hustings was little short of marvellous. Although of impetuous nature he was a man of the highest sense of justice between man and man, regardless of their condition or station in life, and this was a tower of strength to him in combating opposition before the people.

Robert Toombs had been in the lower house of Congress and in the Senate for the last sixteen years leading up to the time when he resigned his seat in the latter body and cast his fortunes with the Southern Confederacy. His utterances there had, perhaps, done more than the words of any other member to make the struggle between the North and the South inevitable. On January 7, 1861, he resigned his seat in the Senate in a remarkable speech. Mr. Blaine said of this utterance that it was the only speech made by a representative of the seceding States which specified the grievances of the South and which named the conditions upon which the States would remain in the Union.

Toombs was then just fifty-one years old and in his full vigor, both mentally and physically. Going back to his native State on January 16 he attended as a delegate the State Sovereignty Convention, popularly known as the secession convention, which was held at Milledgeville, the then capital of Georgia. With Toombs the die had been cast, and he put forth his greatest powers to take his State out of the Union and succeeded. In this convention Stephens, Hill and Johnson, other prominent leaders, opposed secession. Toombs won by a vote of 208 against 89.

His native State, which was always so dear to him, was backing him up, and he felt his leonine power as never before. He reeked little of consequences, events came in rapid succession for those days. This was due primarily to the fact that Mr. Lincoln was to be inaugurated President of the United States on March 4, and the South wanted to take action before that momentous time should roll round. On February 4 delegates from a number, though not all, of the Southern States met at Montgomery, Ala., to form the Southern Confederacy and elect a President. Toombs was there as a delegate from Georgia, and it was generally thought that he would be named as the Chief Executive of the new government, but the tide turned and Jefferson Davis was elected President.

Following the custom which had generally prevailed in the United States government, Toombs being the next most prominent man for President, was made Secretary of State. That the imperious Toombs was no man for second place in civil or military affairs was clearly demonstrated in the events that followed. He served in the Cabinet for only a few brief months, and resigning, accepted a position as brigadier general in the army of Northern Virginia in July, 1861. He served there with gallantry for about one year, but after the battle of Antietam, in which he distinguished himself, being wounded at its close, he resigned his commission in the army and returned to his home in Georgia. He felt that he had not been treated with proper consideration by the authorities at Richmond. Never again was he connected with the civil or military departments of the Confederate government, but he did serve with the State troops around Atlanta and Savannah.

The government was not carried on according to his ideas and he did not care to take any of the responsibility on himself. At the close of hostilities he quietly retired to his home in Washington, Ga. General Toombs was here at his home in Washington when Mr. Davis and four members of his cabinet—Mr. Benjamin, Secretary of State; Mr. Breckenridge, Secretary of War; Mr. Mallory, Secretary of the Navy, and Mr. Reagan, Postmaster General—arrived on their flight south from Richmond after Lee's surrender. There in an old bank building, occupied as a residence, Mr. Davis was entertained overnight and held his last Cabinet meeting. The party arrived on May 4, 1865, and left in different directions on the following day. A few days later Mr. Davis was captured about seventy-five miles further south.

While in Washington General Breckenridge spent the night with General Toombs at his home. Next morning on leaving his host he urged him to accept some of the gold and silver belonging to the Confederate treasury, which had been taken there from Richmond, saying that in these trying times he might stand much in need of it. But the unswerving integrity of Toombs asserted itself and he positively refused to take a dollar of it, saying that it was not his and he would not take it, no matter what the exigencies of the situation might be. But nevertheless General Breckenridge sent him $5,000 in sacks by some soldiers. General Toombs still refused the money, but acting on their orders the soldiers threw down the money in the front yard.

As Breckenridge and all the other members of the Cabinet had departed, General Toombs sent this treasure down town to Mr. Robert Vickers, who was noted for his fatherly care in providing for the soldiers. Many were passing through and they were in great need. The writer has seen some of this coin, which had been kept by the men as souvenirs.

The relations between Davis and Toombs were strained, and the two did not meet at that time, but in after years General Toombs remarked to the writer that he sent word to Mr. Davis while he was in Washington, Ga., that if he would place himself in his (Toombs') hands he would be taken safely out of the country. But the offer was not accepted. Toombs' remarkable success in hiding for six months while the country was being scoured for him by federal soldiers and his final escape make it reasonable to think that he might have carried out his promise.

Order for His Arrest.

Secretary of War Stanton, at Washington, D. C., had issued an order for the arrest of Robert Toombs. On May 14 a squad of soldiers in command of General Wilde arrived at Washington, Ga., on the train and, marching through town, went to the home of Toombs. When they arrived there General Toombs was in the house, but while his daughter detained them at the front door as long as she could, he made his escape through the back premises to his negro quarters on an outlying farm that he owned. From there he made his way to the home of Captain J. T. Wingfield, two miles distant. The latter was captain of the famous Irvin artillery, which served through the entire war in Lee's army. He got a horse from Wingfield, and as he mounted and rode off, in the most nonchalant way, he remarked:—

"John, I have fox hunted all over this country. Now let the Yankees catch me if they can."

From there he made a circuit of the town to the home of Sheriff James Dyson, several miles out, as that was in the direction of the mountains of Northeast Georgia, where he had already determined to go. It was then a wild country, with no railroads. One of the most striking characteristics of Robert Toombs was that he understood men as few others ever have, and knew in whom to repose confidence. He distrusted the discretion of many whom he knew to be loyal and courageous.

From the Dyson home he sent word to Lieutenant Charles E. Irvin, a man of twenty years, who never knew what fear was, to bring his gray mare Alice and meet him at Chenault's at sunrise next morning. This was fourteen miles north of Washington. Toombs himself made the trip alone at night on horseback. Irvin was promptly on hand, and continued with him in his hidings and wanderings through the many months that followed. From there the two men crossed Broad River and rode over into Elbert county to the home of Major Luther Martin, whose parole Toombs procured, and from that time on through all of his journeyings he passed, among those who did not know him, as "Major Martin."

The role of a fugitive was entirely contrariwise in the career of the tempestuous Toombs, and he never liked to talk about it, even after it was all over. During his lifetime the writer endeavored to get the story directly from him, but he declined to narrate it. The full details have been procured from Lieutenant Irvin, who is still living.

General Toombs said the Yankees wanted to take him through the North as a show, and this thought made him the more determined not to be captured. He went well armed and had fully made up his mind to fight to the last in the event the attempt should be made to arrest him. The two men travelled generally at night when going over the main roads, but these were avoided when moving during the day. It is reported that they never stopped with people whom they did not know, but they did not always recognize. He was somewhat disguised, as he wore a linen duck suit with sack coat and had allowed his full beard to grow out. He also got some green goggles to help disguise him, but he wore these only a day or two.

As a young lawyer, and later in his practice and political campaigns, he had travelled very thoroughly over that part of the country, having friends and admirers everywhere, and now when he so sorely needed their friendship they were drawn the closer to him. Going to the home of Alexander Le Seur, on the Savannah River, his host received him with great hospitality, at the same time twitting Toombs with the remark:—"You have been fighting me all these years in politics, and now I am the first man you come to in your trouble." Le Seur owned a large island in the river and Toombs was in hiding for a while on this island, but learning that there were United States soldiers near by on the South Carolina side, he decided that this place was untenable for his purpose.

Sending Irvin home with letters to Mrs. Toombs, the fugitive started along up the valley of the Savannah River toward the mountains of Habersham county. All this time troops were searching far and near through the section of country around Washington for him, but he never encountered them and never in all his wanderings had to use the parole he had procured.

The Two Men Rode Leisurely Along.

Having instructed young Irvin that on his return he would find him at Colonel Prather's, on the Tugaloo River, Toombs wended his way to that mountain home, where he awaited the return of his scout. Bringing messages from his home in Washington, Ga., to the General, Lieutenant Irvin got back to the hiding place of Toombs after an absence of just one week. From there the two went to the home of General Rembert, in Habersham county, this being as secluded a spot for concealing a fugitive as could be found in all the Southern country. Toombs felt perfectly free from his pursuers here and spent a good deal of his time in shooting and fishing.

But, nevertheless, Toombs was restless in his mountain resort, as all who knew him can well understand, and he longed to be the free and bold man of his former days. At one time he had Irvin to ride with him over to Walhalla, S. C., prospecting, with a view of reaching the Carolina coast, from which he hoped to find a friendly ship that would bear him away from his native land. Here he met many on whose loyalty he could thoroughly rely, and all with one accord warned him that this would be a most dangerous course for him to pursue. They told him that there were numerous federal troops between there and the coast and every port was well guarded. General Toombs at once gave up the idea of trying this route.

Toombs and Irvin then returned to Colonel Rembert's on horseback, the manner in which they always travelled, and the General continued to evolve his plans for escaping. He then determined to make an effort to get out through the port of Savannah, and sent Irvin on the mission of preparing the way. The latter rode down to Washington, Ga., on horseback, taking messages to Mrs. Toombs. There he took the train for Savannah, where he arrived during the night.

Stratagem of the Scout.

Here occured an incident which would have unnerved most men. The streets were being patroled by federal soldiers, and the next morning Lieutenant Irvin had hardly stepped out of his hotel when he was promptly arrested by one of them and marched to the guard house. He thought, of course, that his mission had been discovered and that his arrest would lead to the finding of General Toombs in his place of hiding. Irvin had papers in his pocket that would betray the whole affair. But Irvin never lost his head for a moment, and there was not a quiver to betray to the officer who had him in charge that a momentous discovery could easily be made. Unexpectedly meeting a friend, John Weems, on the street, he stopped him with the remark:—

"John, I am on my way to prison and want to return you that money I borrowed from you. I don't know when I'll see you again."

Turning his back on the federal soldier, he slipped these important papers to Weems, who "caught on" at once and expressed no surprise. Irvin was carried to the guard house, where greatly to his relief he found that the charge against him was "wearing a Confederate uniform with brass buttons on it."

In a few moments friends dropped in to see him and from them he learned that the persons General Toombs had sent him to Savannah to see were not in the city. As he was ready to depart the charge against him was dismissed, and he was allowed to go, still wearing his uniform and buttons.

Lieutenant Irvin got back to General Toombs in the mountains the latter part of June, and then another route of escape was worked out, the one which was finally successful, though for the time it was frustrated and hundreds of miles had to be retraced and travelled over for the second and third times. Bidding Colonel Rembert, his most hospitable host, goodby, General Toombs mounted his horse, and with young Irvin, struck out for freedom by way of the gulf coast, with a view to reaching New Orleans.

It was planned by General Toombs to visit his wife at home before leaving for a foreign shore. There was never more beautiful devotion between man and wife than that which blended the lives of these two during their wedded life of more than fifty years. Going down through Elbert county he came as near to being captured as at any other time during the entire six months in which he was evading his pursuers. One day he insisted on going to the home of Major Martin, who had served in his brigade in the army in Virginia, and whose parole he was carrying in his pocket. But Lieutenant Irvin insisted that this would be extra hazardous, and finally prevailed on him to go and spend the night at the home of Colonel W. H. Maddox. It was well for him that he did, for that very night a command comprising about thirty soldiers went to the Martin home and thoroughly searched the place for him. By detouring far to the west the fugitive and his guide struck out on horseback at night for Wilkes county, of which Washington is the county seat. They forded the waters of the upper Broad river and took refuge at the home of DuBose Hill, a large planter. Irvin went into town to ascertain if Toombs could make the venture without being captured.

Lieutenant Irvin found in Washington Captain Lot Abraham of the Eleventh Iowa regiment, with a large garrison of soldiers, squads from which were being constantly sent out in search of General Toombs. The youthful Confederate lieutenant fell in with the federal captain in a soldierly way and learned all that he could from him. It was quite remarkable that it was not once suspected that Irvin was the scout and guide for the great man whose capture was so much desired by Secretary of War Stanton, and for whom thousands of federal troops were so assiduously searching. But Toombs had the incomparable advantage of being on his native heath and among his friends, while those who sought him were in the enemy's country, as it were.

Reporting back to General Toombs that it would be too hazardous for him to venture a visit to Washington, the latter went on his way alone down into the counties south of this. He told Irvin to meet him down in Hancock county, but so well had he covered his tracks that a few days later when Irvin undertook to find him he found it almost impossible to do so. He travelled back and forth many miles, and almost any other man would have given up the search. Irvin was quite a youth and was unknown to these people. He called at the home of Judge Linton Stephens, in Sparta, and, meeting the Judge himself inquired for General Toombs, but the Judge so flatly denied knowing anything of him that it would have confounded Irvin if he had not perceived through all of this Stephens' loyalty to Toombs. With great difficulty Irvin proved his identity and his mission, and then Stephens agreed to take him to Toombs. But even then it was no easy matter to find the fugitive.

It was learned that Toombs had been at the plantation of David Dickson. Irvin, then going alone, met the manager, Mr. Worthen, and inquired about an old man, riding a gray horse, when he received a similar puzzling answer:—"No, I know nothing of him." Irvin finally convinced him that he was a friend and Worthen told him Toombs had been there and was then at Major Gonder's, further on. When it was so difficult for his friends to find Toombs it was small wonder that others could not.

Loyalty of a Southern Woman.

Riding up to the front door of the Gonder home, Irvin found Mrs. Gonder and her daughter sitting on the front porch. He made the usual inquiries, that he had been making for the last several hundred miles along the country roads, and they made the usual answers that they knew nothing of the old man on a gray horse. But Irvin was insistent and told them that he had been sent there to find him. Mrs. Gonder could not suppress her excitement and, rocking vigorously back and forth in her big rocking chair, showed her perturbation to a marked degree. Irvin then told her that he saw that she knew more than she was willing to tell. Then she blurted out:—"Well, I'll die before I tell it." It was an annoying delay, but the young man finally convinced Mrs. Gonder of his sincerity in endeavoring to aid General Toombs, and she told him that the General was at the home of Captain "Jack" Smith, on the Oconee River.

Reaching the latter place the Captain met the young man out in front of the house, and in a manner that would have convinced almost any man in ordinary circumstances denied knowing anything of an old man on a gray horse. But Irvin had gotten a glimpse of General Toombs in the house and sent in his name. This at last brought about a reunion of Toombs and his scout. The two men remained there for about a week, fishing on the river and learning all they could in regard to the route that lay before them. It was ascertained that the public ferries were being closely watched by federal soldiers. However, they crossed in a bateau, swimming their horses, and went to the home of Joseph Dean, in Wilkinson county.

Here Toombs passed as Major Martin and was unknown to his host. After supper they conversed together until bedtime, when the guests retired. A maiden sister, who was a member of the household, then remarked to her brother:—"Joe Dean, I am surprised at you. Don't you know that is General Toombs?" Without further ado Dean made a break for Toombs' room, where he expressed the great honor he felt in entertaining him. They had heard him speak at Toombsboro seventeen years before.

From there they went to the home of Colonel David Hughes, in Twiggs county. Hughes had been in Toombs' brigade in the army, and between the two men there was that comradeship that is known only among soldiers. Young Irvin went up to Macon to cast about and see if it would be wise to proceed further. But he found there a great number of Union troops and had reason to believe that ferries and thoroughfares were being very closely guarded and every effort was being made to capture General Toombs. When he returned and made his report the General at once determined to retrace his steps and make his way back to the mountains of North Georgia. This was done with great celerity, and it was not long before the two men were again at the home of Colonel Rembert, in Habersham county, near the Tennessee line.

Here General Toombs remained quietly, Irvin going back and forth with messages to the home in Washington, Ga. Again, in the month of October, the two men started out, this time to make a successful trip over the same route, which finally ended at New Orleans. By this time the federal authorities had reached the conclusion that Toombs had left the country and had ceased their vigilance. The alarms of war had in a large measure died away and the country had taken on a more peaceful aspect. The two men rode their horses along the public roads with little fear of molestation and free from the delays which were incident to the former trip.

It was on this trip, while passing through Hancock county, near Sparta, that General Toombs had a most sumptuous dinner at a spring in the woods. Linton Stephens, R. M. Johnson, W. W. Simpson, "Jack" Lane, judge Reid and other prominent and wealthy men were present. Faithful negro attendants did the serving. On that day a Masonic lodge was assembled and Toombs was initiated into the mysteries of that order. In the days which followed he found the fellowship of Masonry of incalculable benefit to him. He who afterward a high Mason and to the end of his life a most devoted one. These stanch friends who entertained him on that day, on his departure from them, furnished him all the gold coin that he could carry.

It was not until they had reached "Old Tenwell," down in Southwest Georgia, not far from the Chattahoochee River, that the nearest escape from capture in all their journeyings occurred. Going over the rise of a hill they rode right into a command of Union soldiers. Turning back would have been fatal, and the only course to be pursued was to put on a bold front and with perfect nonchalance ride on. The officer in command stepped out and saluted them. What now? He dropped a remark that completely relieved the feelings of the wayfarers. He was only admiring their splendid horses. He knew nothing and they knew all. There was not a word nor an act that would arouse suspicion, and the two men rode leisurely along. But it was perhaps the closest call yet experienced by Robert Toombs.

"But the night shall be filled with music
And the cares that infest the day
Shall fold their tents like the Arabs
And as silently steal away."

The two men stopped that night at the home of a Mr. Brown, where they found guests assembling for a great wedding. The daughter of their host was to be married that night and all were making merry. It need not be said that General Toombs was the most welcome guest of all the assemblage.

Accompanied by his faithful guide Toombs went from there to his plantation, in Stewart county. He had been in the saddle for six months and had thoroughly tired of it. Here he procured an ambulance in which to travel. When he left his gray mare Alice she neighed for him in a manner that was akin to a human farewell. The two men crossed the Chattahoochee River into Alabama and took the train at Evergreen. Not caring to run into Mobile on the train they got off at Tensas and took a boat for that city. But it looked as if they had gotten into a hornets' nest, as the boat was full of federal soldiers. However, without any untoward incident they landed at Mobile and went immediately to the home of the author, Miss Augusta Evans.

Recognized Aboard Ship.

Here General Toombs remained until Lieutenant Irvin went over to New Orleans and perfected arrangements for him to pass out through that port. From the Spanish Consul he got a passport for Major Luther Martin to Havana. Going back to Mobile Irvin accompanied Toombs by steamer to New Orleans. Aboard this steamer at night a man stood in a doorway and eyed Toombs very closely. Irvin stepped out and engaged him in conversation with a view to throwing him over the taffrail, but he found that the man was Colonel R. C. Fulton, of Georgia, and friendly to General Toombs.

Reaching New Orleans General Toombs went to the home of Colonel Marshall J. Smith. Irvin went out and bought him a fine suit of clothes. Putting these on he drove in a closed carriage down to the dock and went aboard the steamship for Havana. After his long experience as a fugitive he strode the deck like the lordly man that he was, against Irvin's protestations. He was recognized by General Humphrey, marshal of Texas, but the steamship soon departed and Toombs was safe from his pursuers.

By way of Havana he went to Paris, where he was joined a few months after by his wife. She remained with him for more than a year, but returned home ahead of him on account of the death of their daughter, Mrs. D. M. DuBose. General Toombs remained abroad till 1865, when he returned by way of Canada. From there he went to Washington, D. C., where he had a long and friendly interview with President Johnson. He returned to his home in Georgia, never being molested. He was honored by his home people as few other men have been honored. He died here on December 15, 1885. The town clock was stopped till after his burial and every building in town was draped in mourning.

THE VENOM OF LOVE

A Short Story

By Jos. R. Reham.
(Short Story.)

"I can't meet you on Sunday. I'm not going to meet you any more."

Nan leaned back among the fragrant Capebroom, jutting its golden spray through the fence, her eyes upon the ground, seeking refuge from the open avowal Sid's stupid obtuseness forced upon her.

He stepped forward, his hand fell upon her shoulder, turning her roughly, compelling her to face the situation.

"I'm sick of you," she whimpered; "so, there!"

"There's someone else?"

He was still dragging at her, forcing her eyes to his.

"Well, what if there is?" She faced him, a small fury. "Haven't I a right to please myself?"

"If there is——" He threw her off with such violence that she rebounded from the fence, and her bonnet was tossed over her eyes.

Nan tore her hat off. "There is! There is!" she cried.

The girl caught herself up with a gasp. Sid was looking very ugly just then. In the eyes that stabbed her there was a vicious heat; his mouth was slightly open, the under jaw rigid.

"You little beast!" he said. He held her tightly. "It's Bodio." The pressure increased, bruising her soft slim body. "It's Bodio!"

"Yes, it is," she answered defiantly.

"A Dago! A dirty Dago!" and he pushed her away, his face full of disgust.

"He's lovely. I don't care what you think. I don't care what you say; he's lovely!"

For a moment it seemed that he might beat her. Then he swung himself away as from some sweet lure, and fled down the path, almost running.

For over three weeks Sidney Wood saw nothing of Nan, but he heard of her often, and always in association with Gian Bodio, the dapper, black-eyed Italian who speared oysters with amazing dexterity on the right side of Silvio Panzacchi's shop front, while Nan boxed caddy and bagged bananas behind her little counter on the left.

This had been three weeks of torment for Sid. Emotions he never dreamed of bred in his soul, and fed on him. He found himself still wide-awake in the black morning hours, writhing in a little hell that seemed to well out of himself. It amazed him that Nan mattered so much.

Sid had luxurious waking dreams when his contempt and hatred for Nan gave way to an ineffable tenderness, and no thoughts came but of her prettiness, and the softness and gloriousness of her hair, the warmth of her small mouth, her sweetness, gentle actions of hers, loving words. Other rapturous moments were devoted to the utter destruction of Gian Bodio; moments full of the glorious ecstasy of murder.

Sid was a commonplace youth in a commonplace world, suddenly thrust into a vortex of the emotions that make for tragedy.

One moonlight night, after following them like a blackmailer for an hour, creeping meanly from bush to bush, he saw Gian kiss Nan goodnight by the Capebroom hedge, where he and she had so often parted. The Italian held her close in his arms, and kissed her again and again, with uncouth, noisy kisses. Suddenly Sid arose. He understood now what it all meant. He realized in a moment what the fury and the fever had prompted. Nan must die, He would kill her.

No argument followed; no self-questioning. In his mind there were no doubts. He no longer cherished enmity towards Gian Bodio; his soul was absorbed in the killing of Nan. That purpose of itself bred a sort of passion as he nursed it, a passion that absorbed him. In his mind he accomplished the deed a hundred times in a hundred ways. Never had he loved Nan as he loved her now. His dreamings of the murder hour had all the delights of a happy lover's anticipations.

Again and again he went into Silvio Panzacchi's fish and fruit shop, and watched Nan from one of the little dark cribs in which Panzacchi's dubious oysters were eaten, attracted by the white plumpness of her throat, thinking of the faint drumming at her side, where he had heard her strong young heart beating. "How?" was the important question. He thought of many ways—the thinking pleased him. He found pleasure in protracting this murder. He might have killed her twenty times; but after two months he was still asking "when?"

Then he heard she was to be at the trade picnic with Gian, and that decided him. At the picnic, somewhere in the bush, before the eyes of her Dago, he would kill her. He knew now. Again and again, in his mind, he enacted the scene, picturing all the details.

None detected the smallest evidence of Sid's intention as they drove to the picnic. Gian sat on Nan's left. Next her on the right, pressed very close, was Martin Sickert, big, black-haired, violet-eyed, handsome, a suburban Mephistopheles. He certainly enjoyed more of Nan's attentions than poor Bodio; yet Martin was nothing but lorryman for Sik Me, the banana king, with a few dollars a week, and the drink habit. Throughout the morning at Grass Creek, too, Nan flirted openly and impudently with Sickert, and Bodio sat with his back to a gum butt, and watched them, small and silent, no emotion in his pale face.

Nan was conscious of Bodio, but gave no thought to Sidney, and he, too, was watching. It was not till after dinner ,when Martin was too drunk to be companionable, and Nan returned to the Italian. There were no reproaches. They sat together for half an hour, and then went off through the trees and along the creek. Sid followed. He felt his moment was at hand. Near the camp they passed from view beyond a clump of saplings. He waited, but they did not reappear.

He stole forward, crept quietly to the saplings, arose, and pushed his way through, without a sound, his hand on the weapon, his soul hot with resolution.

He stopped. There they were. Nan lay upon the grass; Bodio knelt upon her, his knee crushing her breast, his left hand gripped about her throat. In his right hand he held a knife from the bright blade of which the sunlight flamed. His face was close to hers, his teeth bared, and he spat Roman oaths at her with something of the tiger, something of the snake. His face was contorted with abominable malice, hers wild with the horror of death.

For one tense moment Sidney gazed down upon the lovers, and then a heartburst filled him with blind rage. He hurled himself at Bodio.

A moment later the two men were on their feet, fighting. Nan crouched down, backing under cover of the saplings, mad with fear.

Sid was sparring and punching with bare hands. The other slashed with his knife in a blind fury. Instinctively Wood's left shot for the face with every movement of the Italian. His arms were cut. He got the knife in his breast again, and then he saw Bodio'e chin as through a mist, and swung his right with all his weight and power that he could put into it. The Italian collapsed on himself, and went down, limp and lifeless. Sid staggered to his knees, and then fell, face foremost ,across the body of his foe.

Nan was running towards the picnic party, white and wild, shrieking, "Murder! murder!"

The men found Gian on his knees, still dazed but Sidney lay prone, bleeding from a dozen wounds. "Take care of Nan," he whispered, "For God's sake, take care of Nan. The Dago will kill her!"

As they lifted him a loaded revolver fell from the right-hand pocket of his coat.

Opening Up of Grande Prairie and Peace River Districts

Mr. W. H. Ellwanger, formerly of Green Mountain, Iowa, but now of Edson, Alta., gave the following interview recently at Winnipeg on his way east for the holidays, and expects to interest and bring back with him a considerable number of his former neighbours to settle in the new country. Mr. Ellwanger is particularly enthusiastic over the opening up of the Grand Prairie and Peace River districts for settlement.

The names Grande Prairie and Peace River have become synonymous with prosperity and contentment. They carry the suggestion of ideal surroundings, beauty, fertility, and prosperity. Many new districts have been opened in the great Northwest, but it remained for this particular section of the West to awaken in the first comers to that country a true sense of its natural possibilities. For over 200 years the Blackfoot Indians had lived just south of the Peace River, for here they found in ideal proportions, wood, water and grass, with shelter in winter from storms — a fact of history. With the abundance of wild fruits and the common birds of North America who make their habitations there, it is very evident that it is a good country to grow crops and raise live stock. These facts have attracted the attention of those looking for homes from every quarter of the Globe.

It is a truth that this part of the Northwest contains the last great area of free homestead land in North America .There is no land for sale in Grande Prairie or lower Peace River districts, but it is all open for homesteading. Grande Prairie comprises about 3 1-2 million acres of agricultural land of generally undulating surface dotted with many beautiful lakes, creeks and rivers. It has a natural drainage and belongs to the Great Peace River basin. There is enough timber to give the country the appearance of the older settled parts and relieve the monotony of the bare prairies. The soil is a black loam of silt formation with a chocolate-clay subsoil deepening to a true yellow clay—no alkali. During the seasons of 1910 and 1911 Jas. H. Pettit, Professor of Soil Fertility, University of Illinois made a careful test of the soils of Grande Prairie and pronounced them of excellent quality, containing the necessary elements for growing all kinds of grain, and fully demonstrated that it was equal to any Illinois soil.

But the real proof is what are the settlers raising? In conversation with a great number of those who have been there and who live there, one is convinced that there is no question about the ability of the country to support an immense population, for the same crops can be raised that are grown in any other part of Western Canada. Climate and weather are common property, in the north temperature zone. The climate during the growing season is very similar, and everyone knows that Western Canada produces superior yields in quantity and quality, the average yield per acre is higher than any other section of North America. Wheat raised in the North is of better quality. Millers must have Canada's superior wheat to mix with softer kinds from other fields. All the world knows that wheat which took the first prize at the Centennial at Philadelphia in 1876 was grown in the Peace River district, and the wheat that has taken the first prize at the large expositions since then came from the same section. At the Dry Farming Congress held at Colorado Springs, Colo., during the week of October 17th, 1911, Alberta carried off over fifty of the first prizes. The exhibit of Northern Alberta was a revelation even to the expert judges in the display of vegetables open to the world.

Follow the line of railway development on any late map, and they take a northwesterly course from St. Paul and the head of the Great Lakes toward the Peace River. They follow the great store of natural resources, which exist in the northwest portion of North America. Spring opens at about the same time all along this immense line of progress. In Grande Prairie seeding began last Spring 1911 on April 18th. The first killing frost in the last five years has occurred from the 16th to the 25th of September. Last year 1911 it came September 20th. The mountains west of Grande Prairie are low and broken, which allow the warm winds from the Pacific Ocean to pass over and has a moderating effect on the winters, which are not so cold or long as points much further south and east.

Tender vegetables that cannot be raised further south mature well in Grand Prairie. Fertile soil, sunshine and rain constitute the elements for creating new wealth producing crops and has the same effect on an acre of land in Grand Prairie as on $200 Illinois or Iowa land. The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway in building from the Atlantic to the Pacific has opened a short route to Grande Prairie districts. At Edson one of their principal divisional points west of Winnipeg, the Government has built a wagon road from that point to Grande Prairie, which is over one half shorter than the Railway to Prairie City. From Edson the Grand Trunk Pacific have a line to the Brazeau Coal fields on the South and during the summer of 1911 made surveys from here to Grande Prairie and Peace River country, and it is evident a line will shortly be built from here by that Company. As to the country in general, Hon. Frank Oliver, late Minister of the Interior, made a personal inspection of the entire Peace River Valley to know if it was advisable to open that section to settlers. On returning afte rtwo months' trip he said: "There is a country, whatever may be said as to the possibilities of other sections, there is no question concerning the Peace River district. There are prairies as fine as any in North America ,and the district is rich enough in itself to build and support large cities in a very few years." The settlers who are there are all satisfied with the country. In talking with those men and women the one expression is that it is better than they expected to find."

James Morton of Vancouver after travelling two months through the Grande Prairie and Peace River districts said: "I believe it will become the leading agricultural country of Western Canada on account of having so many natural resources right at hand." He talked with nearly all the settlers and found them more contented than any class of newcomers he had ever been among. It is important to know that the very best class of people are going in there to settle, those with means and experience. This is the one thing that impresses everyone who first comes to Grande Prairie—the splendid class of citizens. Social conditions are progressive. Wherever needed there are churches and schools. The head land office for that district is at Prairie City. The Canadian Bank of Commerce is at Beaver Lodge.

The supreme court of Indiana, in a suit where a train blocked a highway crossing beyond the time allowed by law, thereby preventing fire engines from reaching a burning building, held that the railway company is liable to the owner of the building for the damages sustained.

CUT OUT

A Short Story

By Virginia Stark Walker.
(Short Story.)

The captain of the Ivanhoe strode the deck in the early dawn of a dismal autumn day. He was in anything but a pleasant humour, and something was weighing on his mind. A heavy fog disturbed his calculations, the schooner lay right in the track of steamers, and sixteen lives in the bunks below might hang on his watchfulness; that was part of trawling. But he was facing a new experience. For the first time in fifteen years he had knocked a man down. To be sure, it had been necessary ,unless he wished to get four inches of cold steel between his ribs. Nevertheless, it had not been pleasant.

Julian, an Italian, had fooled him. The captain had shipped him instead of a disabled seaman, but he turned out to be more at home with pick and shovel than with oar and trawl.

Julian had refused to obey orders. The captain lost his temper, and seized him roughly by the shoulder. Out flashed a knife, but the captain's hard fist was quicker, and the Italian's head thumped the deck and his weapon flew overboard.

The captain ordered the others to tie his hands, and confine him in the forecastle. The Italian fought like a wildcat, even using his teeth. But at last they trussed him securely, and tossed him into the forepeak.

On deck, in the silence of the morning watch, the captain lived over these events . Never again would he ship a man hastily. Far away he heard a faint rumble, hardly louder than the rigging. A steamer was coming. She would pass not far from the schooner. He must be on the lookout.

Going forward near the windlass, he began working the brake of the foghorn. The wind carried the sound towards the coming liner. Two minutes passed. Then the warning blast roared out again. It seemed barely a mile away. But suddenly out in the fog to leeward came a rushing. The captain knew it all too well and fear gripped him. The steamer! He had miscalculated her position. She was heading sraight for the Ivanhoe.

The captain worked the brake of the horn madly, then dropped it and ran aft, shouting at the top of his voice: "Turn out! Turn out! A steamer right ahead!"

Up from the gangways rushed a string of startled men, without hats, coats and boots; dazed, wild-eyed, terrified. They ran confusedly about the decks, or stood paralyzed with dread. Then close by in the fog, drowning all other sounds, the whistle bellowed menacingly. Before the thunder ended, from high above glared down on them a pair of red and green eyes, with a sharp black prow. A long, low steamer, with a ripping crash the steel nose struck the schooner just abaft the forward rigging.

The knife-like stem, driven by thousands of tons of hurtling steel behind, sheared through the hull of the schooner as if it had been pulp aboard. Overboard from stern and bow the panic-stricken crew leaped headlong; instinct told them that their only safety lay in the water as far as possible from the track of that roaring monster. Before the prow struck the farther gunwale of the vessel, her decks were empty.

One man kept his senses—the captain. Just before the collision he had sprung to the taffrail and seized the painter of the dingy, towing astern for precisely this contingency. Casting off the line he threw himself head foremost into the boat, clutching the gunwales and kicking strongly away from the schooner. His push carried him some distance from the reeling stern. Instantly he dropped on his back in the bottom of the boat and grasped her sides.

From his prone position he caught a glimpse of the lighted bridge, with the officer in charge peering down. He sent up a cry for help. "You've sunk us; come back and pick us up."

There was time for no more. The long black sides swept by. Had he been heard? A few minutes would tell . He sprang up and shipped the oars. The lives of his entire crew, scattered over that dark fog-smothered sea, depended on him alone. Driving the boat back toward the spot of collision, he raised a shout: "This way, boys; this way!"

Soon the boat was as full of the wrecked crew as safety would allow. The captain kept the latecomers in the water, holding on to the gunwales. At last a row of heads lined each side.

"All here?" asked the captain. "Let us count up." Nine in the boat, four on the starboard gunwale and three on the larboard—sixteen in all. And there had been seventeen men on the schooner! An awestruck silence settled over the survivors. Who was missing? The cook clutched the captain's arm.

"Julian," he gasped. A murmur of horror ran round the boat at ehe thought of the Italian, bound and helpless in the forepeak. Was the wreck still afloat, or had she gone down?

"There!" exclaimed the cook.

From the dense fog ahead sounded faint, muffled cries, mingled with a dull hammering, as of a man's fists on wood. Julian was still alive, but in mortal fear. The dinghy moved slowly toward the sounds, and soon its prow brought up against a tangle of rigging. Beyond loomed a black, formless mass, evidently the forward part of the wreck.

"Take the oars, somebody," cried the captain, "and keep off far enough not to be sucked down with her if she sinks. I'm going after him. Something is holding him down in the forecastle, and he'll drown like a rat without help. I've never lost a man yet, and I don't propose to now."

He soon stood upon the wreck, which was already awash. His knees struck a mound of canvas, and his fingers told him it was the clew of the foresail, which had fallen over the forward gangway. Incoherent mutterings and shouts came from beneath it. He drew his knife. Slitting a long hole in the canvas he caught Julian's collar and dragged him out.

There was a bubbling, a gurgling groan of imprisoned air. A shudder under the captain's feet told him the wreck was going down. Unless the two left it at once they would go also. With a sudden shiver the bow tilted slowly upright.

"She's going," cried the captain to the men in the boat. "Keep off and look alive!"

He pitched the Italian overboard and leaped after him. The ystruck a tangle of rigging. Death lurked in these leaps. Fighting furiously for both, the captain forced his way through them.

From the lips of the Italian burst a yell of terror, dying away in a strangled gurgle as his head was drawn below the surface. The captain realized instantly what had happened. One of the floating ropes had entangled Julian's feet, and was taking him down with the schooner. In a few seconds he would be beyond help. The captain must either free him somehow, let go, or be dragged down too.

Knife in hand, he felt his way along the writhing body until he found a tight loop round the knee. Savagely he hacked at it. Would it never let go? Finally he cut it through and it pulled away. With an arm round the drowning man he fought up again to the surface. Before long they were both on board the boat.

Whistle after whistle echoed through the fog. The steamer was coming back. Twenty minutes later her boats had found them, and soon they were all safely aboard on their way to port.

ELECTRICAL POWER COMPANY READY TO FIGHT THE HYDRO-ELECTRIC COMMISSION

President of Company Intimates However That They Would be Willing to Sell Out If the Price is Right.

AN IMPORTANT STATEMENT

MONTREAL, JAN. 17.—When spoken to this morning about the decision of the Hydro-Electric Commission to fight the Electrical Company Limited, over the Trent Valley power business, T. B. Macaulay, president of the Electrical Company, Ltd., said that if the commission wanted a fight it could be accommodated. He further said that his company was willing to accept the valuation of its property fixed by an arbitration board of experts, the Hydro Commission to select one representative, the company to choose one, and the two to select a chairman.

Mr. Macaulay said if the board fixed the value of the company's property at $4,000,000, well and good, the company would accept that price. The commission would, however, have access to the books of the company, and would find that its bonds alone were valued at $4,000,000. After this came the stock and the value of properties added to the business since it started operations.

Mr. Macaulay said his company was not afraid of competition, as the Hydro-Electric could not do anything for two years anyway.

OTTAWA, JAN. 18.—A. B. Colville of Campbellford, president of the Trent River Electric Power Company which controls most of the supply of power along that water course, and surrounding districts, this morning denied that the Company had ever flatly refused to sell out to Beck's Hydro Electric Commission. He said that while business was good they stood willing to sell to the Hydro Electric at a price to be fixed by independent arbitration.

CONFLAGRATION THREATENS GEORGE ST. BUSINESS BLOCK

P. C. Kidd Discovers an Early Morning Fire in Toronto Savings and Loan Company Building

Owing to the watchful eye and keen sense of smell of P. C. Kidd, what might have been a disastrous conflagration in the business block, was averted last evening. While passing R. H. Hunter's grocery store, near the corner of Brock and George streets, about 12 o'clock, the officer detected an odour, which was not hard to class as smoke. He proceeded to investigate and discovered that it emanated from the Toronto Savings and Loan Company's premises. The officer then notified the Fire Department by telephone, who were soon on the scene. It was several minutes before the location of the fire could be discovered, and before the firemen could get to the scene of the conflagration, they had to break open several doors.

The fire was in the cellar of the Hunter store, and when discovered by the firemen, it was making rapid headway toward a chute, in which was packed a large quantity of shavings and sawdust. By the judicious use of about twenty-five gallons of chemicals, it was finally extinguished. Clarke's jewellery store was filled with smoke, as also were several of the offices upstairs. The cause of the fire is not definitely known, and the damage will be slight.

Former Peterborough Boy's Return After An Absence Of Forty Years

Captain W. I. Eyres, a Salt Water Mariner, Renews Old Acquaintances in the City---Is a Nephew of the Late Mr. William Eyres.

There appeared in this city yesterday a scion of one of the old families who settled in this country, to wit, Captain Billy Eyres, a son of the late Mr. Thos. Ayres of Springville and Millbrook. His parents were married in the city of Peterborough sixty three years ago, his father having been born in Cavan and his mother, Jane Anne Howden, in the same place, in the year 1820. He left this region forty-two years ago, when but fifteen years of age, going first to Pennsylvania, where he remained for two years, after which he entered the seafaring profession.

Billy, as he likes the few old friends who remember, to call him, has been a globe trotter, and he has references to show that he is an American ship master of the first class (unlimited), and ample proof that he has travelled the whole of the globe. His home is in Seattle, but at present is a resident of the flourishing town of Saskatoon, Sask., in which city he is about to engage in the real estate business, disposing of realty which he owns there. Billy says in all his travels, he has never met a race of people whom he loves better than the race from which he sprung, viz., the Irish.

Captain Eyres' father kept store in Springville from 1851 to 1859, after which he moved to Millbrook, where he remained for a number of years. His mother was the first white child in Hope township and was born on the site of the old Royal hotel in Hope. His grandfather came to this country in 1816, or ninety-six years ago. These are but a few of the number of interesting facts which could be enumerated about the Eyres family tree.

"Billy" took a trip through the west some time ago, and as a result he caught that popular western malady, the real estate fever. He annexed a nice parcel of property in Saskatoon, a town which, by the way, has sprung from a tent on the prairie to a city with twenty thousand inhabitants in eight years, and he intends to go into the real estate business for a while at least.

Captain 'Billy's' home is in Seattle and he is a full-fledged American citizen, but he confessed to the Examiner that he was a little ashamed of that fact. After having got a glimpse of that vast virgin prairie north of the 49th parallel, "I began to think that I had made a mistake in my young days," he said.

For the past seven years he has been in the employ of the Alaskan Steamship Company and a little over two months ago he docked his vessel for the winter. He proposed to spend a few months in the East and is at present at Mr. Westley Walsh's, Millbrook.

Capt. Eyres is a keen observer and possesses a very retentive memory. He dearly loves his native land, a fact which he emphasized by reciting a verse of the poem, whose first line opens thus, "My own, my own, my native land." He also recalled the occasion when Sir Wilfrid Laurier told the Americans in Washington that the 19th century was theirs and the 20th century was ours. That was two years ago, when Sir Wilfrid and a number of his colleagues were over there on a special mission.

Clean Sweep Sale of "Classic" Clothing at George Ball's

It will be interesting news to men to learn that Mr. George Ball, local agent for "Classic" Clothing, is offering the following extra inducements on the balance of his stock of these high grade, ready-to-wear garments:

Regular $18.00 Suits and Overcoats, for $13.50.

Regular $15.00 Suits and Overcoats, for $11.00.

Regular $10.00 Suits and Overcoats, for $7.50.

Money talks and usually talks sense. Here's a chance where men can save dollars by taking advantage of this clean sweep sale.

The above prices represent the highest attainments of Canada's best tailors. Not a great stock to clear, but there's a bargain in every garment.

Three months yet of winter—so don't let this opportunity slip through your fingers.

"THE APOSTOLIC FAITH MISSION"

A religious work has just been started in our city under the above name. Meetings on Sundays will be held in the Princess Theatre at 3 o'clock p.m and half past seven p.m. and during the week as soon as a suitable place can be obtained, every night at 7.30 p.m. The object is the preaching of the whole gospel of Christ, which embraces not only salvation from sin, but the baptism in the Holy Ghost for believers, and divine healing for sickness and disease, and this is for all who will accept the finished work of Christ upon the cross. Read Matthew, 8: 17 and kindred passages. All will be made welcome.—Co.

ANXIOUS TO BE DEPORTED

Mrs. Rose Whittaker who was arrested by High County Constable Cochrane, on Tuesday afternoon, at the home of a farmer named Heard, on the 8th line of Smith, was arraigned before Magistrate Edmison in the County Court this morning, charged with vagrancy. When the arrest was being effected, Mrs. Whittaker violently resisted, and not until she was completely exhausted would she submit to arrest. She was this morning remanded back to gaol where she will remain until Deportation Officer Devlin, of Kingston, comes to make the necessary arrangements to have her sent back to England. Her husband and relatives are in England, and, although, she at first resisted, she is now very anxious to be sent back. The children will also be deported.

ACME OF SERVICE

Taking into consideration the magnificent equipment supplied by the Canadian Pacific, even at full tariff rates, every day is a bargain day for the travelling public.

The new compartment cars recently put into service between Toronto and Ottawa, and Toronto and Montreal ,on trains leaving North Toronto at 10 p.m. daily, in addition to the electric lighted sleeping cars, also operated on this train, make it second to none on the continent.

The compartment cars have a style all their own, being the latest in construction and appointment. They are electric lighted throughout, absolute privacy is assured; individual requisites, etc.

"A Premier Train," is the general verdict; some say, a credit to Canada.

THREE AUXILIARY STATIONS ARE RECOMMENDED

Also a Combination Chemical Hose Wagon---Results of Recent Inspection of Fire Department to Hand in Printed Report.

The Fire Underwriters' printed report of the inspection conducted in this city on December 14th, 15th and 16th, is in the hands of the city officials and insurance companies. It deals extensively with the nature of the tests made, the results and figurative matter pertaining to them, such as pressure, valves, time consumed in making tests, etc.

Mr. R. N. Wilson, C. E., conducted the inspection. At the end of his report he recommends the purchase of a combination chemical hose wagon by the city and also the building of three auxiliary stations, one in East City, and one in the north and south wards; also an addition to the force at the Central Fire Station.

While Mr. Wilson does not commit himself to an expression of opinion as to the efficiency of the present Fire Department in his report, the general tone of it indicates that the standard maintained meets with the approval of the Underwriters.

CITY OFFICIALS PLEASED WITH PUMPING STATION

The City Engineer, City Clerk Armstrong, Mayor Bradburn and a number of the city fathers paid a visit of inspection to the Romaine street sewer and south end pumping station this morning and were very favourably impressed with the work that had been accomplished. The gasoline engines and all the pumping apparatus has been installed in the pump house and all the necessary equipment put in place.

Everything was given a fair test this morning during the inspection. All the work has not been completed on the sewer, but the important part has been finished and there is now only a little trimming to do.

Mr. Armstrong, the Resident Engineer, will make a report on the conditions of the pump house and equipment, in the course of a week or so, it is expected, and then further details of the facts will be published. The city officials are highly pleased with the work.

Icy Pavements Cause Many Falls

George street, to-day, at noon, presented a 12th of July aspect, by reason of the fact that the majority of the citizens found it in the best interests of their physical welfare to take the centre of the road. The danger of walking on the sidewalk was a two-fold one, inasmuch as the unwary citizen was liable to be buried alive by an avalanche of snow from the roofs of the buildings, in addition to the danger of losing one's grip on terra firma. The first stated danger, that of being buried alive, was strikingly brought to the notice of two citizens while passing a George street store to-day. They waded through the mass of water-logged snow, which had fallen from the roof, apparently uninjured. Several citizens were badly shaken up, as a result of falling on the slippery sidewalks, but no accidents of a serious nature have been reported.

COMPULSORY INSURANCE

TORONTO, JAN. 18. — In a long typewritten address, the Canadian Manufacturers Association to-day outlined to Sir William Meredith, Commissioner of the Workmens Compensation Act, its views as to the nature of the proposed legislation. The Manufacturers want the workmen of all industries to contribute to compensation and wants an insurance department created with compulsory insurance.

OFFICERS INSTALLED

Queen Alexandra Circle No. 136, A. O. F., held a meeting last night, and was presided over by Chief Companion Mrs. Moss. After the usual business had been concluded, the officers were duly installed by Companion Bro. George R. Record, who also read the auditors' report, which showed the finances of the society to be in a flourishing condition.

SAILORS DROWNED

British Steamer "Wistow Hall" is Wrecked and Thirty-eight of Crew Lose Lives

SOME WERE SAVED

Special Wire to The Examiner.

ABERDEEN, SCOTLAND, JAN. 18.—Thirty-eight sailors went down with their ship, the Str. Wistow Hall of London. They were wrecked and the vessel broken to pieces off the rocks on the coast of Aberdeenshire. The life-boats crew made efforts to launch the life boats, but were unable to do so owing to the heavy gales. Some of the crew were driven on shore on the wreckage and may survive.

HE WANTS A LARGER RECIPROCITY

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, JAN. 18.—Harry J. Cross, Newfoundland's lumber king, is in New York to stimulate interest in what he calls a larger reciprocity pact, which shall include not only the United States and Canada, but the entire British Empire. The Alliance would be principally against such countries as Germany and Japan.

Body Not Found

Search Parties Have Been Working Diligently Since Sunday's Accident

All efforts to secure the body of Henry Fairweather, who was drowned in the vicinity of the Nassau power house while breaking ice on Sunday last have, up to the present, proved of no avail. The search party have worked assiduously at the fatal spot day in and day out throughout this week. After it was found that dragging and probing was of no use, a diver was engaged and he has searched the spot with no better result. Today he has worked east and has in many cases searched under the ice. The axe has been discovered broken in two. This fact gave rise to a theory that while breaking the ice, the snapping of the axe handle caused Fairweather to topple over into the water. It is said that he was wearing a red sweater and a white toque. The body will therefore not be difficult to discern on the bed of the river.

REPORT CONFIRMED

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, JAN. 18.—The Marine Department has received a confirmation of the report of the accident to the steamer "Lady Laurier" at Barrington, N.S.. She lies in 24 feet of water aft and 14 feet forward. The Government steamers, Montmagny and Aberdeen have been despatched to her assistance. It is expected she will soon be floated. The scene of the wreck is not very far from the spot where the Niobe met with her misfortune, and is one of the most dangerous localities on the whole Atlantic coast.

CIVIC BEAUTY.

The Boston chamber of commerce last summer took a trip to Europe inviting other commercial bodies in the United States to send representatives to accompany it, and J. H. Shaw was one of the delegates from Spokane. In speaking to the Spokane chamber of commerce about his experiences and observances he put stress on the city beautiful as a commercial asset.

Everywhere he went, whether it were Antwerp or Berlin, London, or Paris, he found that the business men of the great commercial centres value municipal beauty not merely on aesthetic grounds, but for economic reasons. They have learned from experience that, given equal business energy and up-to-date wharves or terminals the city that invested in boulevards, parks, and in splendid public buildings enjoys a commercial advantage over cities without these aesthetic utilities.

This experience of the business-getting service of municipal beauty is not peculiar to Europe, American cities—for example, Cleveland, Kansas City and Memphis have found that the money they have spent in making the city attractive and enjoyable places of residence has been bread cast on the waters of business. In a little while it has returned manyfold in the industries whose owners have moved there because the city beautiful afforded superior conditions of existence to their employees.

WHEAT, POLITICIANS AND PATRIOTISM.

Yesterday the announcement was made that the Canadian Pacific Railway had so readjusted its transportation charges on its Soo line as to carry wheat and oats from Saskatchewan to Minneapolis and Duluth at the same rates as to Fort William, and Port Arthur, says the Toronto Globe. The new rates are now in force. This change, it is said, will aid in saving 25,000,000 bushels of grain now unmarketed and suffering loss in Western Canada.

What a humiliation this must be to those "no trade or truck with the Yankees" politicians, who four months ago travelled from Lake Huron to the Atlantic warning loyal Canadians against allowing Western grain to be shipped to Minneapolis. At that time the grinding of Canadian wheat in American mills meant annexation. Or if annexation might be shunned, then at the very least the millers of Canada would be ruined by this American competition.

And this wild talk was not the campaign chatter of fifth-rate Tory politicians alone. The leader in it, its one effective exponent, was Hon. Clifford Sifton. At Cobourg, even more concretely at St. Marys, and on his platforms everywhere the former Minister of the Interior made this Minneapolis grain bugaboo the burden of his speeches. He denounced "the proposal under which the hard wheat of the West will be distributed in the United States through Minneapolis and St. Paul, whose millers will grind it, drive our millers out of the export trade, and confine them merely to the domestic trade."

Mr. Sifton knew then, but he did not tell his hearers, that the millers of Minneapolis and St. Paul are free to import unlimited quantities of Canadian wheat and grind it in bond for export trade, and receive in rebates from their Government, 99 per cent. of what they paid in duty. American millers are free to use Canadian hard wheat in competition with Canadian millers in the export trade, but the high American duty which the trade agreement would have wiped out prevents Canadian farmers from competing with American farmers in the domestic flour trade of the United States. Mr. Sifton concealed those facts from the electors. Now the people in the West and in the East are finding them out for themselves, and are finding out also how these interested campaigners humbugged those who trusted them.

Mr. Sifton said more: he predicted, to the damage of "the prosperity of Canada, that one hundred millions of bushels of wheat will be diverted from Canadian railways and go south from Manitoba and Saskatchewan through the United States". What have we now? One of the Canadian railways that fought the Liberal Government as vehemently as Mr. Sifton himself lowers its rates on its American line in order to carry within the next three months 25,000,000 bushels of grain from Western Canada to Minneapolis. On the Board of Directors of that railway is Sir William Van Horne, who, in terms not used in polite society, announced his antagonism to the larger markets policy, and also Sir Edmund Osler, who, in September last, warned West Toronto electors that such a trade arrangement would make annexation inevitable in a generation. These are the very men who now lower the rates on their American railway for purposes that four months ago language would not adequately condemn.

Nothing But An Everlasting Picnic

Life is nothing but an everlasting picnic for the modern glove fighters as well as to the fellows who go to watch them tap each other with pillows, remarked an old-time sport, as he puffed reflectively on his cigar. In the days of the bare knuckle men there was almost as much excitement in getting to and coming back from a mill as there was in seeing the go itself.

I remember one scrap in particular which I attended—that between Billy Edwards and Arthur Chambers, the great light weights, which was brought off under peculiar difficulties. One early autumn morning in 1872 a bunch of flashy looking strangers gathered in Detroit. They had been chased out of Ohio by a sheriff's posse, and were searching for a spot to pull off a good thing. That night at old Merrill Hall a sparring match was given. It was a tame affair but the local and visiting sports were there in big numbers for the fight rendezvous was to be given out.

Shortly before midnight the crowd boarded a ferryboat which ran across to Windsor on the Canadian side. It was a great showing of celebrities that soon began to line up in front of the Canadian bars. There were big O'Baldwin, the Irish giant; Tom Allen, Jem Mace, Tim Collins, the Iron Man, and Hurst, the Stafleybridge Infant, and one of the largest men that ever put up his hands. There were old Johnny Mackay, who seconded Heenan in his fight with Sayers; Arthur Gore, Charley McDonald, Harry Hill, Barney Aaron, and a score of others. Almost every man in fact, then prominently known in ring annals of the day, was on hand. There was also a fine assortment of burglars, safe blowers and gamblers, as well as several timid looking gentlemen of eminence in Detroit business circles, who kept nervously fingering their pocket books and watches.

About three o'clock in the morning dark as pitch, and with a thin, drizzling rain falling, we hurried aboard a couple of tugs which cast off and steamed up the river into Lake St. Clair. It was almost sunrise when we disembarked in boats and were rowed ashore to Walpole Island, uninhabited except by a few Indian basket makers, who took to the woods when their pale face brethren landed. Every one was morose ,tired, hungry, and the only cheerful incident to beguile the tedium of disembar'ation was when Jem Mace bribed a boatman to capsize Mr. Collins, the Iron Man ,in shallow water.

Collins tore after the offender like an enraged bull dog, and the pursuit might have ended in homicide, had not somebody tripped him up just as he was overhauling the boatman. The amusing little interlude put everybody in good humour except Collins, who subsequently disrobed and sat gloomily at the ringside, clad only in his hat and underclothes.

The stakes and ropes were set up, and just as the sun began to blaze down on the clearing the men squared off. Chambers was sturdy, compact, rather slow, a good example of the then ideal English bulldog type of fighter. Edwards was slender, graceful in his movements and quick as a panther. Both were in grand shape, and while it lasted it was a great fight. But all at once a job was pulled off. Edwards was beating his man to a pulp and looked like a sure winner. At the end of about the 12th round, when Chambers went to his corner, one of the seconds put his head under the blanket which had been thrown around him and deliberately bit Chambers on the shoulder. When time was called Chambers went to a clinch and fell, dragging Edwards down with him. The next instant Chambers yelled: "He's biting me!" The referee interfered and called a halt. There were the teeth marks sure enough, and Chambers was at once declared the winner on a foul.

Edwards, dazed and wild over the result of this pleasing little piece of trickery, screeched with rage, ran down to the waterside, and plunged into the lake. He may have been contemplating suicide, but if he was he changed his mind and came out of the water again wet as a drowned dog, hurling forth indignant protests, but all in vain. It was not his lucky day. Late in the afternoon the famished, irate and altogether woe-begone crowd of real sports landed on the American side. By nightfall they had scattered in all directions. Some warrants had been issued. And for all these discomforts and the doubtful honour of an unearned victory Chambers was rewarded by the sum of $1,000. Mr. Edwards had nothing but vain regrets.

THE QUESTION OF GOOD ROADS

The following is a bulletin issued by and on behalf of, the Ontario Good Roads Association.

The Ontario Highway Improvement Act, when first introduced, included a section providing for the construction of roads to specifications approved by the Public Works Department, before the counties were to be entitled to participate in the Government grant. This provision was omitted in the Act as finally passed, the one million dollars appropriated being largely for educational work, and to encourage the counties to build and maintain a better class of roads. The result has been that twenty counties have assumed 3,630 miles of road, on which $2,681,435 has been expended, one-third being contributed by the Province.

Some of the work on the county systems has been of an elementary character. This was to be expected, and was largely due to two causes: (1) The lack of experienced road superintendents to immediately take charge of the work, and a consequent term of experiment in each county until definite standards were reached; and (2) uncertainty on the part of councillors and ratepayers as to road-building, the organisation necessary, and results to be expected. The Highway Act to the present time has done much toward training a number of practical road superintendents; has educated and formed public opinion as to what roads should be; and has produced, in actual road improvement good results for the money expended. Much excellent pioneer work and organization has been done.

There has been, and is, however, a lack of uniformity in methods and results, but a great unanimity of effort to secure the proportion payable by the Government. The announcement by Premier Borden that Federal aid would be provided for highway improvement has been received with the heartiest approval in Ontario. Those interested in good roads are now considering how the Federal aid can be best applied.

The Ontario Good Roads Association, recognising the necessity for a bettter class of county roads, and the lack of uniformity, passed a number of resolutions at its annual meeting in March, 1911.

Tax on Motor Vehicles.

I. "For Provincial co-operation for maintenance of county roads by levying a tax of fifty cents per horse-power on motor vehicles."

The horsepower of all licensed cars in Ontario is estimated at 240,000. This would produce a revenue of $120,000—and the number of automobiles is rapidly increasing.

Increased Provincial Aid.

II. "For increasing the proportion of Provincial grant where roads are built according to a standard to be determined by the Provincial Department of Public Works."

This is the original idea contained in the first draft of The Highway Improvement Act—county roads should be constructed in accordance with the specifications prepared by a central authority. There should be uniformity in every county where the local conditions are the same. The construction of roads of a higher standard will cost more money. The suggestion is that the cost of roads of this class should be provided, one-third by the Dominion, one-third by the Province, and one-third by the county.

Provincial Highways.

III. "For a system of Provincial highways to be assumed and built by the Province."

This is a new idea, received with favour by the Provincial authorities since the offer of Federal aid was summoned. A system of roads connecting all the county towns to be assumed, constructed, and maintained by the Province, the Federal Government assisting in proportion to the expenditure, would be ideal. This would require 2,000 miles, costing aproximately $8,000 per mile, or sixteen million dollars—not a large sum, when we consider that it would be a number of years before this mileage could be completed.

The equalization of road expenditures in this way would give great impetus to the work of road improvement in the local municipalities, and be some compensation for the necessary dodging and dust created by the ever-increasing traffic of motor vehicles.

Federal Bureau of Highways.

IV. "For the establishment by the Dominion Government of a Bureau of Highways, along the lines of the Office of Public Roads in connection with the U. S. Department of Agriculture."

This would be valuable for the collection of information in reference to pavements, and highway construction, the determination of specifications, and generally to harmonize the work of road improvement throughout Canada, for which Federal aid would be available.

Federal Aid.

No question of as great importance as Federal Aid for highway improvement has been suggested for many years. This is no doubt the result of the gradual growth of public opinion to an appreciation of the fact that the improvement of the main highways is as necessary to the further development of the country as railways have been in the past.

It is expected that the Dominion Government will refer the whole question to a commission to report on highway improvement, the extent to which Federal aid should be provided, and the advisability of establishing a Good Roads Bureau at Ottawa. It will not be difficult to apply Federal aid in Ontario, but it is not quite certain that a similar system will work out in Quebec, or some of the other Provinces that have not taken up the question along modern lines.

It will be necessary in every Province to divide the roads. The four classes suggested for Ontario are:

I. Provincial roads, to be constructed and maintained with Federal aid.

II. County roads to be constructed and maintained to a specific standard, with Provincial and Federal aid.

III. Coutny roads, constructed with Provincial aid, as at present, under The Highway Improvement Act.

IV. Roads constructed and maintained by the local municipalities.

This classification could be applied in part in every Province. It will be necessary also to determine the basis on which Federal aid should be apportioned amongst the Provinces, after which each should be allowed to work out its own system, subject to the approval of a Dominion authority.

NIAGARA

Niagara's sublimity has so long impressed the world's imagination that when the project to harness the cataract to electric generators was broached the idea of unlimited power sprang naturally from the conception of supreme magnificence. But the practical calculations of engineers have shown that apart entirely from the consideration of the destruction of nature's masterpiece in scenic grandeur, the mechanical power actually available may easily be exhausted. A comprehensive work on Canada's water powers has been prepared under the Conservation Commission by Leo G. Denis, B.Sc., E.E., and Arthur V. White, C.E., and the estimates and calculations regarding Niagara, as well as the tabulated records of power development, present and contemplated,are highly instructive.

The Niagara river, with a fall of 325 feet from Lake Erie to Lake Ontario, would yield, theoretically, 8,000,000 horse power. But the head of water available at the falls is 212 feet, and the Ontario Power Company, the best situated, utilizes only 180 feet, or 85 per cent. Allowance for the percentage of efficiency of the turbines, cuts down the available power further to 68 per cent. of the amount theoretically possible.

Taking the minimum instead of the average flow makes a further reduction of 20 per cent., leaving the actual energy 55 per cent. of the possible average. A greater reduction must be made for the fact that the flow cannot all be utilized. Some water must pass over the falls in the form of ice, and sufficient free water must also pass to carry the ice over. Ice jams have already shown this necessity. Allowance for what may be called the waste water reduces the estimated available energy to 2,765,000 horse power, of which Canada's share would be 1,382,500 horse power. On the basis of actual results from the flow of water the total estimate is further reduced to 2,250,000 horse power, Canada's share being 1,125,000. Franchises have already been granted for 450,000 horse power on the Canadian side, so that, according to these calculations, instead of millions of horse power awaiting development, it is possible that the better half of Canada's available power is already under private control. It is suggested by the compilers that the need of safety in regard to ice and other conditions may preclude the further use of Canada's equity in the water at Niagara Falls.

The report corrects current misconceptions with regard to the international division of the water supply. Canada has been granted 36,000 cubic feet of water per second, and the United States 20,000 cubic feet. But the Chicago Drainage Canal takes 10,000 cubic feet that otherwise would be available at the falls, and the privilege of exporting 160,000 horse power from Canada to the United States is equal to the diverting of 12,000 cubic feet of water per second. This leaves 24,000 cubic feet per second for use in Canada, and including the Chicago canal, 42,000 cubic feet absorbed by the United States. These calculations explain the remark by an American Commissioner that Canada's advantage was more apparent than real. Such examples show the nature of the information that has been carefully compiled under the Commission in a work of 400 pages ,including all necessary charts, diagrams and tables. The greater part of the work has been written by Mr. White, who has contributed the introductory portion and the sections dealing with Ontario, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, and New Brunswick. He has also compiled the comprehensive bibliography and selected the material for the appendices. As an accurate scientific treatise it will help to correct extravagantly hopeful estimates and fully reveal all waiting possibilities.—Globe.

LOCAL TRENT VALLEY TEAM WILL BATTLE TO-NIGHT

There is considerable rivalry between the two local teams in this district of the Trent Valley League, which should make the League fixture between T. A. S. and All Saints at Brock Street Rink to-night well worth seeing. Both line-ups look strong on paper and it promises to be one hot little game. Although the weather is mild outside Manager Jack Thirnbeck has a splendid sheet of ice ready for the teams, and everything points to a great contest. The teams will line up as follows:

GAME OF SEASON WHEN TRENTON PLAYS HERE

The next O.H.A. home game will be played at Brock street rink next Tuesday night, when the speedy Trenton team, Peterborough's old rivals, will clash with the blue and white aggregation. This is the game the fans have been waiting for all season, and there promises to be a record crowd in attendance. Peterborough in order to hold Lindsay, will have to win both the Trenton games, and the local team is going into the game determined to pull out a victory.

BEAR CATS EXCURSION TO COBOURG ON MONDAY

The Peterborough Hockey Club will run an excursion to Cobourg next Monday, when the Bear Cats play the return game with the Cobourg Juniors. This will be the most important game in the district series and a win for Peterborough will give them the district honours. A large number of fans have signified their intention of accompanying the Bear Cats to the Lake Shore town, and they will be pleased to learn that a special train has been secured. The train will leave the G. T. R. station at 7 o'clock sharp, returning immediately after the game. A round-trip fare of $1.25 with a 66 cent rate for children, has been secured.

LINDSAY JUNIORS ARE OUT

Lindsay's Junior O. H. A. team has dropped out of the district. The O.H.A. has been notified to this effect as well as Cobourg and Port Hope teams. The reason for the withdrawal is due to the fact that Callaghan has been banned and Dennison is playing Intermediate.—Lindsay Post.

LOCAL CURLERS LOSE TO LINDSAY

After qualifying in the preliminary games for this district (No. 2) in the competition for the Ontario Tankard, Peterborough lost to Lindsay in the finals by 15 shots yesterday afternoon. The local brithers played well and for the first half of the game, honours were equally divided, but towards the finish, Skips Flavelle and Little of Lindsay put a crimp in Peterborough's possibility of winning, by some fine shooting. This means that Lindsay will now have to hook up with the Toronto Granites, the present owners of the Ontario silverware, the latter having won it for three successive years. Last year Lindsay was the last competing club, losing to the Granites of Toronto by five shots.

The rinks who lined up for the finals were:

Lindsay		Peterborough.
R. Butler		W. Reid
F. Carew		T. B. Yeates
L. V. O'Connor		R. Hicks
J. D. Flavelle		Wm. Lang
Skip	16	Skip 10
W. E. Reesor		H. Wightman
M. H. Sisson		H. Foot
T. Burke		R. M. Waddell
Geo. A. Little		G. H. Giroux
Skip	19	Skip 10
	35	20

Lindsay was 15 shots up.

Mr. W. G. Read was loud in his praises of the treatment accorded the local curlers by the Lindsayites, during their two days' stay in Mudville. He says that they were outclassed in many respects by the superior playing ability of their opponents. This fact, coupled with the poor quality of the ice, was largely responsible for their defeat.

All members who can possibly do so, are specially requested to meet at the Oriental on Sunday next at 10.30 a.m., and accompany the Scottish curlers to Knox church, where a special service will be held.

A SEVERE COLD

DEVELOPED INTO

PNEUMONIA.

Doctors Said He Would Not Live.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP Cured Him.

Too much stress cannot be laid on the fact that when a person catches cold it must be attended to immediately, or serious results are liable to follow.

There is only one way to prevent pneumonia, and that is, to cure the cold just as soon as it appears.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will do this quickly and effectively.

Mr. Hugh McLeod, Esterhazy, Sask., writes:—"My little boy took a very severe cold, and it developed into pneumonia. The doctor said he would not live. I got some of your Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and he began to improve. Now, he is a strong healthy child, and shows no sign of it coming back."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Are Out After The Petes Now

Lindsay to Devote Their Efforts to Beat Peterborough Out For District

The news of the victory caused great rejoicing among the local fans and today the individual members of the team are being showered with congratulations. Their stock has gone up considerably and the citizens are behind them more than ever. The Post believes that the boys will not rest on their laurels; but will get down to practice for the games with Belleville and Peterborough. The Petes must meet Lindsay on local ice and this will be a struggle worth watching. We feel confident that the locals will triumph, but they must prepare for the contest by practising as often as possible.—Lindsay Post.

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

Norm. H. Armstrong, Trenton is said to be one of the best hockey players in the East. He plays cover-point for the junior team, and is a fine skater and stick handler, with a most effective shot. Chaucer Elliott says he is another Fred Taylor, whom he resembles very much.—Toronto Star.

Many uncomplimentary remarks have been heard among local hockey fans this morning at the action of the Lindsay junior O.H.A. team in dropping out of the series and defaulting their two games with Cobourg. It looks unsportsmanlike to say the least for a team to drop out when they have even a fighting chance, and it is certainly peculiar that the Midgets did not at least play their home game with Cobourg to-night. By defaulting they make a present of the game to Cobourg, while the Bear Cats had to fight like their namesakes, to carry off the honours. Lindsay's action makes it necessary for the Petes to beat Cobourg in Cobourg and the Bear Cats are determined to accomplish the feat.

The McGill Daily, the official publication of the McGill University students, has the following to say of Charlie Ray of Peterborough, who is turning out with the McGill senior team:

"Of the new men, Ray showed up the best. He is what is commonly called a "bush leaguer," that is to say he has learned to play the game in a small rink where a man does not get a chance to develop his skating. When he goes down the ice his arms and legs take up all kinds of positions, none of which are pretty, but he handles his stick well and follows the puck something after the fashion in which "Baldy" Forbes used to go after the football.

Ray, the new man, looks to be a find, and when he learns how to skate, will be a valuable man, as he is a worker all the time. Ray is going fast and before the season is over will be heard from.

On Saturday evening between the hours of 5 and 6 on the Sacred Heart rink, there was played one of the most exciting as well as the most polite games of hockey that has ever been witnessed by a vast throng of hockey enthusiasts, between the Meterites and Armatures of C.G.E. The Meterites succeeded in putting it all over the Arms to the tune of 5-3. The score would have been much larger had not the Meterites slacked off in the last half, showing considerable mercy to their already vanquished opponents. Line-up:

Cook	Goal	McArthur
Williams	Point	Flowers
LePlante	Cover-point	Moeller
Parks	Centre	Mowry
Cahill	Right Wing	Hatcher
Ferguson	Left Wing	Thompson

G. Barrie supervised the game to the entire satisfaction of both parties. LePlante being the only one penalized shortly after apologized for the offence. During the first half the puck succeeded in eluding both sides, but Bonner suggested getting the shovel, which proved successful in ressurecting it from a neighbouring snow drift.

Mickie Williams, for the winners, was the shining light. During the closing exercises of the game a number of the Arm's got cold feet and went off the ice whispering, "It's no use."

Any team thinking they can play hockey, please communicate with Manager Carey, Meterites, C.G.E.

Time—Between 10 and 11 p.m. last night.

Place—Brock street.

Result—Seven deaths and none left to be injured.

What proved to be the most fatal and gruesome scene in the history of Peterborough was presented on the Brock street rink lastenight, when the G.T.R. special, consisting of seven wicked cars, while speeding at a mile a minute clip, clashed an aggregation of the C.P.R. slow freight with the result that the Grand Trunks carried off the laurel wreath by 7 to 4.

The Trunks let their poor opponents get a little steam up at first and then cutting themselves loose, banged in one after the other until they had the C.P.R.'s so terribly bawled up as to cause them to be completely side-tracked. For the winners it would be hard to specialize, so speedy was the forward line, who shared the goals evenly, and so well did the defence perform. Honourable mention may be made of 'Leo' Sullivan, whose sizzling, dazzling rushes, jumping and stick-handling, were a few of his prominent features. He has been busy receiving compliments from all parts of the globe, even France.

For the losers, great sympathy is expressed and no doubt the king will send a cablegram of condolence, which will likely reach Peterborough to-day. It would indeed be a hard task to pick out a good player from the bereaved ones, although Holiman performed most creditably in goal and had it not been for him, the result would have been another touch of the dope the Intermediates dished out to Belleville on Tuesday night.

B. A. Rose, who made a splendid official as ticker handler, was also kept busy reserving berths on the Lindsay special for the rough ones who would not take the advice of "Mart" Kennealy who, by the way, tolled the cow-bell to the satisfaction of both the large crowd present and the players. Following is the line-up:

Goal
All Stops Made Palmer,
Block the Road Holiman,
Point
Through Freight Sullivan,
Behind Time Carey,
Cover-Point
Over-heated Carpenter
Up-grade Howard,
Rover
Main Line Martin (capt.),
Mixed Brooks (capt.)
Centre
Sixty Mile Per Hr. Merryfield,
Side-tracked Jameson,
Right Wing
International Limited Harper,
Break-down Tully,
Left Wing
Baggage Juggler Zealand,
Speeder Edwards,

One would have thought the limit had been reached in the Belleville-Peterborough game of the other night, but the Belleville Intelligencer's report of the game shows that the Belleville team has nothing on the Intelligencer when it comes to handing out funny hockey stuff. The following would send a quiver of merriment through an Egyptian mummy:

The Intermediate game at Peterborough last night was made a burlesque of by Lafleur, the Belleville goalkeeper. After twenty minutes' play, the score then being 1 to 0 in favour of Belleville, Referee Burgoyne credited Peterborough with a goal, which Lafleur disputed, and thereafter refused to defend his goal, standing outside the posts and making no move to stop the puck. Under these circumstances the score of 30 to 1 is not to be wondered at.

The Belleville Ontario philosophically says:

"And what they fought each other for,
I never could make out."

Said old Kasper in the poem. Neither can anyone understand why the Belleville Intermediates went out to Peterborough to the slaughter.

Quickest, Surest Cough Remedy Ever Used

Stops Even Whooping Cough Quickly—A Family Supply for 50c—Money Refunded if it Fails.

If someone in your family has an obstinate, deep-seated cough—even whooping cough—which has yielded slowly to treatment, buy a 50-cent bottle of Pinex and watch that cough vanish. If it fails, money back promptly, and without argument.

A 50-cent bottle of Pinex, when mixed with home-made sugar syrup, makes 16 ounces—a family supply—of the most effective cough remedy that money can buy, at a saving of $2. Gives instant relief and will usually wipe out a bad cough in 24 hours or less. Easily prepared in five minutes—directions in package.

Pinex Cough Syrup has a pleasant taste—children take it willingly. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative—both good features. Splendid for croup, hoarseness, throat tickle, incipient lung troubles, and a prompt, successful remedy for whooping cough.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway White Pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other elements which are so healing to the membranes. Simply mix it with sugar syrup or strained honey, in a 16-oz. bottle, and it is ready for use. Used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

PUGILISM

From all appearances fight promoters are taking desperate chances eventually to divest Jack Johnson of his title, and, says the Detroit Free Press, the recent matching of Jim Flynn with the negro champion only strengthens the belief. Practically anybody who has had any experience in the game and has shown before the public any length of time will get a chance to show what he can do toward solving the question that has been before the Caucasian race ever since Jim Jeffries went down to an inglorious defeat before Johnson at Reno, Nev., July 4, 1910.

Were Johnson a white man, there would be no excuse for the matchmakers even thinking of matching Flynn with him. But Jack, being an unpopular champion because of his colour, is doomed to defeat sooner or later, and, if his tumble from the throne can be brought about within the next year, it will be all the more gratifying to those who are anxious to see the trick turned.

The big fellow's actions ever since he rose to the heights of pugilistic greatness haven't been of such merit as to warrant the elevation of the game in the eyes of the so-called reformers, and if another can be planted in the position now possessed by the negro it is believed by many that some of the reflection on the cleanness of the game will be eliminated.

JUST A STARTER.

It is the common opinion that the proposed matching of Flynn and Johnson is just the first of a number of bouts that will follow. Fight critics are inclined to believe that anybody who shows an aptness for the game, a good physique, and can be taught to punch with sufficient power to be dangerous, will be shunted into the ropes to give the champion battle.

The time isn't very far distant anyway when Johnson will outlive his usefulness in the game, but the quicker the proper man can hasten his elimination the sooner the sport will progress. Jack will be 34 years old March 31, an age at which many famous fighters before him were defeated and retired to the simple life. Johnson, too, has lived far from a clean life in his chase for publicity, the rumbling of the milk wagons having been his curfew bell on many occasions.

Still, when one comes to look over the field of challengers, it is hard to see where Johnson is in any immediate danger of falling off the high pedestal. It is admitted that Flynn is the best of the crop and stands most chance of stopping Johnson, but where is there a student of the art who would be willing to wager that Flynn will be the next champion?

ONLY HOPE FOR FLYNN.

About the only way Flynn or his supporters can hope to win is to drug Johnson the night of the bout or feed him poison just before bell time for the first round. Flynn never was better than a trial horse, and on several occasions he has proved a poor one at that. Sam Langford knocked him cold in a round in one of their meetings and could have done the trick another time had the Boston Tar Baby not preferred to let the Pueblo man make a decent showing before his friends.

Just because Flynn beat lumbering Al Kaufman and the novice, Carl Morris doesn't mean necessarily that he is any better to-day than he was when Langford destroyed him with a punch. He lives directly against nature's dictates, as sportsmen of Milwaukee will vouch for. For several months after the Kaufman contest Flynn lay around the Cream City enlarging the income of the cafe proprietors in Coal Oil Johnny fashion, and when he was offered the match in New York with Morris, friends had to brace him up for the affair.

Then how can any sane person predict anything but a victory for the present champion. If Johnson tries, it wouldn't be surprising if the ex-fireman went out before the tenth round expires. And to think that the big black is to get a fortune of $30,000 for that! But it shows what the promoters are willing to do to satisfy their whims, or else money is more plentiful than dirt in Nevada.

IS DETERMINED MAN.

One thing the public must give Johnson credit for is his determination to get what he goes after. Ever since Tommy Burns demanded $30,000 for a meeting with Johnson after being cornered in Australia, following his race around the world with Johnson in pursuit of him, the idea that Jack could do the same thing if he ever won the title became fixed in his mind, and he is putting the theory into effect with a vengeance.

What a difference a few years will make! Not more than five years ago Johnson was begging for work with little or no success, and times were hard for him indeed. He was lucky if he had enough cash in his jeans to purchase a man-sized meal and it is said that he welcomed the occasions when he could put his ham-like hand on some free lunch counter to satisfy his hunger.

To-day promoters are begging Jack to show himself at their clubs, even meeting his demands for appearance, all of which goes to show that the life of a champion is a great thing. But like many before him, Johnson is letting his wealth sift through his fingers and at his present rate of travel it won't be long before he must drop from the public eye, probably to die a pauper and a burden to his friends like Peter Jackson before him.

LOCAL TRENT VALLEY TEAM WILL BATTLE TO-NIGHT

There is considerable rivalry between the two local teams in this district of the Trent Valley League, which should make the League fixture between T. A. S. and All Saints at Brock Street Rink to-night well worth seeing. Both line-ups look strong on paper and it promises to be one hot little game. Although the weather is mild outside Manager Jack Thirnbeck has a splendid sheet of ice ready for the teams, and everything points to a great contest. The teams will line up as follows:

GAME OF SEASON WHEN TRENTON PLAYS HERE

The next O.H.A. home game will be played at Brock street rink next Tuesday night, when the speedy Trenton team, Peterborough's old rivals, will clash with the blue and white aggregation. This is the game the fans have been waiting for all season, and there promises to be a record crowd in attendance. Peterborough in order to hold Lindsay, will have to win both the Trenton games, and the local team is going into the game determined to pull out a victory.

BEAR CATS EXCURSION TO COBOURG ON MONDAY

The Peterborough Hockey Club will run an excursion to Cobourg next Monday, when the Bear Cats play the return game with the Cobourg Juniors. This will be the most important game in the district series and a win for Peterborough will give them the district honours. A large number of fans have signified their intention of accompanying the Bear Cats to the Lake Shore town, and they will be pleased to learn that a special train has been secured. The train will leave the G. T. R. station at 7 o'clock sharp, returning immediately after the game. A round-trip fare of $1.25 with a 65 cent rate for children, has been secured.

LINDSAY JUNIORS ARE OUT

Lindsay's Junior O. H. A. team has dropped out of the district. The O.H.A. has been notified to this effect as well as Cobourg and Port Hope teams. The reason for the withdrawal is due to the fact that Callaghan has been banned and Dennison is playing Intermediate.—Lindsay Post.

LOCAL CURLERS LOSE TO LINDSAY

After qualifying in the preliminary games for this district (No. 2) in the competition for the Ontario Tankard, Peterborough lost to Lindsay in the finals by 15 shots yesterday afternoon. The local brithers played well and for the first half of the game, honours were equally divided, but towards the finish, Skips Flavelle and Little of Lindsay put a crimp in Peterborough's possibility of winning, by some fine shooting. This means that Lindsay will now have to hook up with the Toronto Granites, the present owners of the Ontario silverware, the latter having won it for three successive years. Last year Lindsay was the last competing club, losing to the Granites of Toronto by five shots.

The rinks who lined up for the finals were:

Lindsay		Peterborough.
R. Butler		W. Reid
F. Carew		T. B. Yeates
L. V. O'Connor		R. Hicks
J. D. Flavelle		Wm. Laug
Skip	16	Skip	10
W. E. Reesor		H. Wightman
M. H. Sisson		H. Foot
T. Burke		R. M. Waddell
Geo. A. Little		G. H. Giroux
Skip	19	Skip	10
	35		20

Lindsay was 15 shots up.

Mr. W. G. Read was loud in his praises of the treatment accorded the local curlers by the Lindsayites, during their two days' stay in Madville. He says that they were outclassed in many respects by the superior playing ability of their opponents. This fact, coupled with the poor quality of the ice, was largely responsible for their defeat.

All members who can possibly do so, are specially requested to meet at the Oriental on Sunday next at 10.30 a.m., and accompany the Scottish curlers to Knox church, where a special service will be held.

A SEVERE COLD DEVELOPED INTO PNEUMONIA.

Doctors Said He Would Not Live.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP Cured Him.

Too much stress cannot be laid on the fact that when a person catches cold it must be attended to immediately, or serious results are liable to follow.

There is only one way to prevent pneumonia, and that is, to cure the cold just as soon as it appears.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will do this quickly and effectively.

Mr. Hugh McLeod, Esterhazy, Sask., writes:—"My little boy took a very severe cold, and it developed into pneumonia. The doctor said he would not live. I got some of your Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and he began to improve. Now, he is a strong healthy child, and shows no sign of it coming back."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Are Out After The Petes Now

Lindsay to Devote Their Efforts to Beat Peterborough Out For District

The news of the victory caused great rejoicing among the local fans and today the individual members of the team are being showered with congratulations. Their stock has gone up considerably and the citizens are behind them more than ever. The Post believes that the boys will not rest on their laurels, but will get down to practice for the games with Belleville and Peterborough. The Petes must meet Lindsay on local ice and this will be a struggle worth watching. We feel confident that the locals will triumph, but they must prepare for the contest by practising as often as possible.—Lindsay Post.

How to Remove Warts By a Painless Remedy

Dont' allow these unsightly excrescenses to spoil the beauty of your hands or arms. Remove them painlessly and for all time by applying Putnam's Painless Corn and Wart Extractor. Failure impossible, results always sure with Putnam's Corn and Wart Extractor. Refuse any substitute for Putnam's, it does the trick in one night. Price 25c. at druggists.

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

Norm. H. Armstrong, Trenton is said to be one of the best hockey players in the East. He plays cover-point for the junior team, and is a fine skater and stick handler, with a most effective shot. Chaucer Elliott says he is another Fred Taylor, whom he resembles very much.—Toronto Star.

Many uncomplimentary remarks have been heard among local hockey fans this morning at the action of the Lindsay junior O.H.A. team in dropping out of the series and defaulting their two games with Cobourg. It looks unsportsmanlike to say the least for a team to drop out when they have even a fighting chance, and it is certainly peculiar that the Midgets did not at least play their home game with Cobourg to-night. By defaulting they make a present of the game to Cobourg, while the Bear Cats had to fight like their namesakes, to carry off the honours. Lindsay's action makes it necessary for the Petes to beat Cobourg in Cobourg and the Bear Cats are determined to accomplish the feat.

The McGill Daily, the official publication of the McGill University students, has the following to say of Charlie Ray of Peterborough, who is turning out with the McGill senior team:

"Of the new men, Ray showed up the best. He is what is commonly called a "bush leaguer," that is to say he has learned to play the game in a small rink where a man does not get a chance to develop his skating. When he goes down the ice his arms and legs take up all kinds of positions, none of which are pretty, but he handles his stick well and follows the puck something after the fashion in which "Baldy" Forbes used to go after the football.

Ray, the new man, looks to be a find, and when he learns how to skate, will be a valuable man, as he is a worker all the time. Ray is going fast and before the season is over will be heard from.

On Saturday evening between the hours of 5 and 6 on the Sacred Heart rink, there was played one of the most exciting as well as the most polite games of hockey that has ever been witnessed by a vast throng of hockey enthusiasts, between the Meterites and Armatures of C.G.E. The Meterites succeeded in putting it all over the Arms to the tune of 5-3. The score would have been much larger had not the Meterites slacked off in the last half, showing considerable mercy to their already vanquished opponents. Line-up:

Cook	Goal	McArthur
Williams	Point	Flowers
LePlante	Cover-point	Moeller
Parks	Centre	Mowry
Ferguson	Left Wing	Thompson

G. Barrie supervised the game to the entire satisfaction of both parties, LePlante being the only one penalised shortly after apologised for the offence. During the first half the puck succeeded in eluding both sides, but Bonner suggested getting the shovel, which proved successful in ressurecting it from a neighbouring snow drift.

Mickie Williams, for the winners, was the shining light. During the closing exercises of the game a number of the Arm's got cold feet and went off the ice whispering, "It's no use."

Any team thinking they can play hockey, please communicate with Manager Carey, Meterites, C.G.E.

Time—Between 10 and 11 p.m. last night.

Place—Brock street.

Result—Seven deaths and none left to be injured.

What proved to be the most fatal and gruesome scene in the history of Peterborough was presented on the Brock street rink last night, when the G.T.R. special, consisting of seven wicked cars, while speeding at a mile a minute clip, clashed an aggregation of the C.P.R. slow freight with the result that the Grand Trunks carried off the laurel wreath by 7 to 6.

The Trunks let their poor opponents get a little steam up at first and when cutting themselves loose, banged in one after the other until they had the C.P.R.'s so terribly bawled up as to cause them to be completely side-tracked. For the winners it would be hard to specialize, so speedy was the forward line, who shared the goals evenly, and so well did the defence perform. Honourable mention may be made of Leo Sullivan, whose sizzling, dazzling rushes, jumping and stick-handling, were a few of his prominent features. He has been busy receiving compliments from all parts of the globe, even France.

For the losers, great sympathy is expressed and no doubt the king will send a cablegram of condolence, which will likely reach Peterborough to-day. It would indeed be a hard task to pick out a good player from the berserved ones, although Holiman performed most creditably in goal and had it not been for him, the result would have been another touch of the dope the Intermediates dished out to Belleville on Tuesday night.

B. A. Rose, who made a splendid official as ticker handler, was also kept busy reserving berths on the Lindsay special for the rough ones who would not take the advice of "Mart" Kennealy who, by the way, tolled the cow-bell to the satisfaction of both the large crowd present and the players. Following is the line-up:

Goal
All Stops Made Palmer,
Block the Road-Holiman,
Point
Through Freight Sullivan,
Behind Time Carey,
Cover-Point
Over-heated Carpenter
Up-grade Howard,
Rover
Main Line Martin (capt.),
Mixed Brooks (capt.)
Centre
Sixty Mile Per Hr. Merryfield,
Side-tracked Jameson,
Right Wing
International Limited Harper,
Break-down Tully,
Left Wing
Baggage Juggler Zealand,
Speeder Edwards,

One would have thought the limit had been reached in the Belleville-Peterborough game of the other night, but the Belleville Intelligencer's report of the game shows that the Belleville team has nothing on the Intelligencer when it comes to handing out funny hockey stuff. The following would send a quiver of merriment through an Egyptian mummy:

The Intermediate game at Peterborough last night was made a burlesque of by Lafleur, the Belleville goalkeeper. After twenty minutes' play, the score then being 1 to 0 in favour of Belleville, Referee Burgoyne credited Peterborough with a goal, which Lafleur disputed, and thereafter refused to defend his goal, standing outside the posts and making no move to stop the puck. Under these circumstances the score of 30 to 1 is not to be wondered at.

The Belleville Ontario philosophically says:

"And what they fought each other for,
I never could make out."

Said old Kasper in the poem. Neither can anyone understand why the Belleville Intermediates went out to Peterborough to the slaughter.

Quickest, Surest Cough Remedy Ever Used

Stops Even Whooping Cough Quickly—A Family Supply for 50c—Money Refunded if it Fails.

If someone in your family has an obstinate, deep-seated cough—even whooping cough—which has yielded slowly to treatment, buy a 50-cent bottle of Pinex and watch that cough vanish. If it fails, money back promptly, and without argument.

A 50-cent bottle of Pinex, when mixed with home-made sugar syrup, makes 16 ounces—a family supply—of the most effective cough remedy that money can buy, at a saving of $2. Gives instant relief and will usually wipe out a bad cough in 24 hours or less. Easily prepared in five minutes—directions in package.

Pinex Cough Syrup has a pleasant taste—children take it willingly. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative—both good features. Splendid for croup, hoarseness, throat tickle, incipient lung troubles, and a prompt, successful remedy for whooping cough.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway White Pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other elements which are so healing to the membranes. Simply mix it with sugar syrup or strained honey, in a 16-oz. bottle, and it is ready for use. Used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

PUGILISM

From all appearances fight promoters are taking desperate chances eventually to divest Jack Johnson of his title, and, says the Detroit Free Press, the recent matching of Jim Flynn with the negro champion only strengthens the belief. Practically anybody who has had any experience in the game and has shown before the public any length of time will get a chance to show what he can do toward solving the question that has been before the Caucasian race ever since Jim Jeffries went down to an inglorious defeat before Johnson at Reno, Nev., July 4, 1910.

Were Johnson a white man, there would be no excuse for the matchmakers even thinking of matching Flynn with him. But Jack, being an unpopular champion because of his colour, is doomed to defeat sooner or later, and, if his tumble from the throne can be brought about within the next year, it will be all the more gratifying to those who are anxious to see the trick turned.

The big fellow's actions ever since he rose to the heights of pugilistic greatness haven't been of such merit as to warrant the elevation of the game in the eyes of the so-called reformers, and if another can be planted in the position now possessed by the negro it is believed by many that some of the reflection on the cleanness of the game will be eliminated.

JUST A STARTER.

It is the common opinion that the proposed matching of Flynn and Johnson is just the first of a number of bouts that will follow. Fight critics are inclined to believe that anybody who shows an aptness for the game, a good physique, and can be taught to punch with sufficient power to be dangerous, will be shunted into the ropes to give the champion battle.

The time isn't very far distant anyway when Johnson will outlive his usefulness in the game, but the quicker the proper man can hasten his elimination the sooner the sport will progress. Jack will be 34 years old March 31, an age at which many famous fighters before him were defeated and retired to the simple life. Johnson, too, has lived far from a clean life in his chase for publicity, the rumbling of the milk wagons having been his curfew bell on many occasions.

Still, when one comes to look over the field of challengers, it is hard to see where Johnson is in any immediate danger of falling off the high pedestal. It is admitted that Flynn is the best of the crop and stands most chance of stopping Johnson, but where is there a student of the art who would be willing to wager that Flynn will be the next champion?

ONLY HOPE FOR FLYNN.

About the only way Flynn or his supporters can hope to win is to drug Johnson the night of the bout or feed him poison just before bell time for the first round. Flynn never was better than a trial horse, and on several occasions he has proved a poor one at that. Sam Langford knocked him cold in a round in one of their meetings and could have done the trick another time had the Boston Tar Baby not preferred to let the Pueblo man make a decent showing before his friends.

Just because Flynn beat lumbering Al Kaufman and the novice, Carl Morris doesn't mean necessarily that he is any better to-day than he was when Langford destroyed him with a punch. He lives directly against nature's dictates, as sportsmen of Milwaukee will vouch for. For several months after the Kaufman contest Flynn lay around the Cream City enlarging the income of the cafe proprietors in Coal Oil Johnny fashion, and when he was offered the match in New York with Morris, friends had to brace him up for the affair.

Then how can any sane person predict anything but a victory for the present champion. If Johnson tries, it wouldn't be surprising if the ex-fireman went out before the tenth round expires. And to think that the big black is to get a fortune of $30,000 for that! But it shows what the promoters are willing to do to satisfy their whims, or else money is more plentiful than dirt in Nevada.

IS DETERMINED MAN

One thing the public must give Johnson credit for is his determination to get what he goes after. Ever since Tommy Burns demanded $30,000 for a meeting with Johnson after being cornered in Australia, following his race around the world with Johnson in pursuit of him, the idea that Jack could do the same thing if he ever won the title became fixed in his mind, and he is putting the theory into effect with a vengeance.

What a difference a few years will make! Not more than five years ago Johnson was begging for work with little or no success, and times were hard for him indeed. He was lucky if he had enough cash in his jeans to purchase a man-sized meal and it is said that he welcomed the occasions when he could put his ham-like hand on some free lunch counter to satisfy his hunger.

To-day promoters are begging Jack to show himself at their clubs, even meeting his demands for appearance, all of which goes to show that the life of a champion is a great thing. But like many before him, Johnson is letting his wealth sift through his fingers and at his present rate of travel it won't be long before he must drop from the public eye, probably to die a pauper and a burden to his friends like Peter Jackson before him.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"For the great men are modest, because they continually compare themselves, not with other men, but with that idea of the perfect which they have before their minds."—Milton.

It has always seemed to me that the blind bard might well have added that the great men were great for the same reason that they were modest.

I wan to tell you to-day a little story about a certain great woman I have had the privilege of knowing.

I call her "great" and perhaps you are waiting to hear some famous name, but I don't use the term in just that way. For she has "spent herself in channels which had no great name on earth." But, she IS great just the same, even if nobody knows it.

This woman, who is now about fifty years old, has brought up a family of seven children. And not only has she been one of the finest of house-mothers to them, but she has also frequently been the financial head of the family. She has been in several times of work, literary and otherwise, and she says to-day, proudly and with absolute truth, "So far, I have never failed."

She has at different times earned a salary of over twenty-five hundred a year, which, if you will recall statistics I have formerly given you, is over twice the wage of the average man. Furthermore, she did not have a college course or any specific training—only an ordinary high-school education.

Of course, the natural explanation of such a career is that she has an unusually god mind. Yes, she has that. But I don't think it is chiefly that which has made her success possible. There are many qualities which have helped—a splendid energy, an unusual definiteness and practicality, a never-flagging perseverance and an agreeable personality, have all played their parts. But the quality which has had the most to do with making this woman successful in whatever she turned her hand to, I think is just this "a passion for perfection."

I worked with her once and I have good reason to know. At the time I often smarted and sometimes rebelled at the exactions which she laid upon us both, but now I only wish I had been with her longer.

She never tried to do her work just so that it would "get by". Her superiors were usually her inferiors, and she might have done less careful work and still been praised. But she wasn't working primarily for them or their praise—she was working for herself and her own praise, and her ideal was not to have things "do" but to have them "right."

And the result was that she can say now, "I never failed".

I wish that every girl in this city who is starting on a business or professional career might work under that woman for a few weeks. I am sure she would be a better worker for it all her life.

Everyone cannot have remarkable brains. Everyone cannot have personal charm or ingenuity or manual cleverness, but everyone may have that splendid spur—"a passion for perfection". And, believe me, no one who has that will ever fall behind into the ranks of the futile and mediocre folks.

YOUNG PEOPLE JOURNEY TO EMILY

A 'bus load of young people journeyed from this city to Emily L.O.L. Hall, No. 294, last evening, where they participated in the festivities of the evening, consisting of a basket social and concert. Despite the bad condition of the roads there was a large turnout of people. Mr. W. Howden acted as auctioneer, and needless to say performed his duties to the satisfaction of all concerned.

A vote of thanks was passed to the visiting friends and the talent from Peterborough, which was so largely represented on the programme.

INJURED IN UPSET

Party of Young People Had Thrilling Experience Last Night

A serious accident was miraculously averted last night on the fourth line of Smith, when a sleigh upset, in which were crowded a party of young people from the city. One of the young ladies, unfortunately got caught somehow in the sleigh when it was turning and was held under there, until extricated by the young men of the party. She escaped with slight injuries, including a bad bruise on the face, where some of the party had accidentally kicked her during the mix-up.

Lost His Hair, Beard and Mustache

Terrible Plight of a Pennsylvania Man Reported by a Prominent Citizen

"About two years ago my hair, beard and mustache started to come out in spots. These spots were entirely bare of hair.

Seeing PARISIAN SAGE advertised, I purchased four bottles and after using two of the bottles, the hair came in until now I have as good a head of hair as I had before this trouble started.

I can truthfully recommend this preparation to any one for what it is recommended for. Sam Galder, Jamison City, Col. Co., Pa. Oct 11, 1911."

Please bear in mind that PARISIAN SAGE is not guaranteed to grow hair on bald heads.

In Mr. Galder's case the hair root was not dead and there is no good reason why PARISIAN SAGE should not do just what he writes it did.

"The next time Mr. Galder came in to my store after purchasing the PARISIAN SAGE," writes the druggist who sold him, "his appearance was so changed I did not know him."

PARISIAN SAGE is without doubt the most efficient hair grower, beautifier and dandruff cure in the world, and people who are wasting time with ordinary commercial tonics should wake up.

PARISIAN SAGE will banish dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp; will put life, lustre and beauty into faded hair, or money back. It is a most delightful and refreshing tonic for men, women and children. Large bottle 50 cents at Wm. Madill's and druggists the country over.

Industrial Advancement and Growth of the City

Article No. 5

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In the letters I have written I have indicated some of the advantages that Peterborough possesses. Le us now look at some of the things that have been accomplished—at the advancement that has been made.

In the past ten years this city has grown faster than in any previous decade, although its growth has always been steady. The assessor's figures show an increase of population in that time of 70 per cent.; the census returns show 63 per cent. The increase of population in the Dominion was 32 per cent., and in the Province of Ontario 13 per cent. so Peterborough, with 63 per cent. seems to have got its share.

Of the cities of Ontario, only four showed a more rapid growth than Peterborough during that period. One of these was Toronto, with 80 per cent.; two others were Fort William and Port Arthur, in which the circumstances were exceptional, and the fourth is Niagara Falls, when amalgamation accounts for part of the addition. When Peterborough has grown more rapidly than Hamilton, London, Brantford, Windsor Guelph, Galt, and the other western cities, it has nothing to complain of In eastern Ontario urban growth was slower than in western Ontario. Kingston's increase of population was only five per cent., and Belleville's 8 per cent., showing that Peterborough outstripped the other eastern cities by great strides.

The building permits record gives similar evidence of advancement. Building permits were not issued in Peterborough until 1907, and the record during the past few years has been:

In 1908	$238,983
1909	343,499
1910	517,958
1911 (11 months)	341,357

New factory buildings and additions to others are erected, and some of them scarcely noticed by the people generally. Within a short period several such buildings have been constructed. Among these, last year the Canadian General Electric Co put up a large building, the Quaker Oats Co. two buildings; B. F. Ackerman, Son & Co., a large addition; the Peterborough Canoe Co., a substantial building, the Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Co., an addition and Adam Hall, a new factory building.

Within the year the Canadian Canoe Co. has erected a large, new building, as has also the Canadian Chicle Co., and the Peterborough Creamery and Adam Hall have put up additions. The Bonner-Worth Co. erected a building for their new industry, and the Model Foundry and Pump Works and the Diamond Wire Mattress Co. occupied premises with new industries.

Other enlargements are contemplated and will probably be proceeded with in the spring. I do not profess that this covers all that has been done in the line of new concerns or factory enlargement, but it shows very creditable progress in manufacturing. When a citizen of another city tells of what has been done there one is apt to consider it good progress, and may mentally compare it with what has been done in his own city, to its disparagement, but does so because he does not know what the names of concerns in the other place represent, and because he has not kept himself informed, or has not borne in mind what has been done in his own city.

How many of us, if asked, could give a fair idea of the number of factories in operation in Peterborough? A count brings to mind over fifty, and some of these are among the largest in the Dominion.

The number of factories, and the industrial advancement, the building record and the increase in population in Peterborough, in recent years, are very encouraging, and should be an incentive to the citizens to work together to have this rapid progress continue, for it demonstrates that Peterborough is admirably situated for manufacturing.

Yours truly,
Civis Sum.

NEW LAKE SHORE ROUTE OF C.P.R.

Lindsay Post Thinks Peterborough Will Not be "Side-tracked" as Stated by The Telegram

WILL ALWAYS BE MAIN LINE

(Lindsay Post)

The news article republished a few days ago in the Post from the Toronto Telegram, respecting the proposed new C.P.R. Lake Shore line, was incomplete and incorrect in some of its details and conclusions. For instance, Peterborough will not be "side tracked" in the sense intimated by the Telegram, for Peterborough will always be on a main line, and therefore our good friends down by the Otonabee need not "throw fits" over the dismal prospect. It is quite likely that most of the big Pullman fast express trains will run by the shore line, but there will be more trains than ever to get to and from Peterborough.

It is also not quite correct to speak of the present main line—the section from Toronto to Smith's Falls—as a 'rough road". When it was surveyed and constructed it was a first-class line for the standards that then obtained, and is still a very good road. Bu there has been a great advance in railway building in the last quarter of a century, especially in regard to curves, grades, weight of rails, and other details. Mr. J. J. Hill, of the Great Northern, was the first to make a practical demonstration of these important improvements on an extensive scale, and while construction outlay is far greater, and sometimes enormous, the advantages in maintenance and in operating at a profit are notable. The new Georgian Bay section through Lindsay is built up to the highest standard, and he section from Smith's Falls to Montreal recently double-tracked and improved, is in the same high rank. Sir Thomas Shaughnessay recently stated that a grain train of twice the tonnage or twice the number of cars could be hauled over the G. B. section and the Smith's Falls-Montreal division, as compared with the Peterborough Smith's Falls' section. The train going over the latter section would have to be cut in two or hauled by two big moguls. The improvements of the main line from Smith's Falls to Toronto to the highest standard is one of those problems that will undoubtedly be solved within the next ten years.

In the meantime the immediate construction of the Lake Shore line has, we have reason to state, been decided upon, and the letting of contracts and actual work on the early stages may soon be announced. The surveyors' plans have been ready for a long time, and some questions of detail having been decided this fall, the usual necessary steps in filing the plans have been taken and must be by this time about completed. The new Lake Shore line will, we understand leave the main or old line at or near Glen Tay, about ten miles west of Perth, and proceed south westerly to a point at or near Belleville. Thence it will run through the towns and villages along the Lake Shore, among them being Trenton, Cobourg, Port Hope, Bowmanville, Oshawa nad Whitby, as close as possible to the business centres of each, and some distance west of Whitby it will turn off from the shore to join the main line not far from Agincourt, or between Agincourt and Leaside Junction. The line, in respect of grades, curves and rails, will be of the highest modern standard, and the passenger trains will be able to make a record for speed that will make an appreciable difference in the time from Montreal to Toronto. The Chicago-Montreal express trains will, it may be presumed, take this line, and so in all probability, will the new Montreal-St. Paul, Minn., Pullman express trains that will be put on next spring and run over the Georgian Bay line from Bethany Junction through Lindsay, to the Sudbury line at Coldwater, thence on to the "Soo".

Concurrently with the construction of the Lake Shore line the C.P.R. will build the short lines from Bethany Junction to Cobourg, and from Burketon to Oshawa, for which surveys ar now being made. These two lines will afford needed facilities for a large amount of local traffic in freight and passengers, and will prove very consistent and advantageous in working the main lines in many ways. All this important new work will be pushed on with characteristic C.P.R. energy and thoroughness during the present year, and the end of 1912 should see such progress made that things will be going in fine shape by the summer of 1913.

When these lines and connections are completed and local and through train service established say in 1913—Lindsay will be an important railway "hub" or centre on the C. P. R. system, and of being the central point of so many local C.P.R. lines, and train services, must be apparent to all, and will tend to give a very encouraging outlook to the next few years.

URIC ACID SUFFERING

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

FREE IF IT FAILS

Your Money Back if You Are Not Satisfied With the Medicine We Recommend.

We are so positive that our remedy will permanently relieve constipation, no matter how chronic it may be, that we offer to furnish the medicine at our expense should it fail to produce satisfactory results.

It is worse than useless to attempt to cure constipation with cathartic drugs. Laxatives or cathartics do much harm. They cause a reaction, irritate, and weaken the bowels and tend to make constipation more chronic. Besides, their use becomes a habit that is dangerous.

Constipation is caused by a weakness of the nerves and muscles of the large intestine or descending colon. To expect permanent relief you must therefore tone up and strengthen these organs and restore them to healthier activity.

We want you to try Rexall Orderlies on our recommendation. They are exceedingly pleasant to take, being eaten like candy, and are ideal for children, delicate persons, and old folks, as well as for the robust. They act directly on the nerves and muscles of the bowels. They apparently have a neutral action on other associate organs or glands. They do not purge, cause excessive looseness, nor create any inconvenience whatever. They may be taken at any time, day or night. They will positively relieve chronic or habitual constipation, if not of surgical variety, and the myriads of associate or dependent chronic ailments, if taken with regularity for a reasonable length of time. 12 tablets, 10 cents; 36 tablets, 25 cents; 80 tablets, 50 cents. Sold in Peterborough only at our store,—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

FIRE AT GOTHAM

NEW YORK, JAN. 17.—Gotham had more scorchings to-day, when the terminal storage warehouse, on North River water front, was a target for the fire fiend. The warehouse block and goods, valued at ten million dollars, were stored there. After the firemen had fought from midnight to daybreak, they succeeded in confining the fire to two sections with goods consigned to Wanamakers & Ginbel's departmental stores. The total loss is estimated at one and a quarter million dollars. The goods are partly insured.

There was also a stubborn fire in an alleged fire-proof Knickerbocker building, about a stone's throw from the Equitable ruins in the financial district. The damage is placed at $100,000.00.

When Limbs and Chest Ache

ZAM-BUK GIVES EASE QUICKLY

Have you got cold in your bones? Have you a bad attack of "general aching"? You know the feeling. Limbs ache, muscles seem to have become tired out, back aches, now and again a twinge of rheumatism strikes you here and there. Your chest feels tight and there is a pain between your shoulders.

Cold is responsible for this condition, and a vigorous application of Zam-Buk will put you right. Take a hot bath, and then rub your chest and the aching limbs well with Zam-Buk.

Mrs. B. Gorie, 76 Berkeley St., Toronto, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Zam-Buk. A few weeks ago I was suffering from a bad cold, which had settled in my throat, chest and limbs. I tried all kinds of remedies, new and old, and found very little relief until I used Zam-Buk. On applying this to my throat and chest I found such ease and relief from the tightness and soreness I determined to use only Zam-Buk. I also rubbed it on my limbs where I felt the rheumatic pains. In three days from the time I first began applying Zam-Buk I was free from the cold in throat and chest, and also the rheumatism in my limbs".

Zam-Buk will also be found a sure cure for cold sores, chapped hands, frost bite, ulcers, blood-poison, varicose sores, piles, scalp sores, ringworm, inflamed patches, babies' eruptions and chapped places, cuts, burns bruises and skin injuries generally. All druggists and stores sell at 50c box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. Avoid harmful imitations and substitutes.

WEDDING BELLS

SULLIVAN—YOUNG.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Martin's Church, Enniskmore, Rev. Father Fitzpatrick officiating, on Tuesday, Jan. 16th, at 9.30 o'clock, when Miss Minnie Young, one of Enniskmore's most respected teachers was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. P. G. Sullivan, a prosperous young merchant of Enniskmore. The bride, who was dressed in a dainty gown of white marquisette over white satin, with pearl trimmings, was assisted by her sister, Miss Lizzie Young, who was also very becomingly attired in a cream silk dress. The bride's hat was a pretty white velvet, with an elegant willow plume, while the bridesmaid's was a black picture hat. The groom was assisted by his cousin, Mr. Ed. Donoghue, while Miss Agnes Goodard cousin of the bride, played Mendelssohn's wedding march. After the ceremony the bridal party, followed by their friends, proceeded to the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Young, where a sumptuous wedding breakfast awaited them. Mrs. Young was assisted in her duties as hostess by Miss Clara, who was prettily attired in a simple gown of yellow satin.

The exceptional popularity of the young couple was shown by the numerous and costly presents received. The groom's gift to the bride was a silvermesh bag, and to the bridesmaid a dainty jewel case. The bride was also the recipient of a dainty five o'clock tea set and other useful articles, from her pupils.

Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan, accompanied by the bride's sister, Miss Clara Young of Toronto University, left on the 4.38 (C.P.R.) train for Detroit, where they will spend their honeymoon, with friends. The bride's travelling suit was a pretty brown tweed.

FITZPATRICK—O'LEARY.

A very pretty wedding was celebrated in St. Paul's R. C. church on Wednesday, Jan. 17th, when Miss Frances, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Fitzpatrick of Asphodel, and one of Asphodel's most popular young ladies was united in holy bonds of matrimony by Mr. Maurice O'Leary of Indian River.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was gowned in a charming tailored costume of King's Blue broadcloth, and black picture hat, with willow plumes. She also wore a set of black Persian lamb, the gift of the groom. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Theresa Hurley, of Peterborough, who was also becomingly attired in a navy tailored suit and black hat of Hatter's plush, trimmed with large willow plume. She also wore the groom's gift—a gold bracelet. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Joseph O'Leary of St. Michael's College, Toronto, Ont.

High Mass was sung by Rev. Michael O'Leary of Bracebridge, brother of the groom. Present in the Sanctuary were Rev. P. J. O'Leary, and Rev. P. Kelly, pastor of St. Paul's.

After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the residence of the bride's father, where a sumptuous wdding dejeuner was given to a large number of guests. The toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. P. J. O'Leary, and the groom replied in a suitable manner. Other toasts proposed and replied to by Rev. M. O'Leary, and Rev. P. Kelly, the bride's father, Dr. Holdship and several other gentlemen.

The bride was the recipient of many valuable presents, among them being several checks.

Among the out-of-town guests were Rev. P. J. and Rev. M. O'Leary, of Bracebridge, brothers of the groom: Miss Mary O'Leary, sister, of Montreal, Dr. and Mrs. Holdship, of Montreal; Misses Cassie and Theresa Hurley, Miss Mona O'Shea, Mr. D. Lynch, Peterborough, Mr. and Mrs. John O'Shea, of Campbellford.

The newly-married couple will reside at Indian River, where the groom has been one of the most popular bachelors.

Mr. W. G. Lendrum of Peterborough, was present, and took an excellent photograph of the party.

OBITUARY

HELEN ELLA PATTERSON.

The death occurred last evening of Helen Ella, daughter of Mr. Henry R. Patterson, at the family residence, 183 Stewart street. The deceased lady was twenty-seven years of age, and was born in Lakefield, coming to Peterborough with her parents some ten years since. She had been ailing for several years, but her illness did not assume a serious nature until several weeks ago. She was, in creed, a Presbyterian, and a constant attendant at St. Andrew's church. She was possessed of a very affable disposition, which endeared her to many friends, and her demise is generally regretted. The late Miss Patterson is survived by sorrowing parents, one brother, John, and one sister, Mary, both living at home.

The funeral will take place at 2.30 on Saturday afternoon, at the Little Lake Cemetery. The Rev. Jas. Rollins will officiate.

AMANDA V. VAN NORMAN.

The death occurred last evening, after a brief illness of Amanda Van Norman, wife of Mr. J. W. Van Norman of Concession street, near Downer's Corners. Deceased, who was in her 77th year, has been a resident of this city for a number of years, and her demise will be regretted generally by a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. She possessed many estimable qualities, and was always a ready and willing worker in anything pertaining to the interests of the church, with which she was connected. The late Mrs. Van Norman was united in marriage to Mr. I. W. Van Norman on September 18th, 1854. She leaves to mourn her loss five sons and three girls, six of whom are living. These are Mrs. Lewis, in Toronto; Mrs. Chas. Kindred of Belleville; Thomas, Newton and Fred, of British Columbia, and Jerry, of this city.

The funeral will be held on Saturday from the family residence at 2.30, to Little Lake cemetery. Service at the house at 2 o'clock, will be conducted by Rev. Mr. Cragg.

"There's a Reason"

Rum-Crazed Negro Held Sheriff At Bay

ROCHESTER, Jan. 13.—Lurking in the cellar of a rambling brick house near Scottsville, twelve miles south of Rochester, Wiliam Twyman, a rum-crazed negro, twice a murderer within a few hours, held at bay for five hours the sheriff of Monroe county and his deputies, a detachment of the national guard and nearly every ablebodied man in that section of the country and surrendered later only on the assurance of another man of his own race that no violence would be done him if he gave up.

His surrender followed on the heels of the arrival of the Rochester division of the state naval militia with a one-pounder cannon, which they were about to train on the house.

Father's Dead Body in House

Above him, as he fought, in the front room of the house the body of his aged father whom he had murdered lay in a litter of alcohol and gin bottles and scarcely a rod from the side of the house throughout the greater part of the siege the huddled body of Deputy-Sheriff Simon W. Bermingham lay where he fell with a hole through his forehead from a bullet from the negro's rifle. Deputy-Sheriffs Herbert M. Abbott and Edward A. Jendkins and a villager, William L. Vogt, were wounded by Twyman's fire.

Twyman has been known as a "bad man" for years. He was a hunter and a dead shot with a rifle, shotgun, or revolver. Tuesday he was acting strangely, and the Scottsville negroes, of whom there are several hundred, scattered throughout the town of Wheatland, had been fighting shy of Twyman as his proclivities in the shooting line were well known and he had figured in half a dozen gun scrapes.

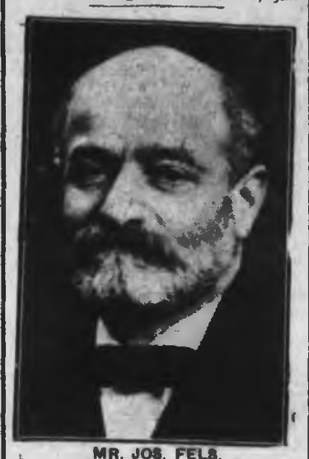
Early in the morning one of the coloured families of the village was aroused by the smashing of a window of their home and a request from Twyman for admittance. This was refused and he went down the street to the home of James L. Cox. Mr. Cox came to the door and Twyman stepped inside. He held his right hand suspiciously in his pocket and Cox feared the man held a revolver.

Twyman is alleged to have asked Cox to come over to the house and help him to haul out the body of Turner Twyman, his father, whom he said he had murdered.

Fired Shots Into Windows

Cox grappled with the negro and managed to get him out of the house. Twyman fired a shot through Cox's door and shambled down the street, smashing windows and firing shots at intervals. He finally took refuge in the brick house and only surrendered as stated above on assurance that no violence would be offered him.

There were cries of "Lynch him!" when the negro surrendered, but a cordon of soldiers and police was thrown about the murderer. He was rushed to Rochester in an automobile and lodged in the county jail.



MR. JOS. FELS.

Mr. Fels is the multi-millionaire of London, England, who will give an address to-morrow evening before the Brotehrhood of St. Paul in St. Paul's Presbyterian church on the need of Taxation Reform. He contends that poverty is due mainly to unjust taxation. In Toronto this week, Mr. Fels offered to give dollar ofr dollar against all agencies that may contribute to this movement. He is said to have been mainly instrumental in inducing Lloyd George to adopt the measure of land taxation reform that was recently carried by the people of Great Britain. The lecture to-morrow night will be free, and ladies are invited. This will be the only opportunity to hear Mr. Fels in Peterborough.

The Good Gift Of A Bad King

A Short Story.

Among the curiosities in the British Museum in London is a queer-looking old document. The English in which it is written would puzzle the majority of readers of to-day; the parchment is brown and shrivelled with age and injured by fire, and a quaint, roughly made seal dangles from it. This curious old document is a rare treasure. It is the great charter of England—Magna Charta—and the seal is the royal seal of the English King John, the younger brother of RRichard Lion Heart.

From his very boyhood John was bad. He had plotted against his father, Henry the Second, and broken the old man's heart by his base ingratitude. He had been the worst of traitors to his indulgent brother, Richard. And upon Richard's death he had had himself crowned king of England, having murdered young Arthur of Brittany, who was the rightful heir to the throne.

He had no love for his subjects, nor any interest whatever in the welfare of his kingdom. When the French king, in revenge for Arthur's death, made war against John and took from him the greater part of his French possessions, John, with perfect indifference, remained at home feasting and enjoying himself.

Very soon the English realized that their king was lazy, insolent, and very cruel. He scoffed at religion, had no regard for his word, and was remarkably fond of spending money.

The story of his murder of Prince Arthur had spread throughout England. And when, in order to get money for his wicked pleasures, John, in the most shameless manner, imposed heavy taxes upon the English people they grew to hate him. The bishops remonstrated with him, and, indignant at his unjust treatment, his nobles refused to go and fight for him in France.

John was enraged at their daring to disobey him. Immediately he began planning vengeance upon the church and the barons. But just then he got into trouble in another quarter, and for a time that fully occupied his mind. The trouble came about in this way:

The Archbishop of Canterbury having died, the monks of the order held a secret council and elected their subprior, Reginald, to succeed him. In the meantime the king had appointed a favourite of his own, John de Grey, Bishop of Norwich, to the position. Neither king nor friars would yield, so the matter was submitted to Pope Innocent the Third, who, regardless of he king's bribes to side with him, took the matter into his own hands and ordered the monks to elect one Stephen Langton to be their Archbishop.

A better choice could not have been made. Stephen Langton was an Englishman, learned, holy, and fearless, a true lover of his country. But King John was furious with the Pope, and refused to receive the new primate. He quarrelled with all the clergy, and levied heavy taxes upon them. And when they refused to pay these taxes, he banished many of them from England and threatened the remainder to tear out their eyes and cut off their noses, and in that state send them to Rome.

Then followed several very hard years for the English people. The Pope, whose word in those days was a law to the whole Christian world, laid an interdict upon England until King John should accept the new archbishop. By this interdict no church bells were rung, no services held in any of the churches ,no marriages were celebrated, no dead buried. During this dreadful time Stephen Langton, who was still Archbishop of Canterbury, by his good sense, his courage and the uprightness of his character, won the respect and confidence of the nation. The people quickly recognized that he had the good of England at heart—their good. Even King John, though he hated Stephen for being so different from his own evil self, was in some degree influenced by the reproofs of the fearless bishop, for when Stephen Langton rebuked the king, John would earnestly promise to reform, but after a little would go right on in his wickedness. His nobles, tired of submitting to such tyranny, rose in a body against him. They refused any longer to give him allegiance unless he positively reformed his ways and showed respect for their rights.

Inwardly raging, John swore loudly to do all that was required of him. But by this time Stephen Langton (who was now publicly recognized as Archbishop of Canterbury), knew how little the kingly word was to be trusted. So when the nobles held a meeting at St. Albans, Stephen urged passionately upon every man to remember the wrongs that had been done them, and not to rest until they had publicly compelled King John to recognize their rights in a charter.

At the meeting it was decided that King John should grant his people all the privileges that had been given them by his father and grandfather, Henry First and Second, and a good deal more. And Stephen made each man solemnly to swear that unless John granted those rights and liberties they would make war upon him. To Stephen was entrusted the task of getting the king to sign the charter. And well did he carry out his trust.

In vain John hid himself, and turned and twisted his words, and piled up promises, and tried to sneak out of keeping them. Not all King John's threats, or flattery, or scheming could change Stephen Langton from his purpose—that the rights of the people of England should be recognized. And granted in such fashion, too, that no man or king could ever after deprive them of those rights.

When at last Stephen got the king to listen to and read the barons' list of grievances, and added that John "must remedy these evils or the barons would do it for themselves," King John flew into a great rage.

"I will never grant such liberties as will take my power from me!" he cried out and fiercely refused to sign any charter.

True to their threat, the barons and all the people rose in arms and declared war against the tyrant who had murdered and tortured and robbed them. Seven or eight knights were all who remained with John, and they were more than half-hearted in their obedience. Some of the nobles even went so far, in their ranger, as to agree to ask Louis, son of the French King Philip, to come over and be King of England.

John was a coward—as tyrants unusually are—and now that he had brought this great storm about his ears, he began to make all sorts of excuses and promises. Stephen Langton, however, knew him too well to trust his word. Sternly he refused the splendid bribes which King John offered to him and to the clergy throughout England to induce them to side with him.

"We are Englishmen—our rights must be respected," he answered, and used all his influence to get the king to sign the charter.

Having failed to obtain assistance from abroad, and unable longer to resist his angry subjects, John at last gave in and consented to sign the charter which was to secure to them their rights as free Englishmen.

Runnymede, a pleasant meadow on the river Thames was chosen as the place of meeting, and the date June 15, 1215. Here assembled bishops, priests and nobles, a great throng of people, among them many famous soldiers. With the king were a couple of dozen attendants, not one of them really loyal to him. And here, with a rage in his heart which he dared not show, and with Stephen Langton close at his elbow ,the wicked King John signed Magna Charta—the great charter by which "all were recognized as Englishmen; the rights of all were owned as English rights."

By this charter the king pledged himself to respect the rights and liberties of the cities and towns of England; to protect and encourage foreign trade in England; that no one should be imprisoned without a fair trial. And to no one should justice be sold, delayed or denied. No tax was to be imposed save by consent of the common council of the kingdom.

To all this King John put his royal seal. But, knowing his treachery, the barons insisted that for two months Stephen Langton should have possession of the Tower of London, and that twenty-four of the nobles should be appointed as a committee to see that King John kept the charter. They told him frankly that should he attempt to break or evade his compact they would again make war upon him. Two years after this King John died, and his death was a great relief to the people of England.

There is not an Englishman, and not many Americans who know of him, can stand beside the tomb of Stephen Langton in Canterbury Cathedral without a thrill of pride and reverence for the upright, fearless man who lies there.—"Ladies'

Good Health

PLENTY OF FRESH AIR FOR CHILDREN.

One hour of bad air will do more harm than good air for the other twenty-three will undo; therefore keep the room well ventilated every moment of the day. If the rooms are large and open into each other, one or two windows in the proper place will furnish fresh air for the whole house. At any cost, keep the air good night and day.

The temperature of the room should be sixty-five to seventy degrees Fahrenheit. A thermometer should hang in the rooms that are most frequented by the children, and at the height of their heads. Overheating is the commonest error in the city. Perhaps the most usual mistake in the country is drafty rooms and floors and cold halls.

Babies, beginning at six weeks, should be taken out for their airing once a day, and later twice; in winter, when the sun is high, in summer when it is coolest. At six weeks an hour a day is sufficient; at six months three or four hours is a necessity; after that the more, the better.

The sun should not shine into the unprotected eyes.

The only contra-indications to going out are, extremely cold weather (below zero), rain or snow, and possibly sharp winds. When this outdoor airing is impossible, the baby should be dressed for the street, and put in the carriage, close by the widely opened windows, in the sun. In the city it is as necessary to have a carriage for the baby as it is to have a bed.

The appetite of a child is improved and the strength increased by good pure air. Sleep also is often induced by the airing. Many a sick child, who will not sleep in the house, immediately sinks into a restful slumber as soon as he is put out in his carriage. Of course there is no objection to sleeping out-of-doors in sickness or in health.

Miss F. H. Mellis, of Vancouver, B.C., is visiting in the city, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. L. Mellis, 573 Sherbrooke street.

CARE OF TABLE WARE

Whether cutlery is of steel or silver, its durability depends as much on the way you handle it as on the quality of its material and workmanship. When a knife which is intended for one purpose is misused for another, it cannot last long. If you cut shavings with your tiny penknife it won't serve long. Likewise a carving knife or bread knife which is used for cutting firewood in emergency soon goes to the scrap heap.

The woman who makes buttonholes with her husband's razor because her scissors happen to be dull and she has never thought of buying buttonhole scissors, cannot have a good sense of value, or, at least, has little foresight. But impulse will sometimes get the better of even the wisest housewife unless she will discipline herself to think twice before she acts in emergency.

Table cutlery should not be used for stirring things on the stove. Every handy kitchen is, or ought to be, supplied with a number of tin forks, steel knives and tin or pewter spoons, and these will serve the purpose better.

Vinegar or fruit juice, which contains more or less acid, has a blackening if not a corroding effect on silver, and will soon effect its original lustre if frequently brought in contact with it. When silver cutlery has been washed in soapy water and rinsed, it should be dried thoroughly, and then given a polish with tissue paper or flannel. A chamois skin would do the work even more effectively. Genuine silver will never rust, but when laid away damp it becomes black and blemished.

A good and simple preparation for cleaning tarnished silver consists of magnesia and fine table salt mixed in equal proportions.

The sharpening of kitchen cutlery should be done by an expert if possible about once every three months. This includes the carving knife and bread knife. In case of emergency, however, you can give a keener edge to a dull kitchen knife made of good material by slashing it briskly back and forth on the edge of a porcelain crock. A revolving grindstone, when handy, is even better.

SEEN AND HEARD

SO MANY QUALIFIED.

A north-western missionary bishop used to tell a story which was repeated to us by the Rev. W. W. Washington, of Cuyahoga Falls.

"I met an old farmer in North Dakota," he relates, "and in the course of conversation I asked him if he was connected with any religious denomination. 'Yessor,' he answered, 'I'm a 'Piscopal.'

"Of course, this gratified me, and I asked him what parish he belonged to.

"'Hadn't heard about no parish,' he said, with a puzzled expression.

"'Well, what diocese?' I persisted.

"'You got me there, too.'

"'Where were you confirmed?'

"'Dunno what you mean.'

"'Then how are you an Episcopalian?'

"'Oh,' he answered, brightening up at once. 'I'll tell you. I went to a church down in Bismarck last winter, an' they called it 'Piscopal. And I heard the people sayin' that they'd "done things they hadn't orter done." An' I says, "That's me, to a t," an' since then I've called myself a 'Piscopal.'

"Now I understand," continued the Bishop, laughing, "why the membership of our church is so large." —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

TOO EASY.

Congressman Homer Bulb of Nevada was famed in his day at Washington as a raconteur and epigrammatist. Whenever he sat down in the lobby of the Dingle House, his headquarters at the capital, he was sure to gather about him in no time a group of friends and acquaintances and to convulse them over and over again with his sallies.

One of these, the butt of which was Senator Montgomery Twell, is particularly well remembered by the Dingle's Old Guard.

The Senator entered the hotel one evening looking long and solemnly at the skies, which were cloudy, and then remarked to Congressman Bulb in a tone of raillery:

"Well Bulb, I know you pride yourself on being a prophet. What sort of a day do you think we'll have to-morrow?"

"Wednesday," replied Congressman Bulb.

Among those who heard him was Col. Anthony Batherswyck, the Civil War veteran, who lost no time in telling the quib all over Washington.—New York Times.

PERHAPS NOT.

Charles Frohman, smoking one of his huge, black and superb cigars, discussed in New York a conceited English actor.

"He often asked me to bring him over to the states," said Mr. Frohman, "but I could never see my way. I met him not long ago in London. I was lunching at an A. B. C. and he came up to me in great spirits.

"'Well, Mr. Frohman,' he said. 'I'm going to America at last. Just signed my contract yesterday. It's for $5,000 per—five thousand per'—

"He looked at me nervously.

"'Oh, I see,' said I. 'Five thousand perhaps.'"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

MANNERS

Manners affect for good or ill the daily hapiness of every human being and the fortune and destiny of every tribe or nation. Their influence on human existence is profound and incessant. Good manners are founded on reason or common sense and good will. They put people at ease in social intercourse, welcome graciously the stranger and the friend, dismiss pleasantly the lingering visitor who does not know how to withdraw, express alert sympathy with others, and prompt to helpful co-operation with others. They enable people to dwell together in peace and concord; whereas bad manners cause friction, strife and discord.

The often-mentioned difference between good manners and good breeding, namely, that the latter involves a long education and the acquisition of much knowledge and skill, whereas the former do not, is quite as important in democratic society as in aristocratic. Peasants, barbarians and illiterate persons often exhibit some of the best elements of good manners, but their experience of life has not given them access to good breeding.

Selfishness, ignorance, stupidity and habitual inattention to the desires and claims of others are the chief causes of bad manners, and since these qualities are rather common among mankind and some admixture of them often exists in meritorious characters, bad manners are not uncommon.

The street railway companies in cities maintain active schools of bad manners wherever they fail to provide a number of vehicles adequate to carry in a decent manner the throngs that are compelled to use them. Any crowd which is in a hurry is apt to afford practice in bad manners.—By Dr. Charles W. Eliot in the Century.

THE DOMINION ALLIANCE TO HOLD COUNTY FIELD DAY

A laudable effort is being put forth by the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Temperance Alliance to educate the public in both the legal and the moral aspects of the Temperance question. The holding of a County Field Day is part of this educational programme. On that occasion representatives of the Alliance speak in every pulpit in the city and county, open to them. The addresses vary according to circumstances, but the general subject of temperance is not lost sight of, and almost every feature of the temperance question is discussed some time or other.

Last year, nearly three thousand meetings were held, and the educational value of such a propaganda can scarcely be over-estimated. The Field Day in Peterborough will be held on January 26th. Many pulpits in the county, and several in the city will be occupied by representatives of the Alliance.

Two meetings will be held in the Opera House, Peterborough. One of them will be for men only at four o'clock, and the other, open to all, will be held at 8.15. Mr. Howard Russell, winner of one of Earl Grey's medals, will sing at each meeting, and addresses will be delivered by Rev. R. M. Hamilton, B.A., Field Secretary; Rev. Dr. R. H. Abraham, Field Secretary; Rev. B. H. Spence, General Secretary, and Rev. Professor Hallam, of Wycliffe College, Toronto.

ENNISMORE BOY TO OPPOSE HON. G. P. GRAHAM

OTTAWA, ONT., JAN. 17.—Considerable interest attaches itself to the Conservative convention in South Renfrew, to be held on Friday, at which a candidate will be chosen to oppose Hon. George P. Graham. Mr. Gerald V. White, M.P., for North Renfrew, and other prominent Conservatives will be present to address the convention.

It is practically certain that Dr. Maloney, of Egansville, will be the unanimous choice.

Dr. Maloney is a former resident of Ennismore township, Peterborough county.

HON. JULES ALLARD SERIOUSLY ILL

Examiner Special:

QUEBEC, Q., JAN. 19.—During a dinner offered last night, Hon. Jules Allard, Minister of Crown Lands, had a fit of congestion and was unconscious for an hour. He is doing well to-day. Mr. Armand Lavergne's condition is improving every day. It is expected he will leave the hospital next week and resume his work at Mr. Bourassa's side in the Quebec legislature.

SMALL HAUL AT BROCKVILLE

BROCKVILLE, ONT., JAN. 19. — Safe blowers got into the offices of the Thousand Island Mineral Water Company last night, blew open the safe, shattering all glass and fixtures in the offices and carried away ten dollars and some small cheques, but overlooked a box containing five hundred dollars worth of jewelery belonging to the wife of a member of the firm. There is no clue.

LIVE 150 YEARS

Scientists Say It Can Be Done.

"Old age is simply a disease," say some of the European scientists now. They hold that with proper attention to diet people should live 150 years.

We don't know how true that is. But we do know that great numbers of elderly and aged people feel and look younger than they are because they build up with Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron remedy without oil.

Mrs. Michael Bloom, of Lewistown, Pa., 83 years of age, had to be wheeled around in an invalid's chair before she began taking Vinol, and after using a few bottles was able to go out walking alone, and do most of her housework too. That shows how Vinol strengthens feeble people.

It sharpens the appetite, makes the blood rich and causes it to circulate better. You feel the good effects of Vinol very soon. We guarantee that Vinol will please you and pay back your money if it does not. McDermid and Jury, druggis' corner George and Charlotte st also Payne's drug store, corner and Simcoe street.

Man Falls Into A Well Of Scalding Water

BOWMANVILLE, JAN. 19.—John Fred Reider, son of the Manager of the Bowmanville Foundry, died this morning in terrible agony, following an accident sustained yesterday afternoon, when on a ladder, fixing an exhaust pipe, he slipped and fell into a well of scalding water from a boiler. The skin peeled from his body when he was taken out. He leaves a widow and one child.

WARNING!

Information has reached us that certain dealers, when asked for Zam-Buk, try to sell something else on which they make a larger profit. They do not give this or that reason, but say "I can sell you so and so at half the price and it is just as good."

Don't be fooled! The "cheap" preparation is not just as good as Zam-Buk — not in the same class! Most of the cheap salves are made from animal fats and oils. Zam-Buk is made from pure herbal essences and juices. There is as little similarity between the two as between a horse and an automobile!

Imitations of Zam-Buk and cheap substitutes may give the dealer a little more profit, but they won't cure your skin disease, or stop the pain of your burn, or ease the agony of piles, or cure the rash on your baby. Don't be misled. Get the real Zam-Buk. See the legally protected name on the packet before paying for it.

STEAMER WRECKED

PORTLAND, ORE., JAN. 19.—Defective boilers caused the blowing up of the river steamer "Sarah Dixon" of Vancouver, B.C., here, to-day, killing Captain Roberts, his first mate, and two of his crew, all Canadians, from the Pacific Coast. Two of the bodies have not yet been found.

What Mr. Munro Thinks Of "North Ender's" Proposition For Street Railway Extension

An Examiner reporter interviewed Mr. W. H. Munro this morning regarding the proposition of "North Ender," in a letter to the Examiner dated Jan. 18th.

Mr. Munro was favourably impressed with the suggestion, but some changes in the porposed route were changes in the proposed route were Mr. Munro stated that the line should run out McDonnell street to Downie street, instead of out Hunter street and up Aylmer street, thus avoiding crossing the Hunter and Aylmer street bridges, which may possibly not be designed to carry cars. A direct route from George street to Downie street, in Mr. Munro's opinion, would be the most advisable route, being more beneficial to both the city and the company than the other suggestion, in as much as it would be more central ,being further north from their Charlotte street line. From the end of McDonnell street on Downie, north to Smith street, east on Smith to Reid street, and north on the Chemong road to Aberdeen avenue, east on Aberdeen avenue to Barnardo avenue and down Barnardo avenue to Water street, where it would connect with the present line.

In conversation wih the City Engineer, however, the reporter was informed that Aberdeen avenue was not opened up through to Barnardo, and not likely to be, by the corporation. Mr. Hay stated that some years ago, an attempt was made by the corporation to open this avenue through to Barnardo, but the property owners asked such exorbitant prices, that the proposition was abandoned, and had not been taken up since.

Mr. Munro stated that in the event of Aberdeen avenue being opened, the company could run their line north to Wolsley street and east on Wolsley street to Barnardo and then out Barnardo to Water street. This route was the one outlined by Mr. Munro, and he stated that apart from the East City extension, this was the first that would be taken up by the company.

"This section is certainly the largest untapped area in the city apart from East City," said Mr. Munro, "and if we cannot make satisfactory arrangements for our proposed East City extension, we will proceed with this western extension."

Mr. Munro objected to running the line down the old Chemong road bed of the G.T.R., on the ground that it would mean a very curvy route, as well as a sharp curve and angling diamond at the G.T.R. Lakefield branch, crossing. Apart from this the old road bed ends at the present branch, and east of that, there is a deep ravine, which would have to be filled up or bridged. This proposition was not an acceptable one at all.

The reporter drew Mr. Munro's attention to the very steep grade on Barnardo avenue down from the Queen Alexandra school, but he thought that the cars could make this grade all right. It might be necessary to do a little grading, but at all events he did not consider this a difficult proposition at all.

It is understood that the Council is making arrangements to secure estimates for a Hunter street bridge, and until this matter is settled, the west extension will be held over.

THREE BROTHER PRIESTS CELEBRATED HIGH MASS

(Toronto Star)

Rev. Father Melville Staley, who was ordained at Peterborough, on Friday, by His Lordship Bishop O'Connor, sang his first high mass on Sunday morning at the Church of St. Francis, this city. He was assisted by his brother, Rev. Father Arthur Staley, of St. Francis, as deacon, another brother, Rev. Father Louis Staley, P.P., of Railton, acted as sub-deacon, and also preached the sermon. Albert Staley, a younger brother, was master of ceremonies, and two sisters, one a member of the community of Loretto, and the other of the Sisters of Charity, of Kingston, were with the father and other members of the family present at the ceremony.

A Call To Prayer On Sunday Next, January 21st

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Having received a letter from Mr. Herbert K. Caskey, the general secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement in Canada, and not having time at my disposal to carry out his request, viz., "that a special rally for men be held in some central place for the purpose of engaging in special prayer for missions, may I suggest and respectfully ask, through your valuable columns, that all the Men's Bible Classes and Brotherhoods, meeting next Sunday, spend the first half-hour of their lessons in earnest prayer for the work of the missionaries upon all the various missionary fields. I make this request on behalf of the Laymen's Missionary Movement of Canada.

Yours in His Service,
W. C. Riddiford.

Quaker Oats Company Prizes For Displays

People of Peterborough have no doubt noticed during the past few days the fact that many of the grocers of the city are making attractive displays of Quaker Oats packages in their windows. The reason is that the local grocers are going out after that $100 prize offered by the Quaker Oats Company for the best display advertising that famous product. The Company is giving thousands of premiums in this contest, the winners being selected from photographs by E. M. Trowern, Dominion Secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada and J. L. Maude, Secretary of the Window Trimmers' Association of Canada. The selling power of a display of this kind is its chiefest merit and the displays will be judged by their power to sell Quaker Oats.

SEYMOUR POWER COMPANY WILLING TO SELL TO HYDRO-ELECTRIC

OTTAWA, JAN. 18.—Denial of any refusal of the Electric Power Company which controls most of the power development on the Trent River, to sell out to the Hydro-Electric Commission was given this morning by A. B. Colville, of Campbellford, Vice-President of the company, who is in town.

"The company," he said, "has at the present time 16,500 horse power developed on the Trent River, which has all been sold, and is being delivered in the district extending from Napanee to Oshawa. Their lines also extend into the mining district of North Hastings, and they supply Peterborough, Lindsay and Millbrook in the north. They have over 200 miles of 44,000 volt transmission line, and 24 sub-stations.

"The powers are either held in fee simple or under lease from the Crown The Trent being a Dominion river leases were granted by the Department of Railways and Canals. They have now under construction two additional power houses, of 5,000 horse-power and 11,000 horse power capacity, the first to be finished by July 1 and the second by January, 1913. Thirty year franchises have been obtained in practically every town of importance in the district and the rates are under the control of the Dominion Railway Board.

"The Hydro-Electric Commission, which in 1908 had an offer for a supply of power from the company, now desires to extend into central Ontario, and the Electric Power Company, while perfectliy satisfied with its business, has no desire to stand in its way. It has offered to sell the whole of its undertakings, including power houses, transmission lines, sub-stations, electric and gas plants, street railways, etc., at a price to be fixed by arbitration."

Asked regarding Hon. Adam Beck's statement that the department had granted leases of dams numbers 4 and 5, claimed by the Electric Company, to the commission, Mr. Colville said his company had not been notified of any such order in Council.

A LARGE PROBLEM.

There are problems continually pressing, for solution, in connection with the government of a country like Canada, in the formative stage of national existence. In a country of such vast geographical extent, with varying soil and other conditions, there are bound to be conflicts of interests. This is especially the case in the matter of tariff adjustment. Western Canada has been, and still is, making demands for substantial reductions in the tariff, ranging from a partial lessening to complete abolition. In the East, the larger demand is for a retention of the present tariff, and, even, for the imposition of a considerably higher rate of tariff levy. This indicates that there will have to be moderation practised, as to both demands. And the Government is confronted with the problem of so adjusting the tariff as to meet, as far as practicable, the demands of both; to devise a middle way. We cannot have tariffs, differential as to both, or different parts of the country. The tariff must be uniform in its application. This demands the highest skill of our governing powers. A tariff commission cannot provide a complete solution: at the best it can only collect and collate facts, as to conditions; provide information for the use of the Government upon which the responsibility of resulting action must rest. And the discharge of this responsibility demands both skill and patriotism. The tariff must not be made a dividing force. We have enough distractions to national unity, without the destructive influence of a domestic tariff war. Winning power is one thing; successfully exercising it is another.

NOT WANTED IN CANADA.

The proposal of an old-age pension scheme for Canada, will be welcomed by the thriftless, the improvident and idle. As Hon. Mr. White, Minister of Finance, pointed out, Canada, of robust resources, the land of plenty, does not need such a confession of poverty. He says that such a scheme would be a poor advertisement for Canada, a humiliating confession that such a device was necessary. Wages in this country are high, employment plentiful, and with such conditions of prosperity—the normal condition of the country—he held that an old-age pension scheme was not required. We cannot hope to eliminate poverty by legislation. The poor, we shall always have with us, but we can do something by encouraging a right spirit in our people, rather than adopt a scheme that tends to encourage thriftless waste and improvident use of the means that industry brings. We have, in the Government Annuities, provision, now in force, something far better than the old-age pension proposal. The annuities scheme develops manhood, develops the spirit of independence, encourages thrift. If it were generally taken advantage of, if everybody made the slight savings necessary to gain a government annuity, the country would be financially stronger by reason of the savings of the people intrusted to its care, and the occurrence of destitution in old age would become of such rare occurrence, as to be easily provided for. We do not yet want any legislation that will tend to pauperize our population, and degrade the national spirit of independence and self dependence into universal alms-seeking. Practical statesmanship in Canada has much better employment than anticipating conditions that in the older countries of the world are founded upon causes that do not exist in plentiful, prosperous Canada, where old-age pensions are neither needed nor wanted.

LABOUR NEWS.

Wholesale prices throughout Canada during December were on practically the same level as in the preceding month, according to the index number of the Department of Labour. The number stood at 130.8 in both months. Compared with December a year ago, a rise of over 8 points is shown. These numbers, it will be understood, are percentages in each case of the average price level prevailing during the decade, 1890-1909, and are calculated from quotations of about 200 articles. The chief increases during the past year occurred in grains and fodder, dairy products, fish, hides, and metals, there having been decreases in animals and meats, textiles, paints and oils.

The strike record of the Labour Department shows that there were only eight trade disputes in existence during December, being six less than in November, and two less than in December, 1910. About ten firms and slightly over fourteen hundred employees were involved. The loss in working days amounted approximately to forty thousand. The new disputes of the month were of only slight importance. There were only four disputes unsettled at the close of the year.

Eighty-two fatal and one hundred and ninety-four non-fatal accidents to workpeople were recorded by the Department of Labour during December. This record shows a slight decrease compared with the preceding month, and is much less than in the same month of last year. In November there were 286 accidents, fatal and non-fatal, to individual workmen, and in December, 1910, there were 351 accidents. The chief disasters during the month were the suffocating of three miners at Middlesboro, B.C., in a chute of a mine, and an explosion in a powder factory at Departure Bay, Vancouver, B. C., in which three men were killed. There were eleven killed in the railway service, and fourteen in mining. The largest number of non-fatal accidents occurred in the metal trades, in which forty-two were injured. Nine men were killed and thirty-one were injured in the building trades, an unusually high number for the month of December. There were twenty-six non-fatal accidents in the railway service.

SOUTH RENFREW.

The attitude of the Dominion Government towards the vacant seat in South Renfrew suggests the lines of the Marquis of Montrose:

He either fears his fate too much,
Or his deserts are small,
That dares not put it to the touch,
To gain or lose it all.

A long time ago the sitting member in the Legislature, Dr. McGarry, was allowed election for South Renfrew by acclamation, on the strength of a distinct understanding, a definite arrangement, between local Conservatives and Liberals, to the effect that Hon. G. P. Graham would be allowed election to the Commons unopposed. Acting upon this agreement Mr. Low, who was returned for South Renfrew, in the general elections, in September, by a majority of 620, tendered his resignation, and the Speaker of the House, with full knowledge of the reasons for resignation, accepted it. The seat became vacant and has remained so ever since. The Conservatives, of the baser sort, favour disregarding the agreement, and submitting Hon. Mr. Graham's candidature to a contest, a distinct breach of faith. But the Government has not even summoned courage to issue the writ for a new election. They either fear the issue of the contest, or the criticism which Mr. Graham could bring to bear, or both. With Mr. Graham's election there would be no diminution of the numerical strength of the Government's majority, for one opponent of a Government would be replaced by another. If the Government is inclined to do the right thing and govern fairly and wisely, it need not fear, but should welcome, strong criticism. The country and the interests of good government would gain by the presence of Hon. G. P. Graham in Parliament. Meanwhile, South Renfrew is disfranchised; it has no representative in Parliament. The inaction of the Government does not argue an excess sense of courage, or fair play.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

If the Scotch curlers, who are now doing Canada, take to curling in their kilts, with the thermometer 30 below zero, they will be "kilt intirely".

In 1911 the figures of the Interior Department show that 350,000 settlers took up homes in the Canadian west, as against 311,094 in 1910, 208,794 in 1909, 146,908 in 1908, and 262,469 in 1907. The purchasing power of the crop of 1911 in the three prairie provinces is estimated at $260,000,000.

Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, is a splendid drill instructor — he makes Monk, the anti-British Nationalist, Minister of Public Works, keep step with him. Mr. Monk endorses everything the Hon. Sam does or says; and he says and does a good many things that gives pause to good purse-careful Britishers, not to speak of Nationalists.

A Chatham farmer pinned a note to the door of his house and jumped into a well. He was "tired of life." No wonder; he was a bachelor and lived alone. He was only half a man; if he had had a "better half" he would have had his life made too cheerful, at least, too lively, to get into the dumps. There's nothing like a woman—with the authority that matrimony confers—to take and keep the nonsense out of a man. If the Chatham farmer had been married, it's ten to one he would have "let well, enough alone".

ULSTER AND FREE SPEECH.

(Toronto Star.)

We are reluctant to believe that the Unionists of Ulster will try to prevent the holding of a Home Rule meeting in Belfast. The Unionists of Ulster are appealing for sympathy on the ground that an Irish Parliament will oppress them and deprive them of liberty of speech and action. It is to be expected, therefore, that they will set the example of encouraging liberty of free speech at Belfast.

The Ulster Unionists also believe that Home Rule for Ireland is wrong, and will not stand the test of reason and argument. They must then believe that the more freely Home Rule is discussed, the more will its weakness appear. On the other hand, Mr. Winston Churchill believes that he can convert Ulster to Home Rule. Why not let him try? If he is right, his policy ought to be carried out. If he is wrong, the more he talks the more it will appear that he is wrong. For these reasons we are loth to believe that those who defend the revolution of 1688 will try to prevent free speech.

THE DOMINION AND MARRIAGES.

(Manitoba Free Press.)

The Orange Sentinel credits Mr. Borden with having declared in Parliament that the Dominion has jurisdiction over the validity of marriages in the Province. It contrasts this with the opinion to which Sir Alan Aylesworth gave expression last session that this matter is within the jurisdiction of the Provinces; and declares that "the Borden government has "saved us and our families and our "liberties from ruin. We are not aware that Mr. Borden has made any statement in Parliament, as yet, that can be interpreted as meaning that, in his opinion, the Federal Parliament has jurisdiction in the matter of marriage. The question was brought up before the Christmas recess by Mr. Pugsley, and Mr. Borden was extremely cautious in his replies—very properly so in view of the importance of the matter. Certainly neither directly nor by implication did he traverse the opinion expressed last session by the former Minister of Justice—which, by the way, did not purport to be a definite finding. The Lancaster bill now before Parliament will give Mr. Borden and all other members of the House of Commons, an opportunity to declare themselves. This bill provides, in effect, for Dominion marriages. If, in the judgment of the law officers, the Dominion Parliament has power to pass such legislation it should lose no time in putting this law on the statute book.

The Weak, Lame, Aching Back

Comes From The Kidneys.

Those who have never been troubled with kidney trouble do not know the suffering and misery which those afflicted undergo.

On the first sign of backache Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken immediately so as to avoid years of suffering from kidney trouble.

They go right to the seat of the trouble, heal the delicate membranes of the kidneys and make their action regular and natural.

Mrs. Joseph Throop, Upper Point de Bute, N.B., writes:—"I cannot speak too well of Doan's Kidney Pills. For two years I was so tired life was a burden, and I got up more tired than when I went to bed, and my back was so lame I could hardly straighten up. I took different kinds of medicine, but none of them did me any good until a friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I did so, and to-day I don't know what it is to be tired, and my lame back is all gone. I can recommend them to any person suffering with lame back and that terrible tired feeling."

Price 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

SUNDAY TOBOGGANING AND MORAL DECLENSION

Toronto is having a spasm, this time over Sunday tobogganing. The toboggan slide suggests to the moralists the facilis decensus averni, and there is, therefore, much talk of the "desecration of the Sabbath," and of "peril to the spiritual interests of the youth of the city." Upon this, the Toronto Saturday Night thus discourses, referring to a resolution of the Ministerial Association of Toronto:

Perhaps these gentlemen, like our old friend Edwards, think "that all children are young vipers, and infinitely more hateful than vipers," and are not deserving of fresh air and sunshine.

Toronto's city solicitor states that there is no law prohibiting the use of the Howard Park slides on a Sunday any more than there is prohibition of the use of the various other hills throughout the park. However, the Sad Sundayites will probably find one somewhere, more is the pity.

Just wherein, to quote part of the resolution, lies "a peril to the spiritual interests of the youth of the city," when these boys and these girls — the men and women of to-morrow — are building up healthy bodies, and incidentally a vigorous and robust nation, by indulging in any outdoor sport of a wholesome character such as tobogganing or skating, is hard to fathom, and hardly fits in with present ideas of what a Sunday is made for.

Fortunately, we have gone a long way since the Puritanical notions of how to spend a Sunday were generally accepted on this continent. Most of us have learned that putting on long faces and speaking below one's breath are not necessary to salvation, and withal we are happier, more content and better citizens than were these Puritans of old, whom the General Ministerial Association are endeavouring to emulate.

We are appealing far and wide in this country for funds with which to fight the white plague. We are straining our nerves and our purse-strings to stamp out tuberculosis, a disease which cannot thrive in fresh air and in sunshine; a disease from which the hills of Howard Park are free, but which lurks in the dark corners of our churches and our homes. Healthy minds grow out of healthy bodies. Robust manhood and womanhood, made vigorous by the very thing which the Ministerial Association is decrying, will do more for this and future generations that all the sermons the Sad-Sundayites may preach.

Have the members of the Ministerial Association ever taken the trouble to ascertain what proportion of the people who flock to Howard Park on a winter's day is confined in offices, factories and stores throughout all the sunshiny hours of the week days? Probably not. In their zeal to save these people's souls, they would condemn their bodies. They imagine, in their ignorance of human nature, that by driving people out of Howard Park on the Sabbath day, they will succeed in driving them into church. The time was when this procedure would have brought fruit, but the time passed with the stake, the whipping post and the Spanish Inquisition.

RELIEVE THE FARMER.

(Toronto Star.)

All the Canadian railways have now agreed to carry wheat to Minneapolis and Duluth at the same rate as to Fort William and Port Arthur. This action was taken at the request of the farmers of Saskatchewan, all whose grain could not otherwise be marketed. As the railways cannot handle all the grain through channels wholly Canadian, they are taking a sensible course in using, and allowing the Canadian farmers to use, any American facilities that may be available.

The Interstate Commerce Commission of the United States has sanctioned these rates, and it is said that its action is taken out of regard for the American millers.

E. B. Biggar, editor of the Canadian Miller, says the situation can be viewed from two standpoints. One is from that of the American Government, seeking to aid the American milling industry, and the other is from the standpoint of the Saskatchewan farmer, who finds the chances very poor for getting his wheat milled at Port Arthur on account of the congestion there just now.

From every point of view therefore, the action is satisfactory. The Canadian farmer wants to sell his wheat, and the American miller wants to buy it and grind it into flour. The baker wants to make the flour into bread, and the people want to eat the bread. The Canadian railways and the American Interstate Commerce Commission facilitate this beneficial trade.

There are two classes from whom objections might have come — the American farmers, who are subjected to Canadian competition and the Canadian millers, who might have preferred to grind the Canadian grain instead of having it ground in the United States. We hear, however, of no such objection. It may be that the American farmers are not raising enough grain of the kind that the American millers require. It may be that the Canadian millers are overtaxed. In any case the thing to be aimed at is the greatest good of the greatest number. The farmers of the Canadian west need this relief more than the millers need their wheat.

A further possible objection is that raised by the Toronto News some time ago, namely, that the Canadian wheat, being ground into flour in the United States, may be mixed with American wheat and "lose its identity." But while it is right that we should be very careful about the character of our wheat, and not allow it to mix with the lower orders and imperil its social prestige, this also must give way to the general good. Wheat is made for man, not man for wheat. Transportation is made for man, not man for transportation. The milling industry is made for man, not man for the milling industry.

COULD NOT RAISE MY RIGHT ARM

OLD BATTLEFORD, C. D.

"For the past 4½ years, I have been suffering with Rheumatism. When I read in the papers that GIN PILLS, would positively cure rheumatism, I wrote you for a free sample to try. I could not raise my right arm because of the awful pain in my shoulder—was not able to drink. After taking a few GIN PILLS, I was able to lift my hand and put it on the top of my head.

I went to the Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon and met an old fisherman named La Pape. His limbs were stiff from Rheumatism and I gave him some Gin Pills. I met him again in a few days and he told me he could lift his arms, which he had not been able to do for ten years. ADOLPHE B. MAHE.

By JOHN REICH

"Exceedingly clever! Listen to this: "A marriage has been arranged, and will shortly take place between Paul Farley, Esq., of New York, U.S.A., at present in England, visiting Sir Thomas Hargrave, M.P., of Weyberne Hall, and Rowena Matilda, widow of Guy Wycherly, Esq., late of The Larches ,Weyberne.' "

She sat bolt upright in astonishment.

"It's untrue, absolutely untrue," said very earnestly, "there's not a shade of a shadow of truth in it."

"You are very positive, Agnes," he said, lifting his eyebrows; "as imaginative and resourceful as we know our charming widowed neighbour to be, still, I don't think she would dare to insert that announcement without some foundation to go upon."

"I simply know what he has told me himself in the ordinary conversational way," she answered, instantly seeing that a temperate middle course was the only safe and practicable one to pursue. "Mrs. Wycherly may have inveigled him into something like an apology for a proposal and taken advantage of it."

He leaned back, looking at her thoughtfully, tilting his chair to a dangerous degree.

"I expect you've about hit it, Aggie," he said, admiringly, "and I can tell you the exact time it occurred. It was fifteen minutes past twelve when I saw him come careering—great Scott! if my surmise is correct, this notice must have been sent to the paper before Farley proposed. It must either have been posted early yesterday morning, or overnight."

"But how could she be sure he would ask her?" she demanded, with round wondering eyes; "how foolish she might have made herself look."

"She is a good deal more likely to make other folk look foolish, my dear," he returned quickly. "I wonder why he refused to confide in me? I felt sure the trouble came from that quarter, and that he was in an unholy dilemma."

"Did you ask him to confide in you?"

"Not in so many words, but his not doing so amounted to a refusal after the way in which I opened up the invitation."

"How did you know there was anything wrong?" she asked, leaving her place to fetch his cup.

"Why, I saw him come leaping downstairs, three steps at a time, with a face like a hunted stag. He rushed outside, across to the outskirts of the lawn, and I found him huddled up on a seat, looking as if—Babylon had fallen. He said he was ill, sick, bilious, or something, with dancing, and he decided there and then to go home. I did what I could but, of course, I was not going to force his confidence, and—well—I daresay he knows his own business best."

He turned again to the paper with the air of one who had done with a matter, at least so far as he was concerned. But his face was set and unusually grave; he looked vexed, disappointed, and hurt. Agnes was silent, she scarcely knew what to say, it was all so mysterious and unexpected. She was quite certain that it was Paul's intention to keep clear of Mrs. Wycherly, to treat her with all due respect and politeness, but to give her a wide berth, not to go one hair's breadth from the cool, calm, civil role he had adopted since his terrible mistake in the shrubbery.

"Did I tell you," he asked after a while, laying aside the paper, "that Sir Thomas wants us to dine tonight, to meet Graham—see?"

"Oh, we'll go," she said, brightening; "perhaps we shall hear something comprehensible, have some light thrown upon this mysterious engagement."

"Perhaps," he remarked, indifferently.

"Now, Felix," she said coaxingly, going round behind his chair and laying a soft, eager hand on his blonde head, "after all the protestations of regard and liking I've listened to, you're surely not going to desert that poor boy in his trouble? It's his first false step; you will help him to recover it, won't you, dear?"

"Is it a false step? Does he need assistance? You must not lose sight of the temptation, Agnes. Wealth and beauty are two powerful, all-sufficient factors to enlist against poverty and hard work. However clean a man's mental and moral state may be, the daily knowledge that he has merely to raise his little finger to possess that and much more can only serve to besmirch his whitest impressions, to steep his senses in an unwholesome fascination, and feed his lustful passions. It's not an easy matter to lift a man once he is on his knees before Mammon."

"Yes," she said, sitting on the arm of his chair and slipping a hand around his neck. "I dare say that's true enough, but Felix, dear, it does not apply in this case. By some means which I can't understand or conceive, Mr. Farley has been drawn into a silly, stupid admission which a woman like Mrs. Wycherly would know exactly how to twist into a genuine proposal without a loophole for escape."

Felix remembered his warnings on that head, and impatiently flung the paper on the table.

"Then, if he's been such an unmitigated young fool he must shake himself free as best he can. Besides, Agnes, if the fellow won't tell me of his own accord, I'm not going to take upon myself to ferret out his private affairs, why should I?"

"Because he is your friend and you are fond of him: we are both fond of him, and should be sorry enough if harm came to him, if we stood aloof and let him walk deliberately into that lioness's den without a word to hinder him."

"By Jove- he'd get nicely mauled if he wanted to retreat now," he laughed; "but perhaps he has no desire to figure as an apostate lover."

"Felix," she said, slipping over the chair's arm into his lap, "Mr. Farley had no more intention of committing himself with Rowena Wycherly than you had, I am certain of it, as sure as I shall one day lie in my grave."

He looked at her long and closely. He had never known her to be so tenaciously positive about anything in her life, and as he gazed at her sweet winsome face a great light burst in upon him.

"Agnes," he said, taking her by the arms and sitting her straight up on his knee, facing him, "there is a reason why Farley should not of his own free will have sought Mrs. Wycherly, and you know it. Will you tell me the reason? Agnes, is there anything, however slight, between you and Paul?"

"Nothing,' she said, with a straight open honest glance; "we are only friends — real good comfortable friends, nothing more. Felix, if you could strip both our hearts bare and look in and through them, you would find nothing there but what you could approve and sanction. Why, I would rather wed Jack Hunter than Paul Farley, and that's saying a good deal."

"Then what is the cause of your implicit faith in Farley? How is it you are so sure of his motives, so sure that his tone of mind is properly set in a moral, orthodox direction?"

"It's because I'm a woman," she said, leaning towards him with a caressing smile, "and endowed with a woman's unerring instinct. I don't believe I've ever yet asked you a real, a huge, favour, Felix, but I'm going to ask one now. Will you, just for this 'once, trust a woman's quick wit in reading between the lines, her unfailing ability to solve a riddle set by another woman, and put aside all prejudice in order to help a friend in trouble."

"If he or anyone else were in real, unmistakable trouble I think I should be the last man to hang back or refuse help."

"He is in trouble," she exclaimed, jumping up and clasping her hands "Oh, Felix, don't be obstinate; I am convinced that the situation is quite too serious to be trifled with."

"I'll promise you this, Agnes," he said, rising and brushing the crumbs from his waistcoat, "if Farley appeals to me for advice or help in any way, I'll give it him ungrudgingly. I can't say more than that, can I?"

"And if you saw him in any danger, I suppose you wouldn't put out a finger to help him unless he implored you on his bended knees?" she said, half laughing, half irritated.

"If I saw him tumble in the river, I daresay I should jump in and pull him out without waiting for a very pressing invitation from him," he returned quizzingly, and with something akin to a playful paternal action he leaned forward and kissed her on the forehead.

"Good-bye, take care of yourself, I shan't be home to lunch, but I'll be back in good time to dress for dinner: Sir Thomas likes his last feed in the day punctual."

Would Fall In a Faint

When She Attempted to Work, so Exhausted Was the Nervous System

The Feeble, Wasted Nerves Were Restored and Revitalized by

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Nervous prostration is a terrible disease to all who understand its symptoms. At times the sufferer feels comparatively well, but with slight exertion the dreadful helplessness returns and all strength and vitality seems to leave the system.

This letter from Mrs. Martin very well describes the terrible conditions in which many a sufferer finds herself. She also tells how she regained health and strength by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food after all other treatments had failed.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition from nervous exhaustion and prostration. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall to the floor. The weakness was so great that I could not so much as sweep the floor without fainting, but the nerve food helped me after the doctors failed. It has done wonders in building up my nervous system. I can do my own housework now and washing, and feel that this great medicine has been a God-send to me. I think it is the best of medicines."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXCELLENT CONNECTIONS FOR THE SUNNY SOUTH

To meet the demand of southern travel which generally takes place this season of the year, the C. P. R. is pleased to inform the public of the excellent connection made at Detroit, with the Pere Marquette for Jacksonville and other Southern points.

Passengers can leave Toronto on the C.P.R. fast train at 4.30 p.m., arrive Detroit 10.25 p.m., and connect with the Pere Marquette train leaving same depot at 10.45 p.m., and arrive at Jacksonville second morning after leaving Detroit.

The parlour and dining car service between Toronto and Detroit is par excellence, and from Detroit south through sleeping and dining car service is also operated.

This route takes you through the beautiful cities of Detroit, Mich.; Toledo, O.; Dayton, O.; Cincinnati, O.; and Atlanta, Georgia.

If intending passengers will call at the ticket office, 16 East King Street, full information will be furnished, and literature covering the route supplied.

Excellent connections can also be made to Florida, via Buffalo.

THE SISTERS OF ST. JOSEPH.

Dedicated to the community of Mt. St. Joseph, Peterborough.

They are passing through the portals to the day's appointed task, (Sombre black the outer garment — white as snow the heart within),
Not to tread the path of pleasaude,
Not to garner Dead Sea treasure,
But to war for souls with Satan and the luring call of sin.

See them in the busy schoolroom, training childish hearts and hands,
Earthly love and storied knowledge
giving to the plastic mind,
Truth from falsehood sifting,
Mundane actions upward lifting,
Christ-like, teaching youthful footsteps how the narrow way to find.

Bending low o'er anguished mortals in the watches of the night,
Soothing some poor tortured body in the healing homes of pain,
By the bedside vigil keeping,
Guardian angels of the sleeping,
Whilst from hushed lips up to heaven steals the Ave's sweet refrain.

Tenderly in crowded Hospice, grey-haired derelicts they tend,
To the world's flots and jetsam they have thrown their portals wide,
Ne'er a task is there too lowly
For these vestal virgins holy,
To do good to all their life's work—
same as writ of Him who died.

Not for worldly praise or glory, or the lighting last of gold,
Are they striving in the silence of their lowly convent home,
But they hear the Bridegroom calling—
'Tis His ardent love enthralling, Moves the Sisters of St. Joseph so to help His Kingdom come.

TEACHERS TRAINING CLASS.

The Teacher Training Class for St. John's Sunday school assembles tonight in the Guild room at 7.30. All wishing to engage in this important work and feel the need of training, should arrange to be present. 'Hurlberts' text book, recommended by the Sunday School Commission will be used

BRIGHT EYES

Bright eyes are among the most radiant of beauty's jewels, since they give animation and light to the entire face.

A harmless and generally satisfactory way to bring brightness to the eyes is to bathe them with a solution of boracic powder and tepid water. Put in a basin full of tepid water as much boracic powder as can be placed on a penny. When it has entirely dissolved bathe the eyes gently. Do not be afraid to allow the water to get into the eye, as it will remove all inflammation and tend to make this important beauty feature clear and brilliant, at the same time giving a restful and strengthening effect.

You have often been fascinated by the soulful eye, a dreamy, haunting, mystifying orb calculated to catch the fancy of any admirer of the beautiful. Soulful does not necessarily mean that the eyes are a wonderful violet, or a velvet brown, or a pool grey, or flashing black. More often the mysticism is the result of becoming light and shade. Boracic acid baths, if faithfully pursued, will cause shadows to appear directly beneath the lower lashes, not the shadows of sleeplessness, overwork, or dissipation, but a mere hint of purple throwing into high light the eyes' brilliancy and causing them to look much larger than they really are. This treatment should be taken once a day to get the best results.

MARKS BROS'. POPULARITY

In a recent interview, Mr. Joe Marks, the genial manager of the popular stock company was asked the secret of the financial success of the various theatrical enterprises promoted by himself and his brothers. His terse reply was, "We aim to please." The ambition so expressed strikes the keynote to the unique popularity which these brothers enjoy throughout Canada. An evening spent in the company of the capable artists of the company is one of pleasurable relaxation for the busy man, of wholesome amusement for the younger set, and yet at the same time is carefully adapted to cater to the more refined and discriminating tastes of the fair sex.

Marks Bros. appear at the Grand Opera House Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Jan. 22, 23 and 24, with a complete change of play and vaudeville nightly.

THE NA-DRU-CO. ALMANAC FOR 1912

A good almanac is ever welcome. The annual number of the Na-Dru-Co. Almanac, the 1912 Edition, now out, is if anything, more interesting and more useful than the two predecessors.

Besides the usual solar and lunar tables and dates of eclipses, the Na-Dru Co. Almanac gives much information, which it would be difficult to find elsewhere. Examples of this are the Map of Altitudes, Time Tables of the world, Figures on Area, Population, Exports and Imports, Records of Canadian Premiers, Governors-General, etc.

Nearly all leading druggists have copies of the Na-Dru-Co. Almanac for their customers, or it may be had by writing the National Drug and Chemical Co., of Canada, Limited, Montreal.

A NATURAL MISTAKE

Oliver Herford once entered a doubtful looking restaurant in a small New York town and ordered a lamb chop. After a long delay the waiter returned, bearing a plate on which reposed a dab of mashed potatoes and a much overdone chop of microscopical proportions, with a remarkably long and slender rib attached. This the waiter set down before him and then hurried away. "See here!" called Herford. "I ordered a chop." "Yes, sir," replied the man, "there it is." "Ah, so it is," mused Herford, peering at it closely. "I thought it was a crack in the plate."

A Lazy Liver

Upsets the Whole System.
Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Put Things Right Again.

Who lives to be strangled—the sluggish liver.

A bitter taste in the mouth—coated tongue—dizziness on rising suddenly—bowels alternately loose and constipated—these mean that the liver is out of order.

Instead of flowing into the bowels, to regulate them and aid digestion, the bile has been going all through the system, upsetting digestion, leaving the bowels constipated, and making the sufferer perfectly miserable. This is biliousness.

The quick, safe and certain cure is Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills. They clear out the clogged-up system, stir up the lazy liver, cleanse the stomach and bowels and purify the blood. The bile returns to its normal course, the food is again digested properly and all the disagreeable symptoms vanish.

Doctors prescribe Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills and they are known throughout the world as a proven cure for all digestive troubles. They are equally effective in strengthening weak kidneys and curing rheumatism.

INTERESTING STATISTICS ABOUT CANADA'S CROPS

OTTAWA, JAN. 18.—The Census and Statistics Office of the Department of Agriculture, has issued today the following bulletin, giving the final estimates of the area, yield and value of the principal field crops of the Dominion for 1911. The field crops of Canada are shown to have occupied last year a total area of 32,863,000, and their value, calculated at the average local market prices amounts to $568,712,000. The area under wheat last year was 10,374,000 acres, of which 1,173,000 acres were fall wheat in Ontario and Alberta, and the production was 215,851,000 bushels of the value of $136,567,000. Fall wheat produced 26,014,000 bushels of the value of $21,461,000. Oats occupied 9,220,000 acres, and yielded 348,188,000 bushels of the value of $126,812,000, barley 1,404,000 acres yielded 40,641,000 bushels of the value of $23,004,000, and flax 1,132,000 acres yielded 12,921,00 bushels of the value of $19,467,000. The combined area under rye, peas, buckwheat, mixed grains and flax was 2,481,000 acres, the yield 44,986,000 bushels, and the value, $41,560,000. Hoed and cultivated crops, comprising beans, corn for husking, potatoes, turnips and other roots except sugar beets occupied 1,063,000 acres, and yielded 170,884,000 bushels of the value of $73,290,000. Sugar beet in Ontario and Alberta had an acreage of 20,978 and a yield of 177,000 tons of the value of $1,165,000. Fodder crops, including fodder corn, hay, clover and alfalfa show an acreage of 8,290,000, a production of 15,499,000 tons and a value of $161,314,000. Alfalfa, a record of which was taken for the first time shows an area of 101,781 acres, with a yield of 227,900 tons. This valuable fodder crop is being principally grown in Ontario, Quebec, and Alberta, the average yield per acre for the whole of Canada being 2 1-4 tons.

For the year 1911 the areas from which the yields are calculated were those of the recent Census and the resulting data are not, therefore, strictly comparable with the estimates of the three previous years, which were based upon the reports of selected corespondents. It may be mentioned, however, that the area and production of wheat in 1911 exceed by over 1,000,000 acres and 65,862,000 bushels the estimates of 1910. A more satisfactory criterion of the differences between the two seasons of 1911 and 1910 is afforded by the average rates of yield per acre, which for fall wheat was 22.19 bushels in 1911, against 23.49 in 1910, spring wheat 20.63 against 15.53, oats 37.76 against 32.79, barley 28.94 against 24.62 and flax 11.41 against 7.97.

In the three Northwest provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta, the wheat production was 194,083,000 bushels, compared with 128,891,000 bushels, the estimate of 1910 of oats 212,819,000 compared with 126,753,000 and of barley 24,043,000, compared with 21,377,000. The wheat production of 1911 in Manitoba, was 60,275,000 bushels from 2,980,000 acres, in Saskatchewan 97,865,000 bushels, from 4,705,000 acres and in Alberta 36,143,000 bushels from 1,617,000 acres.

By provinces the total value of all field crops in 1911 was as follows: Prince Edward Island, $8,846,700; Nova Scotia, $14,297,000, New Brunswick $16,797,000; Quebec, $103,187,000; Ontario, $193,260,000; Manitoba, $73,136,000; Saskatchewan $107,147,000; Alberta, $47,750,000, British Columbia, $1,290,000.

Owing to the exceptionally mild weather which prevailed during the fall and early winter live stock are reported as having entered winter quarters in excellent condition. As a genral rule winter supplies are ample.

BROKE HER CHAINS

She Wore Them For 30 Years But is Now a Free Woman.

A venerable lady over in Iowa says that she was a regular coffee drinker for 30 years, and although convinced that the habit was the cause of her increasing nervousness, she was loath to give it up. Tea contains the same drug—caffeine—found in coffee.)

"I became so nervous," she says, "that when I had callers it would excite my nerves so that I would sit and cry for an hour or more after they had gone. I could not even go up town to do a little shopping with any comfort, and I would often get all ready and then take off my hat and stay at home and have a crying spell.

"I began drinking Postum about a year ago, giving up coffee entirely. From the beginning my health showed improvement and soon I became hearty and strong, free from bodily discomfort, with a tranquil spirit, and so remain to this day. And I owe it all to the use of Postum." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

A STRAY SPARK

Mr. R. H. Hunter stated to the Examiner that the fire which broke out in the rear of his premises on Wednesday night was not caused by hot ashes, as was at first supposed, but is believed to have resulted from a stray spark of a plumbers torch. The plumbers had been working in the building the day before thawing out water pipes.

A BAD FALL

Mr. John McNaughton of Bethune street, whilst walking on the G. T. R. station platform, last evening, slipped and sustained a nasty fall. He was picked up by some of the men and taken to his home in a delivery sleigh. On enquiry, this morning, it was ascertained that no bones were broken. He was badly shaken, however, and will be confined to his home for a day or so.

RECEPTION GIVEN TO ALL SAINTS' NEW RECTOR

Enjoyable Programme Featured Occasion—There Was a Large Attendance of the Congregation.

AN INTERESTING EVENT

An interesting event took place last evening in the parish room of All Saints church, when a reception was given to the new rector, the Rev. R. B. Grobb, M.A.

Despite the inclement weather conditions the parish was exceedingly well represented, as also was that of St. John's. The room was gaily decorated with flags and bunting and myriads of coloured lights hung above the table at the head of the room, while on a streamer hung in the centre of the hall were the words, "Welcome Rector." Mr. F. Dawson occupied the chair.

Rev. Canon Davidson opened the evening with a prayer and after a few remarks by the chairman, some good musical items were rendered. Mr. Cyril Devey delighted the assembly by his pianoforte selections, while an admirable solo was rendered by Mr. G. E. Chandler. Miss R. Dawson also distinguished herself by her singing. The Eolian Quartette, namely, Messrs. Chandler, Brown, Barling and Downs maintained their usual reputation with regard to harmony and their contributions brought forth lou dapplause. The Rev. Canon Davidson gave an address of welcome to the new rector and remarks were also passed by Mr. J. Hogan and Mr. J. R. Ward. The Rev. Mr. Grobb ably responded.

At the conclusion of the programme the assembly participated in a dainty supper, and the remainder of the time assumed the character of a social evening and a very enjoyable time was spent.

The arrangements were exceedingly well managed and formed a considerable asset in rendering the evening a very successful one.

Ladies of Culture and Refinement Use Salvia Hair Tonic. It makes the Hair Beautiful

At last a remedy has been discovered that will positively destroy this pest.

That Dandruff is caused by germs is accepted by every sensible person.

Dandruff is the root of all hair evils.

SALVIA will kill the dandruff germs and remove Dandruff in ten days, or money back.

McDermid and Jury guarantees it. It will grow hair, stop itching scalp, falling hair, and make the hair thick and abundant. It prevents hair from turning gray, and adds life and lustre.

SALVIA is a hair dressing that has become the favourite with women of taste and culture, who know the social value of beautiful hair. A large, generous bottle costs only 50c. at leading druggists everywhere, and in Peterborough by McDermid and Jury. The word "SALVIA" (Latin for sage) is on every bottle.

Also sold at Payne's Drug Store.

Peculiar Death Of Well Known Lindsay Man

(Lindsay Warder.)

A sad death occurred last night at the Ross Hospital when Mr. John Taylor, a well known resident of Lindsay street south, passed away. The circumstances surrounding his death are somewhat peculiar. Mr. Taylor came to the police office last night about six o'clock telling a very improbable story of his house being filled with Italians and Polacks. Chief Chilton realized that he (Mr. Taylor) was a sick man and sent for the doctor. On arriving the doctor informed the Chief that Mr. Taylor's right lung was filled with pneumonia, and that his heart was very weak and it was doubtful if he would live twenty-four hours.

After a great deal of persuasion on the part of the Chief and the doctor Mr. Taylor was removed in a cab to the hospital, placed in a private ward and every possible attention given to him. In spite of all care he passed away through the night.

The deceased leaves behind him to mourn his loss a little girl and a young boy and also a brother, Richard, of town.

As the mother has been dead some years the children have the sincerest sympathy of the readers of The Warder and citizens in general.

For a number of years the deceased resided in Valentia where he is well known.

A great deal of credit is due Chief Chilton in making out a case of sickness and placing the man in the hospital instead of in the lock-up, as has so often been done in Toronto and other places.

SUFFERED

With Biliousness and Sick Headache

Calgary, Alberta, July 8, 1911.

I was a great sufferer for a long time with Biliousness, Sick Headache and Liver trouble. Nothing seemed to do me any good. I had almost given up in despair when I decided to try

FIG PILLS

After taking about half a box the headaches stopped and my appetite improved. I have just finished the fifth box and feel as well as ever. I can heartily recommend Fig Pills for stomach and liver troubles.

ENLARGED

Alex. Windover, who was arraigned in the police court a few days ago, charged with the non-support of his wife and family, and was remanded to appear this morning, when a number of witnesses were called. The witnesses were examined this morning, but Windover failed to appear, and the case had to be enlarged for a week.

ANNUAL MEETING OF EXHIBITION

At the annual meeting of the directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition held this afternoon in the City Council Chambers, Mr. J. H. Garbutt, of Smith, was unanimously elected president of the Exhibition for the ensuing year. Mr. Garbutt has been vice-president of the Association for a number of years and has been a most capable and energetic official. A full report of the meeting will be given in to-morrow's Examiner.

A PAPER BY MRS. A. MOWAT

The reading circle in connection with the Women's Art Association met last night in the Public Library and had the pleasure of hearing a very interesting paper on "The Mycenian Period in Greek Art" by Mrs. A. Mowat. Mrs. Mowat had evidently made a careful study of her subject and her well-prepared paper was greatly enjoyed. The Reading Club is free to all members of the Women's Art Association and meets every Thursday evening.

THE MANITOBA ASSURANCE CO.

A good reputation is a good asset. A firm holding a good record in the community for a generation or so commands patronage, as the public know they can be absolutely relied upon. Just so in the insurance world. The Manitoba Assurance Company for twenty odd years (as the great Company behind it has done for generations) has settled and paid its losses and generally treated the public in such a way as to have earned a great and most enviable reputation, such as has made it a household word for honest and square dealing. If you haven't a policy in the Manitoba, get one. Agent, Davis-Thompson Co., Limited.

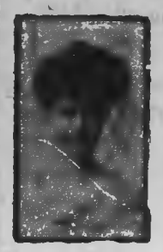
THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"OH dear, I do so hate to have to say, 'Haven't you something less expensive?' " I heard a young girl complain the other day. "I do hope the time will come when I shall have some money, so that I can go into a shop and order what I want and not even ask the price."

Let me tell you, little girl, and all your sisters who have felt the same way, when the time comes that you have "some money," as you put it, it is very likely that you will be just as much interested in prices, and not so much afraid to show your interest, as you are now.

That is, if you are like the average woman of means.



Do you know, I am constantly more impressed with the fact that it appears to be only the rich people who dare to be economical, only the people who don't need to count the pennies who are willing to be seen counting them.

A day or two after Christmas, the time when bargains are supposed to grow on every tree, I went shopping. And the things that impressed me, even more than the bargains I found, was the number of richly dressed, and evidently well-to-do women, who were bargain-hunting.

You would certainly have thought, from the way these women were dressed, that they were of the class who might go into any shop at any season of the year and order anything they wanted without even inquiring the price. And yet there they were, standing three deep around the counter, waiting their turn for a share of the clerk's attention, and even enduring the manifold discomforts of shopping on a stormy morning, in order to take advantage of the bargains.

The other day a neighbour of mine, who has a very comfortable income, set off on a journey across the continent. And how do you suppose he started on that journey? He walked down to the station beside the gardener who pushed a wheelbarrow loaded with his master's trunk.

Now I'll wager that none of his less prosperous neighbours would have dared to do that. They would have thought it absolutely necessary at least to have the trunk taken down by an expressman and probably to have hired a cab.

So it goes. Those who need to look long at the pennies before they spend them, don't even dare to be careful of the dimes. And those who apparently can afford to be careless of their dollars aren't afraid to be seen counting their pennies.

"Perhaps," someone reminds me, "perhaps it's because these people didn't stop counting their pennies the moment prosperity threw a glance their way, that she continues to abide with them, instead of merely making them the fleeting visits she pays to most of us."

Well, there IS something in that, my friend.

PUSH PETERBOROUGH

The Support of Citizens Required. Some Examples from Other Places

Article No. 6

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Peterborough has the essentials and accessories for a manufacturing centre in a superior degree. We have seen that this is true. It has grown rapidly, more rapidly than nearly every city in Ontario in the past ten years. The returns have demonstrated this. What further can be done, in addition to what is now being done, to push Peterborough forward?

At present this work is in the hands of a Committee of the Council on which the Board of Trade has three representatives. A keen lookout is kept for new factories or foreign manufacturing concerns that contemplate entering Canada, and correspondence is continually going on with these, as well as personal interviews. To explain all that is done would probably be injudicious, as it would give valuable hints to other cities, but I am assured, and have been shown evidence to sustain that assurance, that the committee is alert and active.

An alert and active committee, no matter how competent and aggressive must be supported by the citizens generally. When by-laws are submitted the electors must vote for them in sufficient numbers to satisfy an absurdly drastic law or the Committee's efforts may come to naught.

Here are some examples of what has been done recently in some other places in the way of carrying by-laws to aid industries:

In Owen Sound—To loan $15,000 to a knitting factory; to loan $25,000 to a furniture factory, and to loan $20,000 to a baby carriage factory. Altogether, Owen Sound passed by-laws involving $110,000 for industrial assistance.

In Guelph—To loan $20,000 to the Independent Tire Co., and to give fixed assessment to four factories.

In Belleville—To guarantee bonds to the amount of $25,000 for and give a fixed assessment to one industry, and to aid another concern.

In Dunnville—To authorize a loan of $30,000 to one Company and to purchase a site and put up a building for another at a cost of $10,000.

In Wingham — To grant $10,000 and a fixed assessment to a foundry.

In Mount Forest—To loan a carriage Company an additional sum of $14,000.

In Drayton—To grant a loan of $4,000, a free site and exemption from taxes to a flax mill.

In Newmarket—To grant a loan of $25,000 to a motor car company.

In Port Arthur — To guarantee bonds to the amount of $30,000 to a factory to make interior finishings, and for granting assistance to a match factory. In all, Port Arthur voted to raise $150,000 in five industrial by-laws.

In Aurora—To loan a company $10,000 and grant exemption from taxes.

In St. Catharines—To give a lock factory nine acres of land, free water, exemption for ten years and a fixed assessment for another ten years.

In Merriton—To give a fixed assessment to a tissue paper factory.

In Alston—To give a fixed assessment and free water to a silverware factory.

In Campbellford—To "assist" a bridge works in that town.

In Windsor — Three by-laws, to grant "the usual concessions" to three different concerns.

In Trenton—Three by-laws to grant fixed assessments to a baby carriage factory, a shirt and collar factory, and a button factory.

In Chatham—To loan $40,000

In Perth—To loan $25,000.

In Sarnia—To grant a bonus of $30,000 to a factory. This industry is one Peterborough had correspondence with.

Fort William—To aid two concerns in regard to one of which $102,000 is to be raised by the city.

Milton—To guarantee the bonds of a shoe company to the extent of $112,000, the Company to expend $15,000.

Brampton—A loan of $43,000 to a foundry.

Stratford—A loan of $10,000 to a factory for piano accessories.

Thorold—A fixed assessment to a paper and pulp company.

Woodstock—To aid an automobile factory.

Bracebridge — A fixed assessment for a woollen mill.

Deseronto—To aid a canning factory.

Durham—Exemption for a cement factory.

Napanee—To aid a rock drill factory.

Smiths' Falls — Concession in assessment to an agricultural implement factory.

Tilbury—A loan to a brick and tile yard.

Kingston—A fixed assessment to a locomotive works and privileges to a box factory.

Ridgetown — Concessions to a canning factory.

Listowel—Exemption and free water to a furniture factory.

This list is not a complete one; it has been made from paragraphs noticed in casual reading of the papers and in these paragraphs full particulars are not given. It, however, serves the purpose of indicating what other places do in the way of carrying by-laws to assist industries and our people must support in the same way those engaged more directly in the work of advancing the city, industrially, in order to secure new industries.

Yours truly,
Civis Sum.

OBITUARY

E. L. LeCLAIR.

The following death notice appears in recent Brockville papers:

LeClair — At Brockville, Sunday, Jan. 14th, 1912, Edmond Langdon LeClair, aged 31 years.

The funeral took place from his parents' residence, North Augusta Road, Wednesday morning, at nine o'clock to St. Francis Xavier church thence to the cemetery.

The deceased was the brother of Mr. Lewis J. LeClair, formerly with the Kingair Hardware Co. of this city He was well known by many in Peterborough, having spent a season at South Beach summer resort, Clear Lake. All who had the pleasure of his acquaintance spoke of him as a young man of excellent character and a true social friend.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES

"My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and eczema on her head," writes Mr. H. W. Lear, Port Planford, Nfld. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her and on recommendation of a friend, I used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made a complete cure. With a grateful heart I write you this letter."

HOW VISITING CURLERS WILL BE ENTERTAINED

Sunday will be a quiet day for the visiting curlers. It has been arranged to have them attend Knox Church in the morning, accompanied by the local brithers, and in the afternoon they will be taken out for a sleigh drive. The programme for the remainder of the day will be of an unevential character.

On Monday morning they will visit the Canadian General Electric Company's works, after which a trip to the Quaker Oats will constitute the morning programme. At 1.30 o'clock the first games are scheduled to go sliding down the ice at the Charlotte street rink, and at 5.30 a banquet will be tendered the curlers in the Masonic Hall. Play will be resumed in the evening, and early Tuesday morning the visitors will depart for Toronto.

The visit of a number of rinks of players from Scotland, the very home of the sport, will enhance considerably the interest in Monday's competition, and no doubt there will be a large influx of visitors to the city on that day, as a result.

Do not choose a vocation for your daughter—do not insist that she becomes only a lady, when she might be a genius. Who knows but that the talent you repressed and strangled might have electrified the world. Give it free scope an da hearty welcome.

Opposition Forces Alteration in Investigation Bill

COCHRANE GETS WRATHY

Ottawa, Jan. 19.—The battle of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. Dr. Pugsley for amendments in the Government's bill defining the lines upon which the Morine inquiry into the various departments of the administration has borne fruit. The Minister of Justice announced, when the House again went into committee on the bill, that he would insert a clause giving any official against whom a charge was being investigated the right of being represented by counsel, and the Liberal amendment was accordingly withdrawn.

Hon. T. H. Crothers declared, in reply to Hon. H. R. Emmerson that the measure was not a new one.

"The Government has been wasting many millions," said Hon. Mr. Crothers. "I speak, of course, of the late Government. The new Government has not had time (Opposition laughter). When this Government is making an honest effort to constitute a commission with absolutely necessary powers honorable gentlemen opposite from the leader of the Opposition down are absolutely opposed to the very principle of it."

Hugh Guthrie (S. Wellington) described the marine commission as "a highly partisan tribunal." It was a very different matter, he said, for a Minister in a merely Departmental enquiry to depute his powers, and to apply it to a "roving or general commission." He wanted the words "or any qualified person" struck out.

Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden called the attention of the House to the fact that the commission under discussion was founded largely on the terms of one issued some years ago by the late Government.

It was not for the purpose of making charges against anyone, or investigating anyone, except in so far as his or their conduct might be impugned in the course of the investigation.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier remarked that commissions of that kind, though not intended to harass, could harass. All possible safeguards should be given persons whose conduct was liable to be called in to question. The work of the commission should be done by the commission itself.

Hon. Mr. Borden: "The ultimate responsibility is with the governor-in-council."

The bill was reported with minor amendments.

F. F. Pardee (W. Lambton) will, on Monday next, move for a copy of all correspondence, etc., relating to the proposed winter harbor at Sarnia and also with regard to the erection of an armory in the same town.

E. M. MacDonald (Pictou) stirred Hon. Frank Cochrane to wrath by the statement that his political friends regarded the Maritime Provinces as an incubus on the Dominion.

"You've no right to say that," interjected the Minister. Cries of "order" from the Opposition.

"I'm only telling the hon. gentleman what his friends in Nova Scotia have been saying," retorted Mr. McDonald. The Premier, he thundered, had absolutely falsified his promises to the people of Nova Scotia with regard to transportation.

Recovered Stolen Goods.

Brockville, Jan. 19.—An Ottawa detective visited Brockville yesterday in search of dress goods, silks and furs stolen by shoplifters in stores of that city and believed to be secreted at the homes of relatives of the guilty parties in Brockville. Two homes were searched on warrants and at both places goods to the value of $150 were recovered. For the original thefts a woman named Mrs. Goff, a former resident of Brockville is serving six months in jail.

Mrs. C. W. Mitchell Dead.

Ottawa, Jan. 19.—Mrs. C. W. Mitchell, wife of the former proprietor of The Ottawa Free Press, died very suddenly here Wednesday night. She was taken suddenly ill while attending an amateur performance at the Unitarian Church, and succumbed in an ambulance just as she reached home.

She was born in Toronto, the daughter of Alex. Jacques, 63 years ago. She is survived by a large family.

Havana, Jan. 19.—An official statement was given out yesterday morning regarding the long conference on Wednesday night between President Gomez and prominent political leaders representing all the factions and the veterans. The statement says:

"The meeting terminated with everyone breathing words of patriotism, because he found in his old companions in arms determination to save the republic, as might be expected from those professing their love for the Cuban fatherland."

May Upset Reduction Bylaw.

Kingston, Jan. 19.—Hotelmen of Kingston have hopes of being able to quash the bylaw for the reduction of tavern licenses by ten. The first step was taken yesterday when a recount of votes was arranged to take place on the 29th before Judge Price.

The official majority of 106 is known to be incorrect, as the deputy returning officer of the subdivision wrote council that he had made a wrong return, which brings the majority down to 67.

JUST TRY A TEN CENT BOX OF CASCARETS

Insures you for months against a Sick Stomach, Lazy Liver, Constipation or a Bad Stomach.

Put aside—just once—the Salts, Cathartic Pills, Castor Oil or purgative waters which merely force a passageway through the bowels, but do not thoroughly cleanse, freshen and purify these drainage or alimentary organs, and have no effect whatever upon the liver and stomach.

Keep your inside organs pure and fresh with Cascarets, which thoroughly cleanse the stomach, remove the undigested, sour and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the decomposed waste matter and poisons in the intestines and bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, coated tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated bowels. Cascarets belong to every household. Children just love to take them.

Kingston Police Poorly Paid.

Kingston, Jan. 19.—The Kingston police have petitioned commissioners for an increase of pay. They claim they are the poorest paid officers in Canada. They receive $50 per month and ask for $60. On night duty they do eleven hours and on day duty thirteen. There are men on the force who have seen twenty years' service and over.

Rojas Will Fight.

Buenos Ayres, Argentina, Jan. 19.—A despatch from Asuncion, capital of Paraguay, says that President Roya has informed the diplomatic corps that he has withdrawn his resignation. He intends to place himself at the head of the loyalists and regain his lost power.

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has a uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needs to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures disease of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.

FRANCE IS ANGRY

Capture of Vessel by Italy May Cause Serious Trouble

INTERVENTION TALKED OF

Paris, Jan. 19.—France is beginning to show considerable annoyance concerning the seizure of the steamship Carthage by Italian war vessels. It is asserted with emphasis that the arrest of the vessel was entirely unjustified in the first place, because aeroplanes were not mentioned in the list of contraband articles furnished to France by the Italian Government at the outbreak of the war between Italy and Turkey. In the second place the conference of London, in 1909, declared that aeroplanes were only conditional contraband and were not liable to seizure when found on board a neutral vessel, unless it proved they were intended for the enemy.

The aeroplane which was found on board the Carthage was purely for exhibition flights in Tunis, Egypt, and Greece, while the portions of an aeroplane also seized were for purposes of repair.

The third point raised is that the Carthage was a mail steamer, the seizure of which was a violation of The Hague agreement of 1907.

The French Parliamentary group for the promotion of international arbitration, at a meeting yesterday, presided over by Baron l'Estournelles de Consant, voted that incidents like the Carthage affair establish the necessity for bringing the Turco-Italian war to an end. The meetings passed a resolution to ask the French Government to intervene in order to put a stop to the conflict.

A TANGLE IN PEKIN

Plot and Counterplot Makes Capital Very Uneasy

DIE-HARD MANCHUS UNITE

Pekin, Jan. 19.—The foreign legations are preparing for trouble in Pekin to-day. The question of the abdication of the throne will be discussed by the Empress Dowager and the princes, but it is not thought that Yuan Shi Kai will take part in the conference. A rising in the capital has been looked for many times in the last four months and precautions has been taken in anticipation of it—needlessly, however, and the outbreak may not occur to-day.

But it has been long expected that the Manchu irreconcilables would unite in a measure when all hope for the administration had vanished. A placard posted last night indicated that the Manchu threats may be fulfilled.

It calls upon all loyal Manchus and Chinese to resist the abdication of the Emperor to the death.

The street near the office of the Chinese Foreign Board, at which Yuan Shi Kai resides, is heavily guarded by the Premier's own men, of whom it is said, there are 3,500. Many Chinese who have not yet deserted the city are preparing for flight to-day and prominent followers of Yuan Shi Kai are taking refuge outside their own homes, hoping that in the event of a massacre they will not be found.

The charges that Yuan Shi Kai has been disloyal to the Manchus, although pretending to support them, are attracting the attention of foreigners as well as the Manchus and Chinese. Some of the revolutionaries have long been saying that he was working for the overthrow not the salvation of the dynasty. But it has been thought that this charge was designed to discredit the Premier with the Manchus. Others charge Yuan Shi Kai with working for his own interest, and that he intended to become dictator, if he did not assume the throne.

The Imperialists, who distrust him point out that he has persistently withdrawn his army, although the trained Imperialist troops could easily disperse the untrained rebel volunteers. It is also said that the withdrawal of the army from Nanking was at Yuan Shi Kai's orders.

Whether the suspicion against the Premier are false or true, they are given sufficient credence to cause the organisation of anti-abdication bodies, against which Yuan Shi Kai has been compelled to take measures of defence, and it is authoritatively stated that the dynamite bomb against his life was the work of a Manchu faction.

So complex, indeed, is the situation, that the foreign ministers no longer attempt to elucidate it for their Governments.

China Needs Bloodshed.

London, Jan. 19.—Native telegrams report wholesale Republican offensive movements in defiance of the armistice, says The Daily Telegram's Pekin correspondent.

The correspondent adds that all the foreign observers agree that further blood-letting is essential to ease the congested condition of the whole country.

The men arrested for hurling the bomb at Premier Yuan were yesterday morning strangled by the public executioner.

BEAR CATS KEEP UP WINNING STREAK
DEFEATED PORT HOPE IN OVERTIME GAME

Peterboro's Gritty Little O.H.A. Team Again Show Their Mettle on the Road---Scored Four Goals in Last Ten Minutes.

4 TO 4 AT FULL TIME

The Peterborough Junior O. H. A. team have yet to be beaten. Last night the Bear Cats won another brilliant victory, beating Port Hope on their own ice by 8 goals to 4, after a most exciting over-time game. At full-time the teams were tied with four goals each, but the Bear Cats' superior condition and gameness told and in the second ten minutes of extra time they rammed four goals past Rowden.

It was a most creditable victory for the Petes, as the conditions were all against them, especially in the matter of refereeing. The ice was firm at the beginning, but soon grew soft and sticky, the result being that the Petes' combination, the strong feature of their attack was affected. They opened at a furious clip, while the ice was firm, and playing rings around the homesters, scored four goals, while the Ontarios were blanked. Later on, the condition of the ice made combination difficult, and, with Referee Lou Marsh, who evidently has not been converted into a friendly feeling for Peterborough, chasing the Bear Cats to the sidelines, for no apparent reason, and allowing Port Hope to get away with a lot of rough stuff, the Ontarios gradually pulled up. At half time the score was 4 to 2 in favour of Peterborough, and in the second half Port Hope scored twice, tying the score. The Bear Cats were having the better of the play, but could not seem to score, while they were being handled pretty roughly, and unable to protect themselves, with Marsh sending them to the boards every time they collided with a man. At that they claim they scored what should have been the winning counter, the puck going through the nets. Goal Umpire Keneally stated that the goal had scored, but Referee Marsh, although he had not seen the play, over ruled his decision, saying that he could not find a hole in the nets. His eyes could not have been as good as Leo Derocher's, however, as the latter succeeded in finding half a dozen, when he examined the nets afterwards. However, Marsh's decision went, and when full-time was called, the teams were tied. The first ten minutes of overtime resulted in no score, although the Petes had all the best of the play, the rubber being in Port Hope's territory all through. The next ten minutes, however, saw a different state of affairs. The Bear Cats, thanks to Trainer King Dillon and his assistant, Gene Hurtubise, were in the pink of condition, and were going just as hard as at the beginning. The Ontarios, had faded, and the Peterborough aggregation let loose another link of speed, and played them off their feet, slamming in four counters.

Port Hope had their best team of the season on last night, strengthening their line-up with a couple of Trinity College School players. Cobourg only beat them 5 to 2 in Cobourg on Tuesday without these men so that the Bear Cats won a fine victory last night.

The boys came through the game without any serious injuries, although the forwards are pretty well tatooed with cuts and bruises.

The Peterborough line-up was as follows:

Goal—Dwyer.
Point—Milloy.
Cover—Kenneally.
Rover—Weir.
Centre—Hall.

HOCKEY EXCURSION TO COBOURG WILL BE POPULAR

The Peterborough Junior O. H. A. team must win Monday's game in Cobourg to capture the championship of the district. A defeat will not put the Bear Cats out of the running, as it would tie the two teams, but a win is necessary in order to avoid a play-off and Capt. Hall and his gallant little crew are going into the game determined to record another victory for the blue and white. It promises to be the game of the season in this district, and a big crowd will take advantage of the fact that the Peterborough club is running a special train to Cobourg to accompany the team. A special G.T.R. train will leave Peterborough sharp at 7 o'clock on Monday evening, returning immediately after the game. The round trip fare will be $1.25 for adults and 65c. for children. The Bear Cats have the whole city behind them now, their fine showing at home and their grand playing away from home by winning in Lindsay and Port Hope having thoroughly aroused the fans. From 10 to 11 o'clock last night the telephones in the newspaper offices and in the hotels were buzzing all the time in answer to inquiries as to the game, and there was jubilation when the final result was announced. As a result of last night's game and the default of the Lindsay team of two games to Cobourg and one to Port Hope the standing of the group is as follows:

	Won	Lost	To P'y
Peterborough	4	0	2
Cobourg	4	1	1
Port Hope	1	4	1
Lindsay	1	5	0

Games yet to be played:—Peterborough at Cobourg, Monday, Jan. 21st, Port Hope at Peterborough, Monday, Jan. 29.

T. A. S. DEFEATED SAINTS' WON ROUGH GAME 2-0

In a rough, raggedly-played exhibition, before a small crowd, at Brock Street Rink last night, the T. A. S. team defeated Tommy Moffatt's All Saints' seven by 2 goals to 0, in a Trent Valley League fixture. The half-time figure was 1 to 0. It was an unsatisfactory game from the spectators' standpoint, as the teams showed a decided tendency to go after the man instead of the puck, and there was tripping, slashing, and heavy body checking galore, with a fight thrown in for good measure. None of the wing men were inclined to play their positions, and, as a result, the forwards were generally bunched in centre ice, giving little chance for real hockey. The Abstainers had the better of the play, and the score about indicates the respective merits of the two teams on their showing last night. The T.A.S. kept consistently trying to play together, and succeeded in tearing off some nice combined rushes, while the Saints showed no team work whatever. Both goal-keepers played fine hockey, Wilson and McFadden each pulling off some nice saves. For T. A. S., Lancefield, McPhee and Halpin were the best, while Anderson and Campbell were the pick of the All Saints' aggregation. Halpin and T. Lancefield were the goal-getters. Referee Bill Rose did his best to make the teams play hockey and kept the penalty box well filled. The teams were:

T. A. S.		All Saints
McFadden	Goal	Wilson
E. Lancefield	Point	Elliott
T. Lancefield	Cover	Campbell
McPhee	Rover	McPhee
Halpin	Centre	Anderson
Coughlin	Right Wing	McMartin
O'Dette	Left Wing	Hillier

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

The Bear Cats will practise to-morrow at Brock street rink between 6 and 7 o'clock in final preparation for Monday's big game at Cobourg. The following players are asked to be out sharp at 6 o'clock: Dwyer, Milloy, Kenneally, Denison, Weir, Hall, Cook, Clancy, M. Coughlin.

There will be doings in Belleville to-night when the Trenton Intermediates play Belleville. The Dead City team always make things interesting for Trenton when they pay a visit and to-night promises to be no exception to the rule.

Peterborough's old rivals, the Trenton team, will be here Tuesday night for an intermediate O. H. A. game, and the clash between these two teams for the first time since the memorable game in Belleville, last year, will be of sufficient interest to result in a crowded rink. Peterborough must win Tuesday night to be in the running and the locals will take no chances. They are determined to annex a win and are practising faithfully for the big battle. They will have a workout to-night, another on Monday and will be in the best of shape.

The Peterborough Intermediate O. H. A. team will practise to-night. A full turnout is expected in view of Tuesday's game with Trenton.

The Meter and Brass Depts. will try their strength at a game of hockey, which will be played at Brock street rink on Saturday to commence at 6 p.m. It is confidently expected that the Meter team will have very little trouble in putting the Brass boys to sleep. Still, they might possibly strike a snag, as this world is full of surprises.—Com.

There will be an important meeting of the executive of the Peterborough Hockey Club in Mr. Sam Ray's store to-morrow afternoon, at 2 o'clock. A full attendance of members is requested.

Sporting Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In a pool on the T. A. S. vs. All Saints hockey match, A had a score T.A.S. 9, All Saints 4; B. had a score, T.A.S. 6, All Saints 4; C. had a score, T.A.S. 10, All Saints 6. Which wins.—J. G.

The correct score was 2 to 0 in favour of T.A.S., and the correct percentage therefore 1000. A's score of 9 to 4 gives a percentage of .692, B's score of 6 to 4 a percentage of .600 and C's score of 10 to 6 a percentage of .625. Therefore A's score being closest to the winning percentage would win the pool.—Sporting Editor.

Sporting Editor of the Examiner:

Will you kindly settle the following dispute over a pool in regard to the recent Belleville-Peterborough game here. A has a score of 13 in favour of Peterborough and B has a score of 18 to 3 in favour of Peterborough. Which wins?

The correct score was 30 to 1 in favour of Peterborough and the correct winning percentage therefore .967. A's score of 13 to 1 gives a percentage of .928, while B's score of 18 to 3 gives a percentage of .857. A therefore wins the pool.—Sporting Editor.

Pension For Royal Family Of China

Special to The Examiner.

PEKIN, JAN. 19.—The London Times' correspondent here has wired his paper that the Royal family has agreed to abdicate with pensions aggregating three millions per year. An edict to this effect will be issued at once; also another, empowering Premier Yuan Shi Kai to establish a Republican form of Government. It is stated to-day that Dr. Sun has agreed to drop the Provisional Presidency, in favour of Yuan for First President.

NO SILVER DOLLARS

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, JAN. 19.—It is reported that an unexpected hitch occurred in the issue of Canadian gold pieces, which were announced to appear within the next month, from the Ottawa mint. The nature of the trouble has not been made public, but considerable delay is expected. It is not likely that Canadian silver dollars will be minted as was proposed some time ago. The dies for the coins were prepared, but further work has been stopped. It is felt that there is really no demand, but on the contrary, considerable objection to the turning out of "cart-wheels".

FACE WAS LITERALLY COVERED WITH PIMPLES.
Four Different Doctors Did Her No Good.
Two Bottles of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS Cured Her.
Bad blood is directly the cause of the face breaking out in pimples, and it is impossible to eradicate them unless you put your blood into good shape
Burdock Blood Bitters is compounded from roots, herbs, barks and berries, and is without a doubt the best remedy procurable for the purpose of driving all the blood impurities out of the system.
Mr. Geo. E. Miller, Clavering, Ont., writes:—"Last fall I was very much troubled with pimples. My face was literally covered with them. I went to four different doctors, but they could do me no good. One day a friend advised me to use Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got two bottles, and before I had taken all the first one, the pimples had nearly all disappeared, and by the time I had taken all the second one the pimples had disappeared completely, thanks to Burdock Blood Bitters. I would advise anybody who is troubled with any blood trouble to use Burdock Blood Bitters.

A Natural Gas Explosion

Special to The Examiner:

CHATHAM, ONT., JAN. 19.—Five members of the Chappel family, who live on the sixth concession of Dover, are now in the hospital, and one may die, as the result of a natural gas explosion in the house last night when one of the members of the family tried to light lamps. The whole side of the house was blown out. Every member of the family was seriously burned. It is thought that gas escaped from the water well in the yard, worked its way into the house, through the water pipe, and, being odourless, its presence was not detected until a match was lighted.

Some Suggestions as to How it May be Done. Co-operation Essential

Article No. 7

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—One of the plans developed in other places for encouraging small industries was one promoted in Moose Jaw. It was to have the city erect a large factory building, and subdivide it into separate premises and to rent it furnished with light, power and water at lowest prices. I did not notice whether this plan was carried out, although it was reported in a despatch, in the papers.

In an Ontario City a gentleman purchased a block of vacant land, and he gives free sites to factories. To one at least he gave, in addition to a site for the factory, several building lots as a bonus. He is paid a small salary by the city to promote the location of industries. Of course this gentleman expects to make money out of his land by inducing factories to locate there, but it looks like good business for the city, as well as for himself. In this place, when he needs a special fund to promote the location of a factory it is readily furnished by citizens, and a number of manufacturers and business men stand ready to back him up.

In Hamilton, some years ago, a by-law to aid an industry did not receive the necessary number of votes in its favour. Then another plan was put into operation. A large section of a township was annexed to the city, and by the terms of annexation the assessment and rate of taxation in the annexed territory were fixed for a term of years. Since then a factory locating there is given nominal taxation without a by-law, a vote or any further action, and this has assisted Hamilton greatly. Hamilton has since advocated abolishing the power to pass by-laws to give any assistance to factories, which would prohibit other cities from giving assistance and leave Hamilton's automatic system in full working order. A proposal has been recently made in Hamilton to raise a fund of $50,000 in subscriptions to purchase sites for factories.

The City Council cannot work miracles in securing industries. To accomplish results it must have means to do so—and must be able to offset efforts of other places. It cannot do that without the sympathy, cordial approval and active support of the citizens. When the Council asks for support and endorsement of a By-law it should not be withheld without serious reason. Hesitation here will mean Peterborough's loss and some other city's gain. Illustrations of this could be given it will, no doubt, be recalled.

The Board of Trade should be thoroughly organised to assist the Council. Its Committees should be formed and should not merely wait for something to do, but should be active in their own spheres in looking for and taking advantage of opportunities to promote the business welfare of the city.

We have seen that Peterborough has made not only creditable, but rapid progress. The conditions are all present for continued or more rapid advancement. It is a city of great natural advantages and of excellent acquired facilities. It is healthy; it has all the essentials and accessories for manufacturing in a superior degree; it has excellent facilities for carrying on business of all kinds; it is a beautiful city in which to live, with all the advantages for health, education, comfort, and pleasure, including the convenient and attractive summer resorts.

In brief, Peterborough is progressive and prosperous; a city of natural advantages, acquired facilities, and rapid growth; a centre of business and beauty, of utility and pleasure.

Hearty co-operation on the part of the citizens with an energetic Council and active Board of Trade will send Peterborough forward and bring greater things in the future, and all should be ready to act together, to push Peterborough forward to greater progress and prosperity.

Yours truly,
Civis Sum.

THE TRENT CANAL AND ITS OUTLETS

(From the Orillia Packet)

The Barrie papers are much exercised over the announcement in the Packet that the Minister of Railways and Canals has decided to proceed with the northern outlet of the Trent Valley waterway by way of the Severn River. The Advance and Examiner print communications from Mr. Haughton Lennox, M.P., denying that any such decision has been come to, and quoting correspondence which that gentleman had had with Hon. F. Cochrane, asking for an interview on the question. The Packet got its information from a despatch sent out from Ottawa some weeks subsequent to the date of the correspondence quoted by Mr. Lennox. The statements made in the despatch are to some extent borne out by the fact that the Government engineers are already at work on the final survey of the Severn Route.

Whether the decision has been finally made or not, there can be no question of what it will be. In his letter to Mr. Lennox, the Hon. Mr. Cochrane says that it "is a matter of engineering." Upon this basis the Severn is so far superior to the Nottawasaga route that there is really no room for comparison. The Advance refers to the Nottawasaga as the "cheaper and more direct route." If, instead of looking at the question of routes through purely local spectacles, the Advance would take the trouble to inform itself as to the facts it would not make such wild assertions, and perhaps it would not be a party to clogging a great public work for purely selfish reasons. At the time that the report on cost and advantages of the three routes was made two years ago, the Packet was sufficiently interested to ascertain that its tenor was such that there could be no doubt in the world that the Severn route was immeasurably the best, and that there could be no question of its final adoption. Taking the matter of cost alone, the estimate for the construction of the Nottawasaga route was three times as much as for the Severn. This was for the canal alone. Adding the cost of a breakwater and harbour at the mouth of the Nottawasaga, required because of its exposed position, the estimate was four times as high. And even this sum—something over six million dollars—would not provide the terminal facilities that would be required. For though it is exactly the same distance from the mouth of the Nottawasaga to Collingwood that it is from the mouth of the Severn to Midland, namely, nine miles, the Nottawasaga coast is so exposed that the barges that would make use of the canal, would be unable to count on making the run across with any certainty. This would mean that, in the end, as the canal came to be used commercially, another harbour would have to be provided. Neither Barrie nor Collingwood would be the gainer by the starting of another town at this point, which might grow to considerable importance, if it got railway connections. As to relative distances, it is exactly 60.30 miles from the outlet of the canal at Gamebridge by the Nottawasaga route, and 60.80 miles by the Severn—a difference of only half a mile. This is much more than made up by the fact that a natural waterway like the Severn, with high, rock banks, deep water and considerable width, can be navigated at much greater speed and with much greater ease than a narrow artificial channel having scarcely more water in it than is actually required to float the vessels. There is not an engineer who has investigated the question who does not favour the Severn route.

The fact is that the Barrie papers and people have shown no interest in the Trent Canal except when somebody else has made a move to urge its completion. They then at once become suddenly active and demand a "hearing." They seem to imagine that the primary object of the canal is to drain a few thousand acres of swamp land. So far they have only succeeded in delaying a great public work, to their own detriment as well as that of all the territory to be served by the canal. When the then Minister of Railways and Canals went down the Severn four years ago, he intimated his intention to push the northern outlet to completion without delay, and hoped to have it ready for navigation within two years. The canal would quite likely have been open to the bay before this if the Barrie people had not chosen that juncture to start an agitation for the Nottawasaga route and to demand a survey, which the Department for political reasons felt impelled to grant. Governments are proverbially slow in taking up projects the advocates of which are at variance among themselves. However Barrie got their survey, the report was against their route, and, in the public interest, they should drop their agitation. Instead of this they now want to resort to "deputations" which will try to show that they know more about the question than the engineers. Doubtless they also count on being able to exert political pressure. But we have no idea that in the end such considerations will have any effect upon the final decision. At most they can only result in further delay, which would be a calamity to all concerned, including Barrie.

AN OPEN LETTER

From a Well Known Clergyman Showing How Indigestion Can Be Cured

Rev. T. A. Drury, Beamsville, Ont., writes as follows: "For eighteen years I have been increasingly impressed with the wonderful effects for good wrought by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. For some years I had suffered almost constantly with chronic dyspepsia of the most stubborn type, attended by different other troubles which invariably follow, or accompany it as its results, prominent among which were kidney trouble and piles. Against this complication of disease I waged a vigourous warfare for several months, using many different remedies, none of which gave permanent relief. In my discouragement I was about to discontinue treatment altogether when I was advised by a friend to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the use of which, though under very unfavorable circumstances, soon revived my drooping courage. The medicine struck at the root of my weakness and the different troubles of which dyspepsia was the prime cause released, let go, and disappeared. In one month I increased fifteen pounds in weight, and received a new lease of life. Only six boxes of pills produced this wonderful change in my health, which was miraculously permanent.

Later my sister so reduced by an aemia (though under the care of our family doctor) that she could scarcely walk. In this dangerous extremity Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were resorted to and in a brief space of time restored her to perfect health.

Being a minister of the gospel many test cases have come under my notice, in all of which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have fully sustained their world-wide reputation. his is why I can conscientiously recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as being superior to anything known to me in the treatment of the many diseases for which they are recommended."

A fact not generally known is that South America is greater in area than North America, and situated entirely to the east of the Northern continent, north and south line along the Atlantic coast of the United States passing through the Panama Canal along the west coast of South America. Valparaiso in Chile is slightly east of New York. The most easterly point at Pernambuco, Brazil, is but three days' sail across the narrowest part of the Atlantic to Africa.

POULTRY WORLD

POULTRY DISEASES AND REMEDIES.

By J. WESLEY GRIFFIN, in Poultry Fancier.

It is unquestionably true that a large number of failures in poultry enterprises are due directly to disease and that these diseases are, as a rule, not of a contagious nature, but rather the result of mismanagement, unskilled feeding and too little attention to general sanitation. Any system of feeding and care which does not keep the fowls active, bright-eyed, of keen appetite, sleek in appearance and of hard flesh is fundamentally wrong.

It is by careful housing, feeding and management that the diseases described in the following paragraphs may be prevented. One must recognise that disease is a sign that proper care and sanitation have not been practiced and must take immediate steps to rectify these conditions. The individual treatment of fowls is expensive and unsatisfactory, for after the fowl is cured it usually takes a little longer time to get her back into laying condition. The preventive method of treatment is the safest and most economical.

For this reason importance should be attached to sanitation. The pens should be thoroughly sprayed with a disinfecting solution or whitewashed three or four times a year. It is advisable to spray the nest boxes and perches frequently during warm weather. As danger and death linger in damp and filthy accumulations, do not let the droppings become damp and filthy; clean the dropping boards every other day, or at least twice a week.

Sprinkle ashes or land plaster over the clean boards and again over the droppings between cleanings. This practice not only keeps the pen cleaner and sweeter, but makes it easier to clean the dropping board and greatly increases the value of the manure, because it absorbs the liquid and retains the nitrogen. A dust wallow should be provided in which the fowls can remove the scurf from their bodies and better fight the lice that suck and sap up their vitality. For disinfecting with whitewash, the addition of one pint of crude carbolic acid to every two gallons of the mixture makes it much more effective in destroying both animal parasites and bacteria. For spraying the nest boxes and perches during the summer months, a solution of three parts kerosene and one part crude carbolic acid will give excellent results.

I will not describe many of the diseases to which poultry are susceptible, just a few of the most common and which are the first to make their appearance.

BUMBLEFOOT.

Bumblefoot is a term commonly applied to the condition when an injury has resulted in the formation of pus in the fleshy part of the foot. The injury may be received in various ways, such as falling or dropping from a perch or tree onto a bare floor, or scratching among cinders or other sharp and hard substances. The formation of pus causes a swelling and wears away the tissue until it breaks forth either at the upper or lower surface. A scab forms over this opening, but the continued formation of pus repeatedly forces open the wound.

For treatment, remove the scab or lance the swollen area and thoroughly clean and disinfect the cavity with a diluted solution of carbolic acid or hydrogen peroxide. Keep the sore well greased with carbolated vaseline until healed.

HEN TURKEYS BEST.

The hen turkeys sell first, and medium-sized carcasses sell best in market. The market turkey should be shorter in legs and neck than is ordinarily the case, and very full in the breast. A compact body, meat and fat, rather than a large size and coarse structure.

FOR JEWISH HOLIDAYS.

The quality of poultry for the Jewish holiday trade must be better than at any other seasons. They prefer large, fat fowls, the larger the better. Those weighing eight or nine pounds are most desired. For the dressed poultry trade these are too heavy, four or five pounds being best. One reason why the Jews wish very fat poultry is that they use the grease in the place of lard, the latter being a product of swine, which is forbidden food to them.

LIQUID LICE KILLER.

A good liquid lice killer is made by dissolving in ordinary kerosene all the crude napthaline flakes it will take up. The solution is an excellent disinfectant for use about poultry houses, as well as a lice killer. Used on the dropping boards and roosts, it will destroy and prevent red mites, and will also kill disease germs and seeds of worms and other parasites.

FAILURE IN POULTRY.

Because there are failures with poultry is no argument that the business is a failure. There are lots of people who never make a success of anything they undertake. Work out your own salvation, and never mind what the croakers have to say.

EGGS AS FOOD.

Eggs and milk are two of the most valuable food products in nature, not only as luxuries, as they surely are, but for their intrinsic value as nutrition. They are equally good mixed or unmixed, and are the chief elements in the richest dainties of the table.

It's a wise plan to stir up the nest material when you gather eggs. A hen's egg occasionally slips down under the straw and if not found it may be hidden for a month. Then the hen may stir it up and you may sell it for a strictly fresh egg laid while you wait.

GOOD NORTHERN SPYS SAME PRICE AS ORANGES

Prof. Hutt declares apples will remain as high as oranges for many winters.

"It is not to be wondered at that Northern Spy apples are as expensive as oranges in the larger cities of Ontario at the present time. To one who understands conditions this does not seem remarkable any more than that oranges are as dear as good quality Spys. Why shouldn't they be?" said Professor H. L. Hutt, of the Horticultural Department of the Ontario Agricultural College, in an interview with a representative of the Weekly Globe and Canada Farmer in Guelph a few days ago.

"But this has been an exceptional year as regards prices in Ontario?" the interviewer volunteered.

"Although the drought of last summer and the warm rains that followed it in the fall to a degree reduced the keeping qualities of Ontario apples," said he, "the present winter must not be regarded in the light of a new record for prices. The market for first quality apples naturally fluctuates, but for many years it has been high."

"Do you think prices will ever get as high another winter?"

PRICES WILL CONTINUE HIGH.

"Decidedly. There is a gradual awakening among the farmers of this province to the possibilities of orchard culture, but I believe prices will climb still higher. The demand for good apples is increasing so rapidly that if more are not produced here they will become a luxury indeed. The west will take our best apples in as great quantities as we can produce them and they are willing to pay extremely high prices in order to get them out there. For years Ontario farmers will have a demand far in excess of their supply. Prices may be expected to rise rather than fall."

APPLES PROFITABLE IN ALL COUNTRIES.

These are hopeful words for the farmers of this province—at least for those who are thrifty and have ambition. Coming from probably the best authority on such matters in Ontario, Professor Hutt's statements are not to be treated as hearsay. They may be taken as a fair criterion on which to plan one's orchard operations during the next few years. The opportunity for large profits is not presented to the farmers of bordering lake counties alone; Prof. Hutt declares that apples will grow well in all the midland counties of eastern and western Ontario. There is an advantage, no doubt, he said, from the protection against frosts that proximity to a body of water affords, but soil and climatic conditions are such that apples can grow and yield a profit in almost every part of the province.

"In a number of counties apple-growing is progressing as a result of the efforts of one enthusiast," the professor went on. "Norfolk, for instance, is now producing four times what she did five years ago from the same old trees; just because James E. Johnson began pruning and spraying and thinning his trees and his friends became so astonished that they were moved to doing something themselves. There are men doing the same thing with the same success in other counties.

WHY NOT ADVERTISE OUR SPYS?

"Individual effort united in the form of cooperation is all that is required to make Ontario a great apple-producing province. Large, shapely Northern Spys are greatest in demand. In growing Spys Ontario farmers should aim for a high standard of quality and, this established, boost their apples for all they are worth. I believe there is more food and just as great health-giving properties in Spys as there are in oranges, but the producers never bring out these points in trying to dispose of them. If the apple-growers of this province heralded the excellences of our Northern Spys over the continent as Californians have their oranges no one would wonder that apples are as dear as oranges in Toronto. And the majority of people would join me in exclaiming, 'Why not?'"

Cheesemaking In Western Counties

The dairying industry in western Ontario has made big strides along many lines during the past year. The report of Mr. Frank Herns, Chief Dairy Instructor and Sanitary Inspector for the western counties, presented at the Ingersoll convention, showed the west to be keeping pace with the east in improvement of methods and other progressive measures, if not in size of production.

"The weather conditions for part of the season of 1911 will be remembered as very warm and dry," said Mr Herns. "A portion of May cheese was considerably heated. July and part of August brought a few rough-textured and acidy cheese. As usual, some of the cheese at this time were too highly salted, but aside from these the quality was up to and in many respects better than that of the previous year. The fall cheese, other than a few lots of November and December, were of exceptionally good quality. The cheese was generally sold on a rising market, and, considering the conditions under which many of the makers had to work for a couple of months, the quality was very good. There is still some complaint with respect to the finish of the cheese, especially some of the 'twins.' On the whole, from our standpoint, we received less complaint regarding quality than last year.

QUANTITY OF CHEESE.

We made in western Ontario in 1911 93,617,847 pounds of cheese, which is equal to 490,223 boxes of 80 pounds each. This is 2,148,153 pounds, or 26,851 boxes, less than in 1909. The returns for 1911 are not yet received, but the instructors report only 25 factories making more cheese.

"Milk and cream were furnished by 22,371 patrons to the creameries, which is 4,328 more than in 1910, and partly accounts for the increase in the quantity of butter made. The quality of cream is slowly improving. If some practical system of grading cream could be worked out to meet the conditions under which creamery men have to work no doubt it would tend to more rapidly improve the quality. The average per cent. of fat in the cream for the season was 27, an increase of one per cent. over the average of 1910." He advocated beginners to raise largely grain at first and not go into live stock. Speaking on the "back of the land" cry, he said that what was needed was larger farms, so the boys could be profitably employed thereon and not be driven to the city to find work.

CHANGE IN WOMAN'S LIFE

Made Safe by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—MRS. CHAS. BARCLAY, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing woman's ills such as inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

"THE SECRET OF PAUL FARLEY"

By JOHN MARCH

He disappeared, pulled the door ajarly to, then suddenly thrust his head back in the room, a twinkle in his grey eyes.

"If I should happen to come across Hunter in my perambulations, am I to beam like an anticipatory brother-in-law?" he asked, "or am I to assume a stern, stolid cast of countenance, such as I believe is necessary to nip budding hopes in their infancy?"

"Neither," she said, blushing a little; "pretend you don't know anything about it."

"Can't do that," he protested; "the fellow knows I had his letter this morning. I'll say we are thinking it over."

"Felix, one moment. I know you can't stop now, but tell me, do you think it worth while to entertain the idea at all?"

"Well, Agnes," he said, coming back and closing the door, "that is for you to decide. You must follow the dictates of your own heart, my dear. From my point of view Jack Hunter is a splendid fellow, a man of good, sound, solid principles, a clever, skilful surgeon, and one who has made a bit of money at his profession. The last recommendation will be of service to him when he comes into the title at his uncle's death; he will be able to wear his honours with some assumption of dignity and style. I am pretty sure Jack would make an excellent husband, but you must remember, Agnes, thirty years is rather a vast disparity to bridge, and requires some careful pondering. Think it over for a day or so, child, then come and talk it over with me."

The door closed with a substantial echo; he was gone for good this time, and Agnes was left with her housewife's duties and a motley host of thoughts that one short October day had no chance of disentangling. Nor was she any nearer the solution of her own love affairs or Paul's strange predicament when at nightfall, wrapped in a large fur cloak and a knitted tam-o'-shanter pulled over her bronze hair, Felix helped her into the dogcart, and they drove away laughing and chatting to Weyberne Hall.

It was a merry party which sat down to enjoy the hospitality of Sir Thomas's board. The ball, of course, was the chief topic of conversation, although there was some extraneous matter worthy of discussion. For instance, the approaching wedding in the Hargrave family; and Miss Patricia Primrose had become engaged to Hubert Graham after twenty years of devotion and romantic wooing. As an inevitable result of this miraculous event the barrister was in a festive mood, in the seventh heaven of delight, and unable in his great bliss to let his eyes rove far from his lady-love's dark piquant face as she sat smiling and daintily sipping a glass of chartreuse.

Anthony Pelham was present. It was his first dinner out since his illness, and he sat leaning back in his chair, a look of calm repose and ineffable happiness on his pale boyish face. Judith was next him, kept busy answering questions anent The Larches. He was not strong and his voice was low, hardly above a whisper, and Judith had perforce to bend continuously in his direction to catch the multiplicity of feeble queries he plied her with. Felix apparently was cheerful enough, and in his kindly disposed way was endeavouring to take a righteous interest in a game called "Strokelet," which Miss Hay, the vicar's daughter, was describing, assuring him it bid in the future to rival ping-pong. Everyone was happy and in buoyant spirits save Paul, and he sat beside Agnes frowning and silent, impatiently waiting an opportunity to whisper a desire that she would somehow contrive to give him five minutes alone later on.

The scalloped oysters, the soup, and the fish had already come and gone, and no convenient season had yet arrived. One reason was because Felix sat opposite to him, and whenever Miss Hay did not engage his attention he watched his pretty sister and her gloomy partner. The roast beef, broiled fowls, and well-seasoned salad were in time removed, and were followed by the sweet and delicately flavoured ices, and Paul was getting restive. The lapse of another ten minutes found him toying with a morsel of gruyers and a dry biscuit, when a lull came in the general buzz of conversation, and Mr. Graham, dragging his reluctant eyes from Miss Patricia's charms, loked across the table and pointedly addressed him:

"I've been so taken up with my own good fortune," he said, his countenance aglow with pride and triumph, "that I've not found time to offer you my felicitations. Only last evening I was saying to my—to Miss Primrose that I wondered what these country gentlemen were about to allow such a brilliantly beautiful creature as our recent hostess to remain widowed."

"Are you speaking to me?" Paul asked, staring at him through his glittering eyeglasses.

"Yes," he said, smiling. "I offered you my congratulations on the marriage arranged between you and Mrs. Wycherly."

"Who has arranged a marriage between us?" he asked, attempting a smile and succeeding most unpleasantly.

"Who? Why, you yourself I should imagine. I venture to think no one else would interfere in the matter."

"How did such an interesting piece of intelligence come to your knowledge?" he asked, biting his lip, and twisting his long fingers round his wine-glass.

"I read it in the paper, in the Times, this morning. You are Paul Farley, of New York, eh?"

The stem of the wine-glass snapped in two. He caught the upper half, emptied the wine into a tumbler, and removed the broken pieces from the cloth to his plate. The lull around the table had drifted into silence, a deadly silence. All eyes were turned expectantly on his white face; he opened his lips to speak, thought better of it, and held his peace.

"I beg your pardon if I have been too premature," Graham said, feeling he had somehow got his foot into an uncomfortable ruck, "but seeing it advertised, I thought the engagement was signed, sealed, all settled up, duly stamped, and the state of affairs public property. Have you not seen the paper?"

"Not to-day. This is the first I've heard of it, and I think there must be some mistake. I don't believe I have the distinction of being the only Paul Farley in the States."

"The Times, James," Graham said shortly, without further argument.

When the paper came he found the place, folded it neatly, and passed it across the table to Paul. He read the paragraph several times over, and finally dropped it on the floor beside him.

"If that statement is not correct, some kind, jovial friend given to practical joking has been playing tricks with you, Mr. Farley."

"I was not engaged when that notice was sent to the paper, I—"

"Well, you've not been much forestalled, the lady or her friends probably were anxious to clinch matters; that's merel ya detail, you—"

"Hang it all, Farley!" Sir Thomas exclaimed testily, "are you or are you not engaged to Mrs. Wycherly?"

Bereft of momentary speech, he sat staring down at the remains of cheese and biscuit and broken glass on his plate. Eventually he looked at Sir Thomas in a dull sort of way, and moistened his lips. Then, suddenly, pushing his chair back, he rose and stood a minute holding on to the back.

"Let's have it before you make a bolt of it, if that's your dodge," Sir Thomas exclaimed, laughing boisterously. "God bless my soul! You sly dog! How and when did you manage the courting? You've some presence of mind to aspire to the best catch in the county. Come, we all want to offer our good wishes. Are you really going to marry our charming neighbour?"

"Yes—no—I don't know—at least, I suppose so," he said, in a limp, nerveless way. "I mean I really—"

Whatever he was about to repudiate or acknowledge was never uttered. for Judith, who had been gazing at him with white face and frightened eyes, gave a little cry, swayed forward, then sideways, swooned, and fell with an ugly thud to the floor.

"Keep your seat, Pelham," Felix insisted, springing up and pressing Anthony back into his seat. "I'll see to Judith."

He carried her out, and placed her in a chair in the hall, where the door was ajar and the night wind blew straight in from among the bending, creaking trees. Lady Hargrave, her silken skirts raised and hung over one arm, followed, and Paul, who held the door open for her to pass out, went also.

"Smelling salts?" Felix asked laconically.

She looked about her, distressed for the moment she had no idea where to search. Paul remembered seeing Miss Primrose sniff at a violet cut-glass bottle during dinnner, and he turne dquietly back to the room and asked her for it. Without a word he slipped it into the Squire's hand, walked to the hall door, pulled it wide back, and looked out at the night. A few minutes of intense quietude ensued before Judith stirred, made an inarticulate sound in her throat, then spoke clearly, in a weak, querulous tone.

"What is it?" she asked, an impulse of curiosity flickering among her heavy thoughts.

"Why, the heat of the room, my dear, turned you a little faint," Lady Hargrave said soothingly. "I am afraid we have alarmed poor Anthony."

"Anthony? No, not Anthony; it was Paul, yes, Paul said he was going to marry Mrs. Wycherly. He told me last night—we were dancing, when he said he wouldn't marry Mrs. Wycherly or Agnes, or anybody, and now—"

"Hush," Lady Hargrave implored, looking round in consternation. "My dear, the servants, Mr. Far—"

"Hush, indeed! she exclaimed; her eyes ablaze with feverish excitement, her cheeks like a peony. "For my part I think it's time I spoke. I've consented to marry Anthony against my better judgment, against my inclination, to please Paul Farley; you understand, both of you, to please him, and him alone. I thought I could do anything he asked me, and so I could accept—"

A strong, energetic hand came through Paul's arm, gripped it firmly and marched him over the gravel, and away from the house.

"We will take a turn up to the private road and back, and go to the drawing-room by way of the conservatory and library, if it's all the same to you, Farley?" Felix said with quiet gravity. "It's poor sport listening to the unwholesome raving of an hysterical woman, more especially when you've nursed her on your knee and petted her as a sweet, innocent little child."

"I cannot help thinking that Miss Judith is very perverse," he made answer.

"Women are perverse. I sometimes think it's this aggravating perverseness, this capriciousness in a measure that attracts our sex. I believe a man is more influenced, more attracted by moods than beauty. However, we won't discuss Judith, we won't by word or thought add one grain, one iota, to Lady Hargrave's trouble. Apropos of nothing but my own thoughts, what do you think of Cecilia Hay?"

"What do I think of her?" he asked slowly. "I think she is a good, dull, plodding, praiseworthy girl. I don't feel to have much in common with her; still that is my loss, not hers. What are you thinking yourself, sir?"

"Well, I'm thinking that I never saw her to greater advantage than to-night, Farley, perhaps in contradistinction to Judith, but she seems to look at life in a serious, capable way. The Hays are poor, as I daresay you know, and Cecilia, I gather, thinks she ought to embark on some sort of career, secure a future, provision herself against the time when the paternal homestead is a thing of the past."

"What kind of a career does she anticipate What does she consider herself fitted for?"

"Ah, well, there, that's the difficulty. She can fulfill her home duties to perfection, but homeless, penniless, turned adrift on her own resources, she feels that there is not any one craft by which she could earn a decent livelihood."

"She wants a matrimonial career, then, I take it."

The Squire laughed a little, and slipped his hand through Paul's arm.

"That is the career, the sphere, she is by nature, education and training most fitted for, no doubt. I can fancy her developing into an excellent wife and mother. She is sincere, religious, a child of God, I am sure; she is not beautiful, but she comes of a healthy, wholesome stock, which is essential, more desirable in marriage, than actual beauty—the sort of a woman a husband's heart might safely trust in, and he would have the comfort and joy of a well-ordered home."

"You—you like Miss Hay?"

"Well, I respect her, she is an estimable woman, the worker, the organizer, the mainspring of the Vicarage. If esteem and kindly regard could be sunned and watered sufficiently to ripen into something approaching affection, don't you think she would make me a good, sound, practical wife, Farley?"

"That is entirely a matter of taste, sir," he said, going suddenly white; "as far as I am concerned I should have a decided objection to that solid lump of flesh stamped with Cecilia Hay's individualism and identity. I have seen her type before to-day, sir. She is a dull, methodical worker, a narrow minded zealot, always in the slow suit, always doing, never done. That career, that future, is her stock-in-trade, her sprat to catch a whale; she will ventilate it so long as she can get an eligible man to listen, so long as her youth lasts, and unless she can persuade a kindly disposed squire or gentleman at large to offer her his home—that is to say, a strong substantial chair and a table, repreening good square meals, she -p....s eMw' llyshegirlt...t F E E will end by going out into the world as an upper servant or a lady help."

"That is the unkindest and bitterest thing that I have ever heard you say, Farley."

"I feel bitter," he said, laughing unnecessarily loud. "I have had enough to make me feel so these last few days. What fellow likes to think of his friend, his dear chum, contemplating matrimony? Think of the fishing, the shooting, the driving, the hours, the happy hours in the keeping room, it can never be the same again."

"I am not contemplating marriage, at least not yet, though some other folks are, I trow. Paul, I felt so hurt this morning when I read—well, I did not mean to allude to that, and I won't. As I said before, you have made life a different thing for me, that it seems strange that you should fight shy of me, keep the least trifling annoyance from me. My time, my strength, my purse, are at your—"

"Thanks, thanks," Paul said, squeezing the hand on his arm, "you are too good, you are too kind, but give me time to think before I speak, and I will—Felix," he said stopping suddenly and looking at him with a sort of despair in his great eyes, "Felix, are you—are you really thinking of Cecilia Hay?"

"Only in this way, dear boy—I am thirty five, and it's time I meditated settling if I ever intend to marry. I generally like and enjoy the society of the women I meet, but in each individual case there is something amiss with her; something lacking in her mental or physical development; she is a little too this or not enough that; her nature is too fertile, or too arid; too something; she—you know the deterrent process, Farley—I—I can't catch on. Cecilia Hay seems suitable. She's not brilliant but I think that she would make me a comfortable, agreeable wife, and I would not hang back if it were not for the fear of afterwards meeting a woman I could really love. I have strong affections, strong domestic tendencies, and if later on—though married to a nice, good girl-like Cecilia—she came, I am afraid, terribly afraid I should—revolt. Will you pass in first?"

In the conservatory they found Agnes fanning herself under a palm. She smiled and patted the vacant seat beside her, and Paul dropped obediently into it with a sigh of relief.

"I shan't stop for a cigar with Sir Thomas," Felix said, looking from one to the other. "I'll have the mare put in. I suppose I shall find you here, Agnes(if I come back in ten minutes?"

Tells of the Wonderful Benefits Obtained From

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Like many another Newfoundlander living far from doctors, Mr. Stone feels unbounded gratitude for the benefits obtained from the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

For years he had suffered from a congested condition of the liver and kidneys, with headaches, backaches, pains in limbs and body. Words fail to describe his sufferings as well as the gratitude he wants to express for the cure.

Mr. Alex. J. Stone, West Point, Nfld., writes: "I suppose you thought I had forgotten all about you when I got Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, but I haven't. You must excuse mistakes, for like many Newfoundland men, I have not much education, but I want to thank you many times for your medicine.

"I cannot tell you what I suffered from liver and kidney derangements, indigestion and constipation, nor can I find words to express how much good this medicine has done me. I feel better than I have for ve years and have given some of these pills to friends, who tell me they have done them a wonderful lot of good. I want to express my heartfelt gratitude for the benefit derived from the great medicine."

Why Dalton's French Drip Coffee is so Wholesome, Delicious and Economical

When you have once tasted Dalton's delicious French Drip Coffee, made in a Dalton's French Drip Coffee Pot, you will never be tempted to drink ordinary boiled Coffee again.

The Coffee berry, or bean, is protected by nature from the insect world by a tough outer shell or husk which contains tannin and other acid, bitter principles which are poisonous to insects and certainly not wholesome to the human system.

Other roasters of Coffee do not remove this bitter husk, and this is why many people find that ordinary Coffee does not agree with them. Not only that, but the usual way of roasting Coffee in cylinders over coke or gas fires, drives off the volatile essences, so essential to aroma and flavor.

Dalton's French Drip Coffee

The DALTON way is to throw the Coffee berries against an intensely hot flame. This roasts them in half the time and prevents the volatile essences being driven off. Then the Coffee is cooled by a special process, during which a strong suction air-blast blows off all foreign substances. Next comes the grinding, during which another powerful air-blast removes the poisonous, bitter outer shell. The Coffee contains absolutely no chicory and is packed in sealed tins, which preserve all the delightful flavor.

We make Dalton's French Drip Coffee in two strengths Mild Blend and Strong Blend. You cannot tell however which you will like the best until you try both and that is why we ask you to buy two tins in our special offer.

SAVED FROM THE SURGEON'S KNIFE

"Fruit-a-tives" cured Appendicitis

NEWBURGH, Ont., Feb. 12th, 1910.

"Just about a year ago, our daughter Ella (fourteen years) was taken with terrible pains in the right side. We at once put her under the care of a first-class doctor, who pronounced it a case of Appendicitis and advised an operation. We took her to a Hospital in Kingston where she was again immediately examined by an eminent specialist. He said she had Appendicitis and must be operated on at once, if we wanted to save her life.

"Luckily for us and for her, an uncle came in with some 'Fruit-a-tives' and insisted on Ella tking them. Good results were apparent almost from the first dose, and the treatment cured her.

'Fruit-a-tives' saved our daughter from the surgeon's knife and to-day she is enjoying the best of health".

THE FAMILY HEARTH

Finish every day and be done with it. For manners and for wise living it is a vice to remember. You have done what you could; some blunders and absurdities no doubt crept in; forget them as soon as you can. To-morrow is a new day; you shall begin it well and serenely and with too high a spirit to be cumbered with your old nonsense. This day for all that is good and fair. It is too dear with all its hopes and invitations to waste a moment on the rotten yesterdays.

* * *

Any business man would be horrified at the suggestion that he would ruin his boy by neglect that his absorption in business would result in the undoing of his own son. But it is the easiest thing in the world to forfeit a boy's confidence. It will take only a little snubbing, a little scolding, a little unkind criticism, a little nagging and unreasonableness to shut off for ever any intimacy between you and your boy.

* * *

Do we ever stop to think, we wonder, how blest are the quiet days—the days when nothing happens? There is no illness to give anxiety, no business burdens or other troubles to disturb, but, on the contrary, there is the delightful consciousness that all is well in the home and before us the promise of a peaceful day. We know of no condition of life that brings more pleasure than this or that should fill the heart more full of gratitude.

* * *

In the rush and hurry of modern life do we think as much as we might of the happiness of those who are growing old. They have lost so much! Their youth, often their health, most of the friends and companions who started with them on life's journey, and yet we often grudge them the brightness and joy we might so easily put into their lives. We will not stay to hear the recollections of old and happy days which they love to tell us we let them see so plainly that their day is over, and ours has come! That those who have borne the burden and heat of the day, toiled and struggled and worn themselves out for others, should be left to feel lonely and neglected is sorrowful. We can and ought, each and all, in our own place and way, do something to bring the glow of summer and the remembrance of the days of roses and love into the lives fast nearing their winter and their end.

* * *

It is one of the ironies of fate that the poet from whose pen has come the immortal lyric of the hearthstone was himself a roving outcast—a homeless wanderer. The world remembers the pathetic story of John Howard Payne. Broken in health, and reduced in fortune, the poor American exile found himself in the throbbing heart of the great city of London. Between his publishers—who allowed him little—and his creditors—who came to see him often—the penniless poet was in sore traits. The Atlantic Ocean separated him from kith and kin. He felt the acutest sense of isolation—the bitterest pangs of loneliness. Perhaps no solitude is more oppressive than the solitude of great cities—the solitude which broods in the repellant looks of the unsympathetic multitudes. It is, as Lucian Knight has said, the heart's Sahara. Beref of all other consolation, Payne seized the harp and lightly touched the strings. But not in vain. For the fire of inspiration was in the poet's soul; and on the banks of the River Thames, from the aching heart of an humble exile, leaped the hearthstone melody of "Home, Sweet Home."

* * *

This world is full of beauty. We alone, with the enginery of our greed, make it ugly. But we cannot altogether succeed in hiding all its beauty, and the open eye and appreciative heart still, without going far afield, may catch glimpses and often behold the full glory of field and flower and starry heaven. How deeply must we pity the life to which the beauty of the world brings no enriching, he who does not take a deep breath and feel a thrill of pleasure at sight of mountain, prairie, or sea. And all the prodigal beauty of this world is but a message to us of the greater love of the life that upholds it all, of the riches of him that inhabiteth eternity. And fairer yet than field or flower, treasures greater and more enduring than ours for the taking, the appreciating, in friendships, human love, and companionships. The peace that broods from a mother's face, the strength of a father's life, the light in our children's eyes, the joys of home and hearthside—are not these the best riches of life?

* * *

Do not complain of your wife's extravagance with a cigar in your mouth.

* * *

Good manners are not taught in the school books. They are found in the home lessons.

* * *

The daughter who is the flower of the family is always the one who knows how to best use the flour of the family.

* * *

Whatever happens don't become a sour old man or woman. Old age should be a cheerful period of life, when the lengthened shadows are softened by the setting sun — when quiet twilight steals on apace, soon to be followed by the long night of rest which remains to all living.

* * *

We have a few young men who seem to think it makes them manly and noble to make themselves appear tough. If you are tough, people will find it out without any effort on your part. It is just as easy to be a gentleman and hold the respect of the community in which you live. Try it during 1912 and you will never change back.

* * *

How many wasted flowers are strewn over graves. Just one bud from these flowers, pink with life and hope and fragrant with sympathy, would have eased the pain of some aching heart, had it been given while the loved one was with us. Just try it during 1912 and see to how many sick neighbours and friends you can carry a flower and the year will prove one of your happiest and best.

* * *

We have just a few women in our community who talk much about heaven at church, and much about their neighbours on the streets. Just give your neighbour a rest during 1912, and see if you do not enjoy the year better.

* * *

Every woman who reads our Home Circle and has a home, should thank God for it and also be thankful that she may be queen in it. Better be in your own cozy home than wear a Victoria's coronet. Better be there than to carry the purse of a princess. Your home may be humble but you can, by your cheerfulness, gild it with splendours such as an upholsterer's hand never yet kindled.

* * *

Our young men who wish to succeed in business must not spend their time and money in simply having a good time. They must not be discontented with our little city and think they are too big for it. The right way to get into a larger place is to outgrow the one you are in. Grow until it becomes too small to hold you any longer. Some of the young men who now think they have outgrown this place would fit better in a much smaller one.

* * *

There are a few homes, even in our beautiful little city, in which is heard only fault-finding instead of loving commendations; bickerings and strife instead of sweet, happy companionship. Remember like produces like in the life as elsewhere. May this be borne in mind by every reader of this department during the New Year and the result will be purer, brighter homes.

* * *

You may set it down as a fact that there isn't a twelve-year-old boy in the neighbourhood who hasn't his opinion of you—and he wouldn't be slow about expressing it either, if a stranger should ask him for it. Every man is always making character whether he is doing anything else or not. Why not build character during 1912 that you may ever look back upon it with pride?

* * *

When a woman puts what days she is at home to callers in one corner of her card, it is a sign that her husband is making money, and that you are no longer at liberty to wrap a white apron and your sewing up in a paper, go over early in the afternoon, leaving word for your husband to come at six and stay to tea with her. It may be she likes you as well as ever, but "society" demands too much of her time to let her give an entire afternoon to you. Let us return to the good old days as we found them before society stole from them all their brightness and pleasure.

* * *

It is worse than useless to attempt to repress a girl's natural impulses. The society and companionship of the opposite sex is a perfectly natural desire. Shut her up and she elopes with a coachman—cross her in love and she may fill a suicide's grave. Many of our young women are consumed with ambitious desires—they feel the divine spark which might be fanned into a splendid flame, but parental authority decrees they shall "fold their hands and wait," while the spark becomes dim and goes out, taking hope, perhaps life, with it.

CAUGHT A BAD COLD.

DEVELOPED BRONCHITIS. SHE COULD HARDLY SPEAK.

Bronchitis begins with a tightness across the chest, difficulty of breathing, hoarseness, and there is a dry, harsh, croupy cough.

After a few days mucous begins to be raised. This is at first white, but later of a greenish or yellow color and is occasionally streaked with blood.

Cure the first symptoms of bronchitis by the use of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and thus prevent it becoming chronic and perhaps turning to consumption.

Mrs. Edward Travers, Campbellton, N.B., writes:—"I thought it my duty to write and let you know what your wonderful medicine has done for me. I caught a very bad cold which developed into bronchitis. I was so choked up I could hardly breathe. I tried many medicines but they did me no good, and I had almost given up in despair. A friend advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so I got a bottle and felt much better, and by the time I had taken four I was completely cured, and I can assure you I cannot say too much in its praise, as it is all you claim for it, and more."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

GOOD RECIPES

The following cake, though easy to make, would be festive enough for almost any occasion: Cream three quarters of a cupful of butter with one cupful and a half of brown sugar. Add two eggs and a cupful of creams sour milk or sour cream in which half a teaspoonful of soda has been dissolved. Sift three cupfuls of flour with a teaspoonful of baking powder, two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, half a spoonful of cloves, and half a teaspoonful of grated nutmeg. Stir the other mixture into these dry ingredients, and when a smooth batter has been formed stir in a paste previously prepared by melting a square of chocolate and then mixing it with a quarter of a cupful of light brown sugar and a quarter of a cupful of hot water. Cook this mixture till it is smooth before adding it to th ebatter. Unless the milk is rich the cake is apt to be dry, and it may be wise to add extra butter. Before putting this batter into the pans, stir in a cupful of the chopped fruit and nuts—almonds, raisins, citron, etc., according to the richness desired. This cake is better in layer form than as a loaf, though either may be used.

With the brisk days of winter come the relish for suet puddings and fruit cake. The following, which calls for no eggs, has long been a favourite in one family: Have ready a cupful of chopped suet, a cupful of raisins, a cupful of sweet milk, a cupful of molasses, a teaspoonful of soda, salt, ginger, and any spices desired and enough flour to make a stiff batter. Mix the molasses and suet. Then stir the mixture into part of the flour—about a cupful and a half—that has been sifted with the spices. Add the milk gradually after dissolving the soda in it. Add also a little more sifted flour to make it stiffer, together with the raisins. When the batter is smooth and of proper consistency put it into a buttered and sugared pudding mould. Cover it tightly and let it steam for three hours.

A rule for one-egg muffins calls for one cupful of milk, one egg, one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder, a teaspoonful of butter, and flour to make a batter that is not very stiff. Bake in muffin tins or cups, as usual. If water is used instead of milk use two eggs.

To give quiet to dwellers in noisy streets an English builder has simply used windows with double glazing. In sick rooms, lecture rooms and offices the sound of street cars and the rumble of wagons were greatly diminished and the sound of voices was made imperceptible.

The Quest of Gentle Hazard

Being the Adventures in Love and Chivalry of Lord Richard Jocelyn.

By H. M. Egbert

A Seaside Comedy

(Copyright, 1911, by W. G. Chapman.)

"The way to find adventure," Lord Richard Jocelyn was wont to say, "is to go forth blindly, a sort of perpetual knight errant, in quest of anything that may happen. He who sets out with any purpose ready-made in his mind, is doomed to perpetual disappointment."

"And I haven't found an adventure for nearly three weeks," he added, as he finished his last game of solitaire. He rose, the light of a new resolution in his eyes, and rang for his valet.

"Talbot," he said, as that servitor appeared, "I'm going away."

"Yes, sir," replied Talbot respectively, waiting for his master to reveal the place of his destination.

"Where shall I go, Talbot?" continued Jocelyn. "New York's too hot for me."

"I 'ave 'eard say, sir, that Craig's Peak's the place this season. There's a very nice hotel there, sir, called the 'Randolph,' which was told me by a young woman who—"

"Spare me these amatory confidences, Talbot, I beg you," replied his master. "I shall go to Craig's Peak and spend a week by the seashore. Put up my things this afternoon."

It was still early summer and Lord Jocelyn found the hotel only half full.

There seemed little probability that the quiet, unassuming "Mr. Jocelyn" of the visitors' book at the "Randolph" would discover anything extraordinary in that sedate and fashionable watering resort. After the third day Mr. Jocelyn had begun to weary of the varied and not too fascinating sports of picking up sea-shells, gathering plant specimens from the mountain slopes, and discovering new and rare entrees upon the menu. Perhaps that is why he fell a victim to the designs of Mrs. and Miss Muriel Van Loo, of Boston.

"My dear," said the elder lady, "that tall, distinguished Englishman is a personage in his own country, or looks don't count for anything."

"He may be an impostor, Mamma," said her daughter cynically. "Remember that one that made up to us last summer at Atlantic City?"

"Muriel," replied her mother, "don't be suspicious. It is not a fascinating quality in a young girl. Leave that to me. Your metier is innocence, with just a dash of dare-devilishness, but not too strong. Why didn't you pack 'Burke's Peerage'?"

"I did, Mamma," answered her daughter dutifully. "But I left out the 'Landed Gentry of Great Britain' because there wasn't room in my trunk."

"Bring down Burke, then," commanded Mrs. Van Loo, and she put on her tortoise-shell rimmed eyeglasses preparatory to the hunt. Muriel soon reappeared bearing the volume.

"Jocelyn, Jocelyn," Mrs. Van Loo murmured, turning over the pages. "Here we are, Muriel, darling. Jocelyn, fourth viscount, of Doublewith Manor, Stockton. Heir — Richard. And no brothers or sisters. He will undoubtedly inherit the property."

"The heir always inherits the property," answered Muriel.

"Without a doubt, dear, that is Lord Jocelyn in disguise," said Mrs. Van Loo. "Tonight I shall speak to him."

She found her opportunity, and thus began the acquaintance, which, at first a bore to Jocelyn, developed into a romance. It was the week of the full moon, and moonlight walks were a specialty of Muriel Van Loo's. Before the week was ended the three had become fast friends. On the seventh day Jocelyn re-engaged his room for the following week.

In spite of many experiences, Lord Jocelyn felt himself fast succumbing to the charm of Muriel Van Loo. To begin with, her hair was bronze, and Jocelyn adored bronze hair—when it was in his proximity. Then she had the clearest blue eyes, with just a suspicion of raillery in them—and blue eyes were Jocelyn's speciality, in default of brown, hazel or gray. And Muriel's unworldliness and innocent ways produced a profound impression on the young man's heart. Needless to say, the many rivals of Lord Jocelyn, who had delighted to bask in Muriel's smiles before his advent, hated him cordially. But their glances of scorn passed by him like the cool breezes that blew all day over the summit of the peak. If he had known of the feelings that he inspired he would have been genuinely concerned, for Jocelyn was singularly warm-hearted.

It soon became evident that Muriel concealed beneath the corsage of her Fifth avenue gown a heart that thrilled to the promptings of romanticism. This is how Jocelyn made the discovery:

"What do you like best about America, Mr. Jocelyn?" asked her mother one evening.

"Its democracy," Lord Jocelyn answered promptly. "The feeling that one man is as good as another is delightfully strange to one used to the class subserviency of my own country. It positively thrills me when I go into my tailor's, for example, to feel that I am being fitted by a man who holds to be as good as I am and demands the same respect. And when I dine out, to know that the butler who takes my hat is really my social equal is most novel and fascinating, you know."

"Ah, yes," said Mrs. Van Loo, without enthusiasm. "But among our best people a different feeling is growing up."

"Don't say that, Mamma," cried Muriel earnestly. "Don't you recollect that delicious French count last season who turned out to be a butler in disguise?"

"I remember the impudent fellow well," returned her mother. "He actually dared to stay at our hotel, and I must say his manners left nothing to be desired. But a butler—"

"Perhaps Mr. Jocelyn, too, is masquerading," said Muriel archly.

Lord Jocelyn placed his hand upon his heart and bowed.

"I pledge my honor," he said, "that I am not a butler. Indeed, it would require attainments far greater than my own."

"O, Muriel!" said her mother reproachfully. "My daughter means," she added, "that you may be somebody greater than you acknowledge—a member of the peerage, for example."

She gave Lord Jocelyn so penetrating a glance that for a moment he felt convinced his secret was discovered. But Muriel, intent upon her phase of the subject, turned the conversation most opportunely for him.

"Well," she said, "if a butler with the perfect manners of that Frenchman were to save me from imminent death—by drowning, for instance—I would as willingly give him my hand as if he were a Duke."

"Muriel! My dear!" said her mother, horrified.

But her sentiments were, in general, those of profound satisfaction, for there was no doubt Lord Jocelyn was fairly captivated. That night he dreamed of Muriel, and also on the next. These dreams were but the pale reflection of his thoughts by day. And what with long, happy rambles and moonlight walks, the subjugation of the young man became complete.

"Muriel," said her mother, as the second week drew toward a close, "Lord Jocelyn" (for so she had come to speak of him) "has asked permission to call on us next month in Boston. Do you know, Muriel, that you can win that young Englishman if you want to? And the rent roll is thirty thousand pounds a year—just fancy!"

"If I marry, Mamma, it will be for love," said Muriel.

"If, indeed, he is a Lord," continued her mother, ignoring the answer. "I wish we could find out for sure. I'm pretty well satisfied he is, for he knows all sorts of people in England, though why he should be masquerading here is more than I can tell. I shall ask him point blank when he proposes for you."

"For me?" cried her daughter indignantly.

"Among the better class of Englishmen it is the invariable custom to ask the mother for the daughter's hand," said Mrs. Van Loo.

But Muriel's thoughts ran along quite different lines. There was no doubt that she was sincerely in love with Jocelyn. Whether he were a lord or not, she had pretty well made up her mind to accept him. But his proposal should come to her direct and not through any intermediary. She puzzled over the problem of accomplishing this all night until she fell asleep, and she awoke in the morning with the germ of the idea fully matured.

Next to the promenade along the shores of Craig's Peak the pier is, perhaps, best known to visitors at that summer resort. How many engagements have been brought about at the far end of that imposing structure, to the tune of the waves and the light of the moon, it is impossible to say—space would not permit it. Certainly they have been numerous—and Muriel knew that no place could be better suited to her plans. The next night was especially favorable, for a high tide was washing the steep and rocky shores of the mountain, so that the pier was the only place for a promenade. Thither, about eight in the evening, the three repaired; Lord Jocelyn and Muriel arm in arm, Mrs. Van Loo waddling comfortably behind, at an interval of about 200 feet. As the couple approached the end of the pier Lord Jocelyn dared to take Muriel's hand in his and press it gently. A slight but unmistakable return of the pressure from her slim fingers convinced him that his passion was not wholly unrequired, and a delirium of happiness possessed him. Had Muriel left her well-considered scheme unfulfilled, it is probable that this would be the last chronicle of Lord Jocelyn's adventures, for he was already revolving in his mind the form of his matrimonial proposition. But, though the girl was aware of his agitation, she did not sense the actual struggle that was going on in Lord Jocelyn's mind. They advanced to the very end of the pier and sat down upon a seat, looking into the seething waves below them. Meanwhile Mrs. Van Loo, ambling in the rear, smiled knowingly to herself as she perceived the propinquity of the pair.

Muriel was an excellent swimmer and had gauged the situation to a nicety. She know that there were no rocks beneath her; that there was no current, in spite of the apparent roughness of the water. And, immersed in that warm tide, it would be easy enough to cling to the pier framework until she was rescued. So, even as Lord Jocelyn had begun to stammer the first inane words of his proposal, she arose, slipped, and fell backward and downward with a shrill scream into the sea.

Her scream was re-echoed by her mother, who, wholly ignorant of Muriel's scheme, came running up, yelling at the top of her voice and waving her arms frantically. For the fraction of an instant Jocelyn hesitated; then, flinging off his coat, he leaped into the water. He felt it close over his head and went down until his feet touched, for a bare moment, the sandy bottom; then he was upon the surface again and making his way, with sure, swift strokes, toward where a slight figure clung to the frame of the pier. As he progressed he shouted encouragement to her. A few strokes more and he had reached her; he clasped the girl in his arms, and felt her own close round his neck. Then Muriel fainted and he felt her loosened hair descend in a cloud over him, and, raising it, he kissed her on the lips.

Next moment he was striking out toward the shore, bearing her in his arms, where she lay with a complete confidence. Soon, feeling the bottom under him, Lord Jocelyn waded to the beach, carrying his precious burden. He placed her on the sand and, bending over her in intense anxiety, was rejoiced to see her eyes unclose.

In the meantime Mrs. Van Loo's shrieks had aroused the summer boarders, who came running along the shore and arrived in time to find the girl disengaging herself from Lord Jocelyn's too-ready arms. Mrs. Van Loo flung her own stout arms around Jocelyn's neck.

"You've saved her! You've saved my girl!" she gasped. "O Lord Jocelyn, how can I ever thank you enough?"

And, even in his confusion, Jocelyn perceived that his secret was discovered.

He did not see Muriel again that night, but went to bed, conflicting emotions struggling within him. Something in Muriel's actions perplexed him. Had she fallen on purpose? He recollected some words of hers that in this new light savored of a mysterious meaning. She had alluded to the possibility of being saved from drowning. And then—that fall had been almost a deliberate step backward. And she had been so composed in the water—had, indeed, clung to the pier framework before he reached her. Miserable doubts tormented him, and these were in no wise lessened by the fact that Mrs. Van Loo had evidently known for long of his disguise.

But in the morning a whimsical thought came to distract him. It drove away his cares so that by the time that he had descended to the breakfast room he was smiling.

He had slept late and all the boarders had gone out, with the exception of the mother and Muriel. He found their seats placed, with his own, at a new table, and them about to begin breakfast. As he entered Mrs. Van Loo solemnly arose, and, ambling toward him, imprinted a mother-in-law's kiss upon his brow.

There was no mistaking the nature of that kiss. Lord Jocelyn had been engaged before—several times, in fact; and in each case the mother of his bride-to-be had imprinted on his forehead that identical species of osculation. And then he knew that fate had settled his prospects, unless his scheme should thwart them.

When Muriel, suffused with blushes, and stammering her thanks, placed her hand in his, he almost wavered in his purpose. But deep below the surface susceptibility of Lord Jocelyn's heart then ran a vein of shrewdness, inherited from his father, the fourth viscount. And so, when the meal was concluded, he requested a private interview with Mrs. Van Loo.

"Mr. Jocelyn," she said—forgetful of her lapse of the preceding evening—"I can never thank you enough for saving my darling girl to me. She is all that I have had to live for since my husband died," she continued, weeping softly. "And the thought that I must some day lose her, perhaps to some one who would be unworthy of her, has been the dread of my existence. But now—" she went on, smiling upon her auditor——

"But—but—" stammered Lord Jocelyn.

"Remember the old proverb, Mr. Jocelyn," said Mrs. Van Loo, tapping his wrist archly. "'Faint heart never won fair lady.'"

"O, I am not worthy of her," Lord Jocelyn groaned.

"An honest man is worthy of any girl, Mr. Jocelyn."

Lord Jocelyn stared at her in affected incredulity.

"You almost encourage me to tell you my secret," he murmured. "Mrs. Van Loo, I am not altogether what I have represented myself to be."

"You amaze me, Mr. Jocelyn," said that lady, concealing a desire to shout aloud in triumph. It was coming at last, then, this avowal of his nobility.

"I am not a gentleman," muttered Lord Jocelyn, burying his face in his hands.

"You are one of nature's gentlemen," Mrs. Van Loo rejoined.

"Not even that."

"What are you, then?" asked his auditor, tenderly.

"I am a butler," Jocelyn groaned, and sat bolt upright, facing her.

A wan smile played round Mrs. Loo's mouth. "I-er-I didn't quite catch that, Mr. Jocelyn," she said.

"I'll tell you all, Mrs. Van Loo," replied Jocelyn. "I was brought up as a boy in the household of Lord Jocelyn's brother, in England. When he died without issue I was made first footman to the present lord. I was promoted to be butler. I served him faithfully for four years."

The stony stare upon the lady's face would not have disgraced Medusa.

"Last winter I left him. I had saved a hundred pounds. I wanted to be a gentleman. From observation of Lord Jocelyn's guests I knew that I could play the part. I am a gentleman, even though a butler, Mrs. Van Loo. And shall that stand in the way of Muriel's—"

A stifled sob from Mrs. Van Loo stopped his words.

"O, abominable—abominable—a butler—" she cried, and, rising, fled from the room, wringing her hands in dismay.

Lord Jocelyn Waded to the Beach.

A cold chill crept down Lord Jocelyn's spine. He looked round helplessly. Why had he not told the girl first? After all, what did the mother matter in such a case? That proved nothing. He stepped toward the French window in agitation, opened it, and emerged into the arms of his old friend Jack Stanfield, who, with his bride, had come to spend their long-drawn-out honeymoon at Craig's Peak that morning.

"Jack, I'm in terrible distress," he groaned, when the first greetings were over. "Old man, I helped you once—when Mrs. Stanfield was trying to elope with you. You haven't forgotten it?"

Stanfield felt his heart leap. "No, old man, I haven't," he said, grinning. "Strange chapter of accidents, wasn't it?"

"You bear no malice because I got you into difficulty then, Jack?"

"Not a bit," said Stanfield cordially. "I'll be glad to return the compliment."

"Then for the love of Heaven, help me, Jack," said Jocelyn, and he told him all, while Jack listened with absorbing interest.

"You see, Jack, I've got myself in bad," he said. "Now I want you to see the girl—privately, you understand—and convince her that I really am Lord Jocelyn and that the mother misunderstood me. I was a fool to do what I did—a silly ass who needs kicking. I know the girl would have stood by me anyhow, and now I've gone and bungled everything through my beastly suspicious nature. Jack, you fix things for me and you shall be my best man and get a diamond pin."

"You bet I will," replied Jack heartily. "Now, Dick, you're rattled. Go and take a nice stroll along the beach till luncheon time, and when you come back I'll have things fixed for you."

"I will," said Jocelyn gratefully, starting off with a swinging stride; and, as he watched him depart, Jack Stanfield murmured:

"It's worth it, it's worth it. It's worth even a diamond pin." Whereupon he went off to have a quiet talk with his bride.

The luncheon gong, audible for half a mile, drew Jocelyn homeward. With appetite sharpened by his walk he hurried toward the hotel, in whose dining room the guests were already assembling. Outside, on the piazza, engaged in earnest conversation, he perceived Mrs. Van Loo and Stanfield. Gratitude arose in his breast toward his friend. So, even in that short space of time he had contrived to strike up an acquaintance with that lady. As he approached them, not without shyness, he saw Muriel's slight figure emerge from the dining room, and hurried up to intercept her.

She saw him coming and shrank back, dismayed, not knowing what to say. But he was at her side, pouring out his passionate denial of the story. As he went on he saw conviction gradually creep over the girl's face.

"It was all a jest," he cried, "a miserable, wretched, foolish jest, Muriel. Say you believe me. I am Lord Richard Jocelyn himself, and I—"

What might have followed he did not know, for at that moment a drawling voice called him from across the piazza.

"Come here, Jocelyn," it said, in tones of unmistakable contempt.

Stanfield and Mrs. Van Loo were approaching him. Jocelyn hastened toward them, puzzled at the tones of Stanfield's voice.

"My good fellow, what in the name of thunder are you doing down here?" said Stanfield. "Have you got a job with the 'Randolph'?"

"What do you mean, Jack?" cried Jocelyn in astonishment.

"O, cut that out, Dick," said Stanfield. "You can't throw that bluff here, my man."

"Is this the fellow you were speaking about, Mr. Stanfield?" asked Mrs. Van Loo acidulously, putting up her tortoise shell glasses. "Muriel, come here to me."

"Sure, that's him," said Stanfield, grinning. "Called himself Jocelyn, did he? The last part's right enough, for his name's Lynn—Dick Lynn—and a better butler I never met in England until he got the craze to be a gentleman."

"Jack, you shall suffer for this," cried Lord Jocelyn. "Is this a jest, or what?"

"Yes, the shock of exposure must be terrific, poor fellow," said Stanfield compassionately. "O, Dick Lynn, I warned you not to try your games on anybody in my neighborhood. Lord Jocelyn had to get rid of him, Mrs. Van Loo, on account of this mania of his. He started to impersonate his son, Richard—a poor enough specimen of a man, madam, but still a nobleman, and a gentleman after his fashion. So they had to part company, and I understand that Lynn had come to our country, although I didn't believe that he'd have the audacity to fly as high as this."

"Merciful haven!" sobbed Mrs. Van Loo, "he wanted to marry Muriel."

Lord Jocelyn, pale but very self-composed, advanced into the midst of them.

"Do you believe this, Muriel?" he asked.

But the girl trembled and shrank away from him. "Don't touch me, don't speak to me!" she cried.

"Suppose that it is true," Jocelyn went on. "What then?"

"Young man," said Mrs. Van Loo haughtily, "I advise you to pack your things and leave Craig's Peak by the next train. That's all I have to say to you. Muriel, come with me!" And she went into the dining room, followed by her daughter.

Jocelyn turned to Stanfield.

"Stanfield," he said, his voice shaking with anger, "I ought to give you the thrashing of your life for this, but in consideration of the service that you have done me I shall merely ignore you henceforward. You have shown up Miss Van Loo to me in a new light and saved me from an irreparable blunder." And he turned away.

But Stanfield followed him and stopped him at the end of the piazza.

"Dickey," he said, "listen to your best friend. I own I did mean to have some fun with you. But when I saw Mrs. Van Loo my joke became earnest, sober reality. For I had met her two winters ago at Palm Beach, and the daughter too, Dickey."

"Well?" asked Lord Jocelyn coldly.

"There was a duke's son there, Dickey, who seemed attached to Muriel. And she played the same trick on him, Dickey. She fell into the surf out of a catboat.

"Now you toddle along to the depot, Dickey," he added, taking his friend by the arm, "and I'll be there with your things before the train starts."

A month afterward, while playing solitaire in his apartment on Madison Avenue, New York, Lord Jocelyn received a scented envelope bearing the Boston postmark. It contained a long letter, a wild babble from Mrs. Van Loo, imploring his forgiveness. "That wretched friend of yours confessed that he had played a practical joke on you," he read. "Come and see us. Muriel and I have not forgotten our hero," it ended.

Lord Jocelyn paused and sighed, for his memories of Muriel were still tender ones. Then he tore the letter into pieces and threw them into the waste paper basket. He called his valet.

"Talbot," he said, "remind me tomorrow to send Mr. Stanfield a diamond scarf pin."

HUMOR IN HIS EXAGGERATION

Jabish Furlong's Recital Illustrates the Characteristic That Makes Maine Stories So Amusing.

Novel and exaggerated smiles and comparisons characterize Maine speech. Instead of such commonplaces as "As light as a feather" and "As dark as a pocket," the comparisons are likely to be "Forty pounds lighter than a straw hat" and "As dark as the inside of a cow."

And it is this same humorous exaggeration that makes many a Maine story so likeable. Jabish Furlong, who worked for old man McKusick in haying time, had it.

"I had the greatest luck out gunning the other day," said Jabish. "I was walking a log across a deep hole in the brook, when I see a squirrel up a spruce on the furder bank. I up right there and fired, and I fetched down the squirrel and a partridge besides that was settin' in the spruce beddin'. But the old gun kicked me into the brook. Well, I floundered around, catchin' holt of everything within reach, and when I found myself up on the bank, I had a mink in one hand, a muskquash in t'other and the seat o' mer pants was full o' trout."

FOUR FLEA POWER OF WATCH

Delicate Little Instrument Whose Balance Wheel Is Driven More Than 3,500 Miles a Year.

Few pieces of machinery show more wonderful features than that of the watch. As a general proposition it may be stated that a watch is the smallest, most delicate instrument of the same number of parts that has ever been devised.

About 175 different pieces of material enter into its construction and upward of 2,000 separate operations are comprised in its manufacture. Certain of the facts connected with its performance are almost incredible when considered as a whole.

A blacksmith strikes several hundred blows on his anvil in a day and as a matter of course is glad when Sunday comes, but the roller jewel of a watch makes every day—and day after day—432,000 impacts against the fork, or 157,680,000 blows during the course of a year without stop or rest—or some 3,153,600,000 blows during the space of twenty years, the period for which a watch is usually guaranteed to keep good time.

But the wonder of it does not cease here says the Michigan Manufacturer. It has been calculated that the power that moves the watch is equivalent to only four times the force used in a flea's jump. The watch power is therefore what might be termed the equivalent of a four flea-power. One horse-power would suffice to operate 370,000,000 watches.

Furthermore the balance wheel of a watch is moved by this four flea-power 1.43 inches with each vibration, or 3,558¼ miles continuously in one year. Not much oil is required to lubricate the little machine on its 3,500 mile run. It takes only one-tenth of a drop of oil to oil the entire machinery for a year's service.

Shifting Ministers.

One of Wesley's reasons for shifting his preachers every three years was avowedly that they might be able to preach the same sermon over again to different congregations. He knew by experience the difficulty of sermon making. After a few weeks, he said, a preacher cannot find matter for preaching every morning and evening, "nor will the people come to hear him, whereas if he never stays more than a portnight in one place he will find plenty of matter, and the people will hear him gladly. I know that were I to preach one whole year in one place I should preach both myself and my congregation to sleep.

Inventor of Shimose Powder.

Masachika Shimose, who invented the high explosive to which the name Shimose powder was given by the Japanese navy, died on September 7. He was professor of applied chemistry and was born in 1859.

For several years he was superintendent of the ammunition department of the naval arsenal during which time he made extensive researches in connection with explosives. His compound was adopted in 1893 by the Japanese navy and for his services a decoration and a sum of money were granted to him.—Scientific American.

A Case Of Goose

(Short Story.)

Young Sowall Chester thought very well of himself. He had studied law and had been admitted to the bar. He was rather good-looking and the praises of certain young ladies had made him vain.

While waiting for his first case he had the consolation of feeling that his bread and butter did not depend on it. Altogether, Mr. Chester was taking a very rosy view of life. He might have continued in this line for many months more but for forming the acquaintance of Miss Mildred Vane.

After his first case a lawyer is cautious. Instead of plunging he looks up the law. The first time Mr. Chester met Miss Vane he admired her. The second time he fell in love. The third time—well, Miss Vane was rather a blunt, outspoken girl, and she turned on him with:

"Mr. Chester, I should think the law would occupy your attention to the exclusion of everything else until you had carved a name for yourself."

Mr. Chester mentally admitted that the girl had the advantage.

"You aren't in practice yet, are you?" continued the girl. "I mean the practice of law?"

"I—I haven't had a case."

"But you probably will have, if you wait long enough."

"Y-es."

"I had an uncle who studied law and waited five years for his first client. She was an old woman who had had a goose stolen from her. It was a simple case, but he won it and then went right ahead and became a great lawyer. You should not get discouraged."

Lawyers never swear. They know the laws against profanity. They never indulge in threats. There's a law about that. They never seek revenge. The law faces them again. Mr. Chester felt himself crushed, but he could look himself in his office and declare in whispers that the day would come—yes, it should come!—when—and so on and so forth! Then he took up life again and did more waiting for a client and still continued to love Miss Mildred Vane, though he took care not to lisp the fact to anybody.

Mr. Vane was something or other in a life insurance company. As that something or other brought him a salary of $30,000 a year, he could afford a house in the country as well as one in the city.

Mr. Vane stuck to his horses and carriage, instead of selling them for junk and doing his riding in a chug waggon. He thought it safer for the public. In an auto he did not know what minute he might run down one of his own policy holders who carried a $25,000 risk and had paid but one premium on it.

It therefore came about that one afternoon Mr. Vane's coachman was driving Mr. Vane's daughter over the highway leading from home to the village and the railroad depot. There were farmhouses to pass. There were cows and pigs and geese and hens to pass. Mr. Vane's coachman sat up very straight and dignified. He had a position in the world. Cows and pigs and geese had not. Therefore, it was for them to look out. They seemed to realise this, and slowly sauntered out of the dust into the mayweeds.

All but one old gander! He was full of dignity and had a reputation to maintain. There was his flock looking on him and waiting to see if he would show the white feather. He took his stand and with outspread wings he hissed defiance. He was a brave old gander, but he went down under the iron hoofs of the blacks and met his doom. He gave forth one squawk and all was over!

"Here—stop! What have you done?" exclaimed Miss Mildred at the coachman as she realised that there had been an accident of some kind.

"Only an old goose, miss," was the reply, though the horses were checked. "But we'll see about the old goose just the same!" announced a farmer, and the owner of the bird, as he stepped from the gate. "Young lady, your coachman deliberately drove over that gander!"

"But he didn't get out of the way," protested the coachman.

"Neither did you. That goose had as much right to the highway as you have. I was watching, and you didn't turn out an inch."

"I am willing to pay the value of the goose," said Miss Mildred, as she opened her purse.

"Very well, miss. My price is $50!"

"What! What!" Fifty dollars for a goose!"

"Don't you give him over 50 cents!" put in coachee.

"Fifty dollars, miss, and not a cent less!" said the farmer, as he set his jaw.

"I don't set that value on him simply as an old gander, but because he has licked a fox and a hawk in a fair fight. One night, when a robber was trying to get into the house, this old gander gave the alarm. I had only to watch his actions to tell the weather three days in advance. Oh, yes, you will have to pay the $50, and I am letting you off cheap at that."

"But I won't pay it!" flamed the girl. "It is simply ridiculous. I'll pay one dollar and no more."

"Not another cent," added the coachman.

"Very well, I am a constable, and I arrest you for malicious destruction of property. Drive to the village and I will have you arraigned in court."

Whereupon he climbed up beside the driver and gave the word to go on. Had he not declared himself an officer he would have been pitched out. To pitch an officer from a carriage on his head into the highway is no joke in law. The coachman was glum, and the girl bit her handkerchief to keep back the words of "sass" that rose to her lips, and the remainder of the drive was not enjoyed by anyone.

On arriving in the village the carriage was driven straight to the office of a justice of the peace, and Miss Mildred's feelings passed from indignation to fear.

Just how the brieflless young lawyer happened to be in the village need not be explained, but he was there and saw the carriage and came to know what had happened. After 10 minutes' talk with the coachman he entered the court room to nod to the girl prisoner, and to inform the justice that he was her counsel in the case. Then and there occurred an episode. The prisoners were arraigned, and the lawyer Chester drew a long breath and prepared to do or die.

The killing of the old gander was admitted. It was admitted that he was the property of the plaintiff. It was further admitted that he had a legal right on the King's highway, but there was the question of value. Even in the city of New York, at Thanksgiving or Christmas time, a tough old gander was not worth over a dollar in the market. That sum had been offered the owner and rejected.

Fifty dollars for a goose? Who ever heard of the like? The cackling of geese saved Rome, but not one of the flock brought over $2 afterwards. Malicious destruction of goose life? Why, his clients were not aware that such a gander was in existence! That gander had fought a hawk and a fox, but it was that same belligerent spirit that had brought about his death. He was more of a monsoe to the highway than the carriage.

Mr. Chester spoke for an hour. He waved his arms. He thundered. He quoted decisions. He appealed. He won his case and went over to the girl, smiling.

"Just like my uncle!" she laughed.

"Yes, this is my first case, and it is about a goose."

"And your next, let us hope——"

"Will be about a young lady, and I feel that I shall win that!"

Miss Mildred blushed and turned away. The case may not be called for some little time yet, but Mr. Chester has confidence in the plea he has prepared.—Donald Allen, in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

When Britannia Winked

(Short Story.)

The committee of the Puddlecombe Coronation Festival was holding its meeting in a small classroom of the schoolhouse. The vicar presided, supported by Mr. Blobbs and three nonentities, and Mr. Tanner, the schoolmaster, was kept busy reducing the decisions of his superiors to writing.

"H'm," murmured the vicar, "that, I think, disposes of the mug question satisfactorily. There is another important point, but I have an engagement. I think, gentlemen, that the selection of the lady to take the leading part of Britannia in the procession may be left to Mr. Tanner. Personally, I have every confidence in Mr. Tanner's discretion. I understand that suggestion meets with general approval. Well, good evening. Mr. Tanner, I should just like a word with you."

Mr. Tanner meekly followed the vicar to the door.

"You see, Tanner," said the vicar, "I have had to use a little of the wisdom of the serpents. Mr. Blobbs, though in many ways an excellent man, is perhaps a trifle obstinate. I feared that he might insist on his daughter being Britannia. I think Mary Dawson, who sings in the choir and takes an active part in the women's sewing meeting, would be a suitable selection. You will notify Miss Dawson that she has been chosen to represent Britannia, Tanner."

"Yes, sir," said the schoolmaster, dubiously. He returned rather sadly to the schoolroom to pick up his papers, and found Mr. Blobbs waiting for him.

"Ah, Mr. Tanner, since this Britannia business is left in your 'ands, I thought it'd save you trouble to let you know that my 'Enrietta'll take it."

"But you see, Mr. Blobbs, the vicar made such a point of having Mary Dawson."

"Look 'ere, am I chairman of the school managers, or is 'e? You go and get them bills out. Put 'er full name, Alice 'Enrietta Blobbs, and after it, 'the daughter of M. Blobbs, Esq., Chairman of the Rural District Council.' Now we'll call that settled."

Mr. Tanner gathered up his papers and left the schoolroom disconsolate. He wandered down the road and found Maud Andrews waiting for him.

"Hallo, George, what's the matter? Is it the vicar or Mr. Blobbs this time?"

The schoolmaster shook his head. "I'm in a most awkward position at present. You see, they've left the representative of Britannia in the coronation procession to be chosen by me."

Miss Andrews tossed her head and put a stray curl straight. "Well, you needn't be afraid about asking me."

"But, you see," began Mr. Tanner, "there's Henrietta Blobbs. Mr. Blobbs wants her to be Britannia, and the vicar will have Mary Dawson, and if Mr. Blobbs doesn't get his way I shall never get an advance of salary—and most likely I'll lose my position. And if the vicar doesn't get his way he'll stop me from being organist any longer, and there goes 20 pounds a year."

"Then be a man and choose me. Tell them you did it to avoid giving a preference to either of the candidates. I tell you this, George Tanner, that if you put either of those girls before me and haven't pluck enough to stick up for my rights, our engagement is at an end."

That evening Mr. Tanner wandered through the fields a melancholy man. He sat down under a hedge and groaned aloud. "I wish I was dead and out of it all," he said. His sighs and moans were heart-breaking. As he groaned over his miserable position, cursing the fate that had flung him in the midst of three fires, Miss Allison Travers came down the hedge. It is hard to record it of a young lady whose hair had just ascended and whose skirts had just begun to hide her ankles, but Miss Travers was bird-nesting.

As she was hooking out a nest with the handle of her stick, she was surprised by a deep groan in the hedge. She promptly straightened her hair and looked through the gap.

"What's the matter? Are you ill? It's Mr. Tanner, isn't it?"

Mr. Tanner sprang to his feet. "I beg your pardon, if I disturbed you, Miss Travers. No, I wasn't ill—just a little depressed."

Miss Travers knew the schoolmaster well by sight. She always thought of him as the red-headed young man who played the organ in church, and squeezed the hand of the prettiest girl in the choir all through the sermon. Being a girl of 17, she felt, of course, a maternal interest in the troubles of this young man of 30.

"What's bothering you, Mr. Tanner? You've surely not quarrelled with that pretty girl in the choir?"

"Everything's the matter, Miss Travers. It's all about the coronation festival. You see, they've put it on me to choose the girl for Britannia. If I don't choose Miss Blobbs I shall get dismissed from the school; if I don't choose Miss Dawson I shall lose my post as organist. And if I do choose either of them, Miss Andrews will throw me over. So, you see, Miss Travers, if I kept the girl I'm engaged to get married to, I lose the income I was going to get married on. It's no wonder that I'm miserable."

"Hard lines," ejaculated Miss Travers, seating herself on a tree trunk.

"It is. I've done my best for everybody, and now everybody seems set on ruining me."

"If I were you," advised Miss Travers, "I'd leave the lot of them and go out to Canada or South Africa, or somewhere and build up the empire."

"I don't know exactly how to begin," replied Mr. Tanner.

"Look here, Mr. Tanner, I did think you might have gone goat farming in Canada or Australia, or one of those places, but now I've got a better idea."

And as Mr. Tanner listened, the shadow vanished from his face.

The next morning the committee for the coronation festival was to meet again. Mr. Blobbs was there early and eyed the vicar and the schoolmaster in hostile fashion. He had heard that Mary Dawson had announced that she was to be Britannia. At last the vicar took the chair.

"Well, friends, our first business is to call upon Mr. Tanner to report on his selection of the representative of Britannia. I have no doubt that he has made the judicious selection we expect from one holding such a responsible position."

"'Ear, 'ear," said Mr. Blobbs, ominously.

Slowly Mr. Tanner rose to his feet. The vicar eyed him severely. Mr. Blobbs gave a warning snort.

"Negotiations had been proceeding," said Mr. Tanner, "but I received a letter this morning which alters the entire position. With your permission I'll read it, sir."

"Dear Mr. Tanner:

"I hear you are to hold your coronation festival in our park. If I can act as representative of Britannia in our celebration, I shall be very pleased to do so. I have asked my father to throw open the flower gardens to the villagers during the day and to provide a bonfire on the hill in the park at night. Yours truly,

"'ALISON TRAVERS.'"

Mr. Blobbs glanced at the vicar. "Well, well, that settles it, I s'pose. If the squire's daughter wants to be Britannia she'll 'ave to be. It's far better than picking out scarecrows because they're church workers."

The vicar rose to his feet. "I move that Miss Travers' very kind offer be accepted. All I wished was that a lady of refinement and culture should represent Britannia. Now that is secured, I am quite satisfied."

It was the day of the coronation festival at Puddlecombe. Britannia had been escorted to her throne by Canada (Miss Dawson), South Africa (Miss Blobbs), and Australia (Miss Andrews). Mr. Tanner was distributing mugs to an infuriated crowd of youngsters, when Mr. Blobbs, as chairman of the proceedings, called for "silence" for the vicar. As the reverend gentleman rose and began to dwell on the lessons of that great day, Mr. Tanner put on a look of rapt attention. Unfortunately at that moment he caught Britannia's eye, and Britannia, with entire disregard of her imperial responsibility, winked.—Radcliffe Martin, in Buffalo Enquirer.

HOW TO WASTE MONEY AND WHERE TO SAVE IT

The best way to waste money is keep it in the pocket. Then, whenever you see a thing in the shop you buy it. It is a great mistake to wait a couple of days without buying an article of commerce, because you may forget it, or discover that you do not require it. Also your house will not be crowded with unnecessary furniture, says a writer in T.P.'s Weekly. The buying of furniture is the best way to ruination and discomfort. And perhaps the easiest method of spending is to keep "books" with tradesmen. This assures that you will have exciting quarter-days, and eventually pay twice for things that you have had, and once for things that have never been delivered. You will have no worry during the quarter, and instead will suffer from a series of nervous shocks, the principal one coming at Christmas. Also when you want to waste money only have one pair of boots. They wear out so much faster if worn every day. If you have three or four, occasionally varnish the soles and lay them by for a month or two, their durability is much increased. By saving a couple of shillings on boot "trees" you can increase your bootmaker's bill threefold. Also, in the matter of clothes, a trouser-press will repay its cost in three months. The really wasteful man will buy none of these things. The careful man buys always two pairs of trousers with each suit. Many men will work for nothing. I have known a dentist who charged so little that well-to-do people from neighbouring towns came to him. This was good for the railways, and kept him so busy that he suffered from nervous prostration, and had to take a long holiday at great expense. I knew a journalist also who offered free specimen articles, which were appreciated both by editors and readers, but when he began to charge they turned him down. Another writer of books gave free lectures upon the same subjects by way of advertising, thus damaging the sale of his volumes enormously. It is a difficult matter to raise one's charges, but where this can be done without unduly fleecing those who are badly off it should be done, and professional men are apt to be unduly timid in such matters.

The True Thrift.

The really careful man will keep a list of things he is likely to need. Just about Christmas he will estimate his next year's income by comparing wih last year's accounts. You need not keep elaborate books. An ordinary notebook, one side for receipts, the other for payments, is all that an ordinary man needs. Yet such a system reveals in half an hour every penny wasted last year, and provides a basis for next year's estimate. Having found that one will need two pairs of boots, a tweed suit, a dress-suit, and various small items, remember the forthcoming sales and buy for cash. Your tailor will give liberal discount for cheque on delivery if you ask him, though he will prefer to let a bill run on a five per cent. basis, especially if you are of good reputation, as most of you are. Then take out your review cuttings relating to books that appeal to you. Notice how many are in cheaper editions since your first desire was awakened. Then boldly buy all your require. Much money is wasted in panic-stricken present-giving.

Saving Money.

Some people cannot save, as all their money can, and must, be spent to immediate advantage. But most people have periods at which income exceeds expenditure. I see that the Post Office Savings Bank is issuing money-boxes for the home. The key is kept at the post office and the contents of the box credited periodically to the account. 'With pennies this is a good system and emphasises the need for starting children upon a solvent and sensible basis. The Post Office will not accept more than £50 in one year, or £200 in all. It is a great mistake on reaching the maximum to buy Consols. Those who did so at 114 have lost a third of their total capital. Personally, I recommend a bank account, either with a good commercial bank that publishes a balance sheet, or with such an institution as the Yorkshire Penny Bank. I heard that in one town of 100,000 inhabitants more than one person in every five had an account with that institution. The possession of money is a source of strength. It enables one to stand a siege if unemployers, bad fortune, or ill-health bring one into temporary trouble. Such saving is not a snare to the soul. Of course to cultivate a miserly habit with a view to an eventual life of laziness undermines one's nature. It brings all the ills of poverty, and causes the victim constant terror lest his hoard should be depleted. But nothing is worse for a man's nature than financial worry. The spendthrift thinks quite as much of money as the miser, and to think constantly of money narrows one's appreciation of life, inducing a timid outlook.

Estimating.

Make a liberal estimate under such headings as household expenses, food, rent, clothes, doctor's bills, travelling, literature, and amusement. If your income admits, set aside ten per cent. for reserve, and pay in to your bank each week or month what legitimately can be spared. In your estimates allow a proportion for renewals and furniture, and deliberately frame them on the top side, so that the New Year will bring you no shocks. As regards furniture, papering, and painting, go in for strict simplicity unless you have both the knowledge and the money that permit more elaborate artistic surroundings. All furniture that is simple is good. Plain green, blue, or red wallpapers (without pattern), with or without frieze, are right. You need never fear the scrutiny of a man of taste and culture if your household surroundings are plain and simple, and if your books are well chosen according to personal taste.

SEEN AND HEARD

THE VOLUNTEERS.

Dr. Simon Flexner, the physican at the head of the Rockfeller Institute, said at a dinner in New York, apropos of certain mooted legislation against medical research:

"Our friends would surround medical research with so many restrictions and hindrances as to make it ridiculous. They would, in fact, put it in the position of the English volunteers.

"When England you know, was threatened by a French invasion in 1802, there were a great many volunteers enlisted. But the articles of incorporation of these volunteers guarded them very carefully against any too much fighting. The volunteers were not to take the field 'except in case of actual invasion.' They were not to be put on war rations 'except in case of actual invasion.' They were not to be drilled hard 'except in case of actual invasion.'

"When Pitt, who was then warden of the cinque ports, read these articles, he frowned. Finally, on toward the end of the document, he came to a provision that under no circumstances were the volunteers to leave the country. Here he lost patience, and, seizing a pen, he added to that provision the clause—

"'Except in case of actual invasion.'"—New York Herald.

HIS FIRST.

Oliver H. Curtis, the well known sociologist of Omaha, said in a recent lecture:

"But our slums are much cleaner than the old, old slums of Europe. Our slum denizens are cleaner, too.

"Among us it is unusual to sew up children in woollen underwear for the winter—not so abroad—and I once heard in Hungary of a case that you will hardly credit.

"A man was arrested for stealing a pig, and they told him that he must take a bath before entering his cell.

"'What! Take a bath!' the man cried, in horrified voice.

"'Yes,' said the jailer. 'How long is it since you had a bath?'

"'So help me,' said the prisoner solemnly, 'I never was arrested before—never.'"—New York Tribune.

THE PRACTICE.

Assemblyman Nelson L. Drummond, of Cayuga, was talking in Albany about his system of weekly reports to his constituents.

"In these reports," he said, "I tell my constituents what legislation is going on and what part in it I myself am taking.

"I think such reports are necessary when a man is in politics. The average citizen, you know, is inclined to look on politicians with the cynical eye of little Johnny Jones.

"'Johnny,' said his teacher, 'if coal is selling at $6 a ton and you pay your dealers $24, how many tons will he bring you?'

"'Three, ma'am,' said Johnny, promptly.

"'Why, Johnny, that isn't right,' said the teacher.

"'No, ma'am, I know it ain't,' said Johnny, 'but they all do it.'"—New York Times.

HORSE'S LEG SWELLED

Animal Was Too Sore and Lame to Work—Quickly Cured by "Nerviline."

"I have had a long experience in treating horses, and I can safely say that I know of no liniment for straining, sprains, and swelling that is so useful around the stable as Nerviline." Thus writes Mr. James H. Murchison, from his home, Crofts Hill P. O. I had a fine young mare that wrenched her right fore leg, and from the shoulder down she was stiff, sore, and swollen. I applied Nerviline, and it worked like a charm; in fact, that mare was in shape to work a day after I used Nerviline.

Nerviline is a Trusty Liniment

"We have used Nerviline on our farm for twenty-five years and never found it wanting. For man or beast it is a wonderful liniment."

We have received nearly five thousand letters, recommending Nerviline as a general household liniment, as an all-round cure for aches and pains. One million bottles used each year. Try it yourself. Large bottles of Nerviline 50c; trial size, 25c. All dealers, or The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

NERVILINE FOR MAN OR BEAST

A FLAGGED DINING CAR

(Short Story.)

Young Benson had slept for the night in a stable; then, without breakfast, as he had been without supper the day before, he took up the interminable search for work. Just now he found himself on the railroad and a new station which was being erected.

But the superintendent was not there to hire any help. Benson's face showed weary disappointment. He was hungry and he looked it. The mechanic to whom he applied for work noticed it.

"'Spose you want a job just long enough to hike off with a dinner pail," the journeyman hinted, good-naturedly quizzical.

"'Bout that," the boy admitted, with unexpected frankness. "If I could work long enough to earn a meal I wouldn't mind taking a short vacation on half pay."

But he entered into the humour with a weak voice as he glanced across the neighbouring field and the circling birds. "I might get a chance as scarecrow," he whimsically mused, "only I wouldn't chase anything away from grub now."

The journeyman sized him up, took in his wan but intelligent face and then re-entered the building. Benson turned down the tracks and was a considerable distance away when the mechanic came out again with a sandwich from his dinner pail. Benson might have heard a hail, but he had gone over an embankment to the brook for a drink. The mechanic could not see him and there was no hail.

Benson clambered slowly up the tracks again. "That fellow in the Bible had been living with the hogs," he muttered, "if only he knew it. Now a job sampling groceries would just suit me—I wouldn't want any pay at first; the experience would be enough."

He grinned hungrily, pulled a straggling bit of leather off the bottom of his worn shoe, tightened up his belt to the next hole and stopped to watch a fast train fly by. A whiff from the open window of a dining car struck his nostrils.

"A noble smell," he ruminated, as he dimlessly counted off the ties and tried sniffingly to pick up the scent of roast beef again.

He had no special purpose in mind, save to keep a sane humour and proceed until he moved up close to a job and the food it would entitle him to. A dog nearby was busily crunching a bone. He paused for an instant to watch the tantalising operation.

It reminded him to take up his belt to the last hole. Then he pressed on against the stiff March gale which was rising. The wind was drying up the thawed ground and making the walk easier.

In the distance was a turn of the tracks. Beyond, there might be eating in some town. As he glanced that way hopefully he suddenly saw a telegraph pole sag a little toward the rails under stress of the gale. While he watched it settled farther. Apparently it was about to fall prostrate over the right of way. Too hungry to stand up straight," Benson grimly told himself.

At that moment Benson heard the whistle of an oncoming train. He recognised the smooth rumble of a passenger makeup, the swish of six-wheel trucks under Pullman car. And it was evidently coming up the outside track, since the previous express had used the second.

At that very instant the pole inclined at a sharper angle, pursuant to its promise of tumbling headlong in another second. The thaw had weakened the embankment in which the pole was set, and now the wind was master of it.

"By the great horn spoon!" Benson ejaculated. He imagined the pole dropping before the fast train as it dashed around the curve. With a gasp of horror he seemed to see the locomotive slash against the fallen timber and into a network of wires, only to be hurled fiendishly from the rails. He fancied, already, curdling screams when the train leaped the embankment or ripped itself to kindling wood as the toppled cars, at a crazy speed, dragged the ground.

Instinctively Benson sprang forward, reaching the pole as the trim cowcatcher showed its nose around the head. It was a chance whether the pole would fall in front of the engine or drop between the cars and cut the train in two.

There was no time to signal. Benson's only thought was that an ounce of help might delay the catastrophe for a saving second while the train got under. Reaching the pole with a spring he set his back against it. Striking his feet against the ties, he tried to press the stick up or at least to keep it from coming down too fast.

A startled screech from the engine told him that the driver had seen. But the speed of fifty miles an hour was bringing the big black mass in leaps and bounds. Meanwhile the pole, poised like a giant baseball bat, held itself in readiness for a strike. It would have been a nice calculation for the engineer whether to slow up or fly with the utmost speed; but there was no time for calculation.

Hunger-weakened as he was, Benson summoned every atom of his strength and strained to keep the pole from falling. A last straw breaks even a camel's back, he knew; but the camel bears up under the straw before that. There was just a chance that a few pounds pressure would suffice to hold the stick back long enough for the train to get under. Benson was taking the chance, uncertain whether, if he failed, he would be crushed by the pole or annihilated by the locomotive.

The engine was a hundred feet distant—now fifty—and now twenty! The whistle was advancing in a continuous, rising screech, as if the engineer thought to frighten the pole away.

But then there came a fiercer gust of wind. The timber bore down with pitiless weight. Benson stiffened his knees. They trembled with the intensity of his efforts as he clenched his fists and strained taut until his tongue protruded and his face turned purple. The cruel weight was crushing his back. He had thought himself, one instant, the conqueror; and then he felt himself crumpling like a shell.

He seemed to have been holding up the pole for an age while the face of the flying steel monster crept closer. The terror of being flirted directly in front of the leaping black bulk surged through his mind. But in spite of the fate that threatened he held to his self-appointed task until he realised, finally, that he was going—down, down, down, down!

He collapsed suddenly. Prone on the tracks he fell, his fingers futilely grasping the rails while his ears throbbed with the roar of the train. But as the stick toppled it pushed him aside from its own path, and, crunching down across the tracks, it pinned his coat fast as he drifted off into unconsciousness from a grazing blow on the head.

The train was safe. It had gone under before his strength gave way. Railroad men and passengers came running back to Benson when the engineer drew to a stop. Plenty of water revived the unconscious lad.

Benson slowly opened his eyes into the faces of the throng bent over him. The mechanics from the new station had seen the impending catastrophe and hastened to the scene. The journeyman of Benson's acquaintance was one of those near.

Benson smiled wanly as an onlooker broke into fervent exclamations of gratitude. "Is there a dining car on this train?" he wanted to know, taking his answer in the presence of a white-garbed cook near by.

"He's half starved," the mechanic explained to somebody, as the cook, eager to show his thankfulness, hurried off with a promise to be back in a jiffy. "Say, mate," the mechanic continued, when Benson was lifted up and found to be sound. "This—" and the journeyman respectfully indicated a solicitous bystander—"this is the boss of the station job. I guess he'll give you a job now if I ask him."

"I sure will," the superintendent smilingly declared, "just as soon as those sandwiches come back."—American Boy.

Herewith will be found the picture of a stylishly dressed lady. Around her figure are concealed the faces of her seven daughters. Can you find their seven faces? If so, mark the faces with an X. Cut out the picture and send it to us, together with a slip of paper on which you have written the words, 'I have found the seven faces and marked them.'

Write the above words plainly and neatly, as in case of ties, both writing and neatness will be considered in this contest. Should you not happen to be a neat writer, point out this advertisement to some friend of yours who can write plainly and neatly, and have him or her enter this contest in his or her name for you. First, agree with the person who is to do the writing, that you are to receive any prize money or prize that may be awarded. This may take up a little of your time, but as there is TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS in cash and One Thousand premiums given away, it is worth your time to take a little trouble over this matter.

Remember, all you have to do is to mark the faces, cut out the picture, and write on a separate piece of paper the words, "I have found the seven faces and marked them."

We do not ask You to Spend One Cent of Your Money in order to enter this Contest.

Send your answer at once; we will reply by Return Mail telling you whether your answer is correct or not, and we will send you a complete Prize List, together with the names and addresses of persons who have recently received over One Thousand Dollars in Cash Prizes from us, and full particulars of a simple and easy condition that must be fulfilled. (This condition does not involve the spending of any of your money.)

Winners of Cash Prizes in our late competitions will not be allowed to enter this Contest.

Below will be found the names and addresses of a few persons who have won some of our larger prizes in recent contests. Your opportunity to win a good round sum is equally as good as that of anyone else, as all previous winners of cash prizes are debarred from entering this contest.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

ALL YOUR STOMACH TROUBLE VANISHES

No Indigestion, Gas, Heartburn or Dyspepsia Five Minutes Later

Every year regularly more than a million stomach sufferers in the United States, England and Canada take Pape's Diapepsin, and realise not only immediate, but lasting relief.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach five minutes afterwards.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of Indigestion.

Get from your Pharmacist a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odours.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other stomach disorder.

THE DAMAGED ARTICLE

(By Annie Hinrichsen)

A donkey, drawing a small cart, strolled leisurely along the road. It was a winding road, which led up a long hill and lost itself on the high cliffs above the lake. The donkey followed the road to the cliffs, and as his driver left his destination to his own wishes he turned into a fork that ended at a cabin built on the edge of a bluff. Here he stopped, planted his feet wide apart and refused to retrace his journey.

Miss Neale stepped from the cart and tried to turn him. Billy stood. From behind the cabin rolled a tiny bear cub. Billy, with one jump, loosened Miss Neale's hold on the bridle, turned and galloped down the road.

"My bear is harmless." A young man came from the cabin. "I am sorry your donkey has been frightened."

Mildred Neale's eyes opened wide. Well-groomed young men in tailored clothes did not inhabit the cliff cabins.

The young man looked after the departing Billy. "Is your home far from here?"

"Six miles."

"Will you let me take you there in my car?"

"A car in this region?"

"I brought a lot of my junk, including my car, with me when I moved here," the man explained. "Since my bear—I found him in the woods the other day—has chased away your steed, you will surely let me provide you with another conveyance."

"You do not belong in this part of the world, do you?" he asked as the car glided away from the cliffs.

"I live at the Willow Branch farm. You know the place?"

"A model, up-to-date little farm. I have often passed it."

"I own and manage it. I am a woman agriculturist." Her brown eyes met his frankly without the wavering of self consciousness. Her voice was devoid of the accent of the locality.

"Have you always lived at Willow Branch farm?" he asked.

"No. The place was my refuge after my father's death. When his estate was settled this farm, which I had never seen, was all that was left for me. I came here to try my fortune as a lady farmer. And you? Why are you living on the bluff?"

He turned abruptly from her, gripped the steering wheel and shot the car suddenly forward. When he spoke again he had apparently forgotten her question.

Nearly every day the big car came from the cliff above the lake to Willow Branch farm. Even Billy, who, at first acquaintance had feared it as greatly as he had the bear, recognised it as a familiar friend.

"No man," the cliff dweller announced, has a right to bind a woman unless he can come to her as a whole man, sound in body and in reputation. The greater his love the less willing should he be to give her less than she gives him."

As Barnard spoke Mildred, watched his face. On his forehead and around his eyes and lips were lines of mental pain.

"But suppose," she suggested, "that the woman came for him?"

"He should not allow her to," he answered curtly. "He should go away—as—as I intend to."

"Are you going away?"

"I must. It is the only decent thing I can do. You know I love you, Mildred. But you don't know—you don't know why I must not ask you to love me."

He hurried out of the room.

A few hours later Billy trotted into the yard of the cliff dweller's cabin. He had come very fast. His driver jumped from the cart before it stopped and hurried toward the house. Barnard came to meet her.

"It is not true." Her face was white and her lips were quivering, but her voice was firm. "I do not believe a word of it. You could not have done it."

"Done what?"

She opened a newspaper she carried. It was the magazine section of a Sunday edition filled with stories of people famous and infamous. On the front page was a large picture of the cliff dweller. Beneath it were great black letters, "Remarkable Disappearance of Daring Embezzler. Man Who Wrecked Garden Bank Still at Liberty. No Clew." Several columns descriptive of the gentlemanly malefactor and his crimes followed.

The cliff dweller read the story. "So you don't believe I did it?" he asked.

"I know you did not."

"Why do you know it?"

"Because I knew absolutely that you are good and honorable and true. I know it by the look in your eyes and the set of your chin and by the intuition which is given to a woman to show her the difference between truth and dishonour. I understand now why you would not ask me to care for you. You thought your wrecked reputation made you a man unfit for a woman to love. But you are not a bank wrecker, and I care for you even if you will not ask me to."

"Will you go back into the world with me if I give myself up and stand by me while I try to prove my innocence?"

"Yes."

He turned a page of the paper. The second page contained a picture of a man weak of chin and crafty of eye. Beneath it in large letters were the words, "John Morley, Barnard, Young Millionaire, Seeks Health in Lonely Cabin on Lake Shore. Well Known Capitalist Lives in Retirement with an Automobile and a Pet Bear." There were several columns describing the young man's brilliant business career, his nervous breakdown, his cabin and his bear.

Mildred glanced through the story. "And that is you?" I looked at the first page and then came as fast as Billy would bring me to tell you I believed in you."

"The compositor of the paper in making up the edition transposed the two pictures and put my picture in the embezzler's story and his picture in mine."

"Then if you are not a fugitive from justice why did you wish me not to care for you?"

"I am a nervous wreck. You are strong and beautiful and young. You are making a success of the work you were brave enough to undertake. You have made for yourself a full and happy life. To tie you to an invalid would be a crime. A sick man is a miserable object, fit only for pity. I detest pity. I did not tell you anything about my illness because I did not want you to pity me. And I could not ask you to marry an invalid. I love you too well to place you at the mercy of a sick man's temper. But, when I am well again I'll come back to you if you will let me—"

"You poor damaged article," she laughed with happy mockery. "You are to be well and strong again with my help. You have asked me if I would stand by you while you tried to prove your innocence and I said yes. You won't jilt me now, will you?"

COOKING HINTS

ORIENTAL SALAD.

Cold baked or boiled beans may be used in making this delightful salad. Peel and slice thin 10 fair-sized silver skin onions; soak them in cold water to remove the strong taste, changing the water and pressing the onions between the hands. Drain well. Put three cups of the beans in a salad bowl; add to them the onions chopped fine, one and a half teaspoonfuls of salt, a teaspoonful of pepper, two tablespoonfuls of salad oil, one teaspoonful of sugar and enough vinegar to suit your taste. Toss and mix lightly with a fork, adding half a cupful of shredded olives, if you have them. Garnish with lettuce and hard-boiled eggs. Sprinkle a little finely minced parsley over the top of the salad.

EGG SALAD.

Boil hard as many eggs as you need and cut them in halves and put them in salad leaves or nest made by shredding the coarse salad leaves. For six eggs, chop fine two olives, one gherkin, a tablespoonful of parsley. Mix five tablespoonfuls of olive oil with two tablespoonfuls of tarragon vinegar, half a teaspoonful of salt and saltspoonful of pepper. Mix and add a teaspoonful of grated onions. Sprinkle the dressing over the eggs, then the chopped gherkin, olive oil, etc., and stand in a cold place until needed.

FRENCH MEAT SALAD.

Chop three anchovies, a shallot and some parsley fine and put into a bowl with two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, one of oil, a pinch of dry mustard, and little salt. When well mixed add by degrees some cold roast or boiled beef cut in fine, thin slices not exceeding two or three inches long, and a few at a time. Shake them in the seasoning; and then put in more. Cover the bowl close. Prepare the salad three or four hours before it is to be served. Garnish with parsley and a few slices of the fat of the meat cut in squares, and slices of pickled beets.

NUT AND POTATO SALAD.

Four good-sized potatoes, a cupful of nut meats (English walnuts or pecans), a slice of onions, a blade of mace, one bayleaf, half a teaspoonful of salt and French dressing. Boil the nuts, salt and seasoning in enough water to cover them, for 10 minutes; then drain and blanch in ice water. Boil and slice the potatoes while hot and drain the nuts, drying them well. Mix together half a teaspoonful of salt, a quarter teaspoonful of pepper and four tablespoonfuls of olive oil. When mixed, and while stirring, drop in gradually one tablespoonful of vinegar and half a tablespoonful of onion juice. Mix the nuts and potatoes together and pour the dressing over them. Serve with cress, if you can get it in the market.

SALAD A LA MARINGA.

Parboil sweet-breads and cut them in dice with a silver fruitknife. For each pair of sweet-breads take two hard-boiled eggs, one truffle and a small head of curly lettuce. Remove the outer leaves of the lettuce, keep them for serving, and shred the rest. Cut the truffles in strips and rub the yolks of the eggs through a sieve. Cut the whites of the eggs in dice and mix with the sweet-breads and truffles. Marinate with French dressing and let stand an hour or two. When ready to serve, add the lettuce and egg yolks, mix with mayonnaise dressing and serve on the outer leaves of lettuce.

KIT'S COLUMN

Not so long ago a poor girl in the worst trouble that can overtake a girl collapsed as she was being taken back to the cells after being arraigned as the murderer of her infant child. This unfortunate being only eighteen years of age, victim of her own vanity and weakness and some man's lust, was left to face alone the consequences of her desperate act. There is no excuse for her, members of her own sex will tell you, some indeed adding the hope that the forlorn creature be hanged by the neck till she is dead. She is ruined, done for, "better"—this was said to me personally—"that such human rubbish should be swept up and carted away." I asked if she would permit me to print this. Her answer was "as widely as you like." How hard a good woman can be on an erring sister!

Suppose for a moment you enter into the feelings of that most unhappy being and put yourself in her place. With a toss of her head that good woman tells you that that is impossible. She could never imagine herself such a weakling. The idea is an insult—she tempted to do anything so "low" as to permit herself to be seduced by any blandishments of a mere man!

Forbid the thought, kind Heaven!

Adieu, Madam! We have no concern with such as you. You are of no more human interest than if you were made of the stone that you would throw at this forlorn creature. You have no place at the feet of the gentle Teacher Who so fully understood all human weakness, and out of His compassionate heart poured grace and mercy on the unfortunate. For you have seated yourself on a throne above His head.

Only the man hidden behind such a case may know something of the slow torture which eats like a corrosive at the heart and soul of the girl he has ruined. At her more hopeless hours even he cannot guess. She has lost that which every woman prizes most of all the world—her maidenly virtue. She has given all she had to give, herself, at the call of Love—that most natural and most powerful of all our instincts. She has believed in the man, in his vows of marriage, of constancy. She has staked her all on Love and lost, and is facing the most awful, most desolate, most desperate crisis an unmarried woman may know—that of coming motherhood. Who is there to whom she can go with her story sure to meet compassion, understand, help? Not one, for a girl in such a situation instinctively shrinks from other women, and most of all from her own mother. Think of the frightful moments of despair which must have assailed her, moments when reason staggered, and the mental balance was upset, and everything—all life—seemed distorted and unreal. Think of it and pity her and compassionate her. No way out! Not a loophole anywhere! The inevitable must happen though a million hearts should break!

Oh, not one of us—not the purest and best—not the highest and holiest, should send one cruel word or thought after the forlorn being who, forsaken and alone, has to meet such an ordeal as that. Thank God there are noble women who do understand, who have hearts big enough and motherly enough to take in and warm with their compassion and sympathy such poor Cigales as they meet fluttering through the wintry woods in their thin garments, poor butterflies whose wings are broken and soiled, who never again may sun themselves in the garden where the proud lilies blow in all their white and stately beauty.

Smoking among women is on the increase. It is a habit which, I think, a woman would be foolish to imitate—like any other habit and for the same reason—because women are extremists. Ask any medical man and he will tell you it is more difficult to break woman off the drug or drink habit than it is men. It is not good for any of us to permit ourselves to become slaves to a habit if only because it is so difficult to break a habit and start on a new tack. It entails suffering both physcial and mental. Is it not rather a sad commentary on life as we live it that an anaesthetic in the form of drug, drink or smoke should be considered necessary to allay some of the poignancy of mere living? If thought were trained along higher lines and broader, such as the study, which for want of a better word might be termed the scientific religions known as Theosophy and New Thought, we would have less time for brooding over the sameness of our days or the struggle for existence, and therefore less need for taking into our systems deleterious drugs and nonsense of that sort. Menti-culture is a fairly new "fad" among us of the West, though known to the Orientals since the beginning. It is rather worth while cultivating it. We do not exercise our minds enough as a rule. A little energy directed that way would not be amiss. It is astonishing what a reading of one of Mrs. Annie Besant's Lectures will do for you, for instance. Her lecture on changes in the world physical sends the mind on a joyous expedition from which it returns to everyday problems and interests mightily refreshed. You know what deep breathing before an open window does for the body the first thing in the morning! Well, that is what this sort of reading does for the mind, renews, invigorates, oxygenises it, so to speak, and leaves it fresh and alert. One of the joys of the mind-life is, raising the curtain and obtaining the wider view. Not long since a man of my acquaintance said relative to the mystic side of a race literature he had dipped into: "It has altered my views considerably; it has opened new vistas, lifted a curtain for me on fresh scenes in life." We can each do that for ourselves. Then what need have we of artificial stimulation such as is produced by drugs or wine or tobacco smoke. Women, especially because of their more nervous temperament, and seasons of neurotic unrest, should eschew all stimulation of that sort. And it is not smoking only. The cocktail habit has grown to an enormous extent among women who frequent the fashionable hotels and restaurants. It is a pity. A woman can be so exquisite of mind as well as of body. Her influence is so penetrating—so wonderful. Take her Motherhood alone. What can Nature or the world offer that is more profoundly touching and beautiful than her joy, her anxiety, her pride, her perfect, selfless love, her passion of self-sacrifice for the human being whom she knew in secret and loved first of any in the world?

A "Lover of Old Age" writes:

December 30, 1911.

Dear Editor,—During the past I have taken great pleasure in reading some of the writings of Kit (I don't know if it is a man or woman writer), but I did feel hurt at Kit on Saturday night reading. Kit says, Would you like to live to a hundred? and then goes on to say how ugly we would grow. Now, Kit, I love old buildings, I love old relics, and, above all, I love old men and women. I was brought up to love and respect my great-grandmothers with as much respect as my mother. Why do most of the old men and women bear the scars of time so? It is because they were the builders of our beautiful Canada. I am an English woman, it being 24 years since I came here. I feel I am nearly a Canadian; but I am sorry to see our Canadian fathers and mothers bringing their children up and allowing them to give grandpa and grandma such hard looks and call them by such rude names. I would love to live to one hundred, and if I grow as old and withered as the covers on my old Bible, may I have handed out so much of the teaching of my Saviour that when I am old and feeble and perhaps blind I may then have a little of the love handed back to me. "Love ye one another." I can kiss an old battered face just as quick as I can a baby's.

What is more beautiful to see than the twinkle in their eyes as they relate old times and the growth and hardships they went through to build a home for us. Some of us would still be living in old London, huddled up in rooms roasting to death, near, in the summer time, had it not been for the old men and women of Canada. Fathers and mothers, don't let your children ridicule old age. I for one would rather talk to old people than young. And may we all so live that when we reach such a great old age we will have done our part to merit love, respect and a place to live in, that when we lay our burdens down we will hear the Saviour say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of My rest."—Yours respectfully,

A LOVER OF OLD AGE.

I would not grieve such a reader as "Lover of Old Age" for a world's favour, nor intentionally do that which would hurt old people, of whom I have always been especially fond. My argument merely related to the terrible joke Time can play with the human envelope which enwraps the soul. It seemed to me shocking that men and women who had lived good lives—as those contemplated certainly had—should have been made the sport of the years, which in a sort of grim joke had marked their faces with twist and scar and crooked line. There was nothing at all said as to the character of these people, or against that of aged persons who are so generally dear and lovable and beloved. No one could respect the old more than the writer. It seemed terrible that Life and experience could thus batter all comeliness and beauty out of these centenarian faces, and the thought came that one would not like to live too long; that one would not care to wear the scars of life so deeply marked for all to read; that it would be better if one could pass out before dependence on the love or care of even the most beloved of our kin became necessary. That was all.

So, when thieves broke into the tomb of the beautiful Lantelme, she who died so tragically in the fulness of her youth and loveliness last summer, they failed to discover where her jewels were after all. They evidently had been fighting over her remains, as evidences of a struggle were apparent when at last the police arrived. Jewels of the estimated value of $100,000 had been buried with her, among them some grey pearls beyond price, and a most beautiful and rare necklace of matched emeralds. These had been laid under the pillow on which the head of the beautiful actress reposed, and were found there undisturbed. The body had been thrown about, the laces torn, the dress rifled, but the robbers fled with empty hands. Poor Lantelme! the adored and envied! What an end to beauty and youth!

"Surely," writes X, "you are aware that a benefit performance in which the greatest artistes of the day took part was given in London a week or so ago for the descendants of Charles Dickens. You imply that nothing has been done. I write just to remind you." I am well aware of the fact stated by X, but that does not alter the situation in regard to the Government. A paltry pension such as has been offered to the Dickens ladies was almost an insult. Had Charles Dickens been merely a great writer, it would not be so unseemly, perhaps, to allow his memory to rust; but he was more. He was one of the world's great Humanitarians. He did more to abolish British institutions which were unworthy of England, and to establish ones that were fitting, than did any other man by the pen alone. He sweetened all the world by his writings. It is asking little that his immediate descendants should be cared for by his countrymen. If all the Fellowships combined, and by bazaar, or entertainment, or fair, got together a testimonial to his memory it would be but just and fitting. Poor big-hearted Charles Dickens! I cannot help thinking, as I write, of the Father of the Marshalsea and his little Testimonials. But we have said enough.

Queen Mary absolutely refuses to adopt either the corset, gown or hat of the moment. Her figure in her Durbar gowns exhibited the full womanly lines in vogue before the arrival of the "straight cut." Her hat is the usual one of medium size, turned up slightly at one side and trimmed with flowers or feathers. She varies this with a snug toque. Her hair is arranged in the old Princess "May" fashion, curled and fringed and dressed high on the head. Any other woman so dressed would look dowdy. By virtue of her rank and the oddity of her style the Queen does not. She is certainly a woman with the courage of her convictions. She affords an excellent example of simple womanly worth in these days of bizarre and flippant fashion, and the eye turns kindly on her motherly figure. She exhales "goodness." Somehow one always thinks of her as the Valiant Woman of the Scriptures. She has what so many women lack, a great sense of "justice." No finer type could stand at the head of a nation's womanhood. As long as old Britain can produce women of the brand of our own Queen there need be no fear of any weakening on the part of the British race.

As for ourselves—the women of Canada—"We stand in some danger of being 'Americanized,' I daresay," one remarked the other day to a travelling acquaintance passing out on his way home to Chile, in South America. "You are Americanized," was his answer, gravely given. "In manners, speech, customs and dress you are practically United Statesers." "And this in face of what we did last September!"

"I refer only to your women," was the reply. "You dress like the Americans, use the same sort of speech, slang and all, adopt their manners, which we find brusque and rude, and copy them in all things. It is not a fine type!"

DOCTORS ADVISE MEDICATED AIR

Cures Catarrh, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Throat Troubles, Nearness.

For diseases of the lungs, throat and nasal passages mountain air has always been deemed salutary because of its pureness and freedom from disease germs. The air of pine forests, laden with minute particles of volatile germ-destroying principles, has enjoyed an almost unexampled reputation in these diseases also.

A MARVELLOUS DISCOVERY.

After years of exhaustive study a chemist devised a means of supplying right at home a healing balsamic remedy that is even more effective in catarrhal diseases than the air of the pine woods. Of course, this remedy was copyrighted in every civilized country and was at once offered to the public under the name of "Catarrhozone." Its success has been phenomenal.

Just think of it! A healing, soothing substance capable of destroying these noxious organisms which excite and maintain disease. Capable, also, of allaying congestion and of stimulating the healing processes of nature, which are combined in that inaluable compound so well and so favorably known to the medical world as "Catarrhozone."

CATARRHOZONE CURES.

Catarrhozone is simply the concentrated qualities of the air of pine woods. If you breathe it you will derive more benefit in one hour than you could possibly get from the woods in a year.

This great advantage arises from the fact that, in addition to those healing emanations from pine, other ingredients distilled from the vegetable kingdom are so united as to give results that could not possibly be derived in the simple form in which nature supplies medicated air.

20,000 PHYSICIANS ENDORSE IT.

For all diseases of the nose, ear, throat, bronchial tubes and air passages—for catarrh in every form—cure is certain with Catarrhozone, which is not a nostrum, but a high-class scientific treatment. Large size, sufficient for two months' use (guaranteed), price $1.00; smaller size 50c, at all dealers or the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

A Trial Treatment of Cuticura Soap and Ointment Free to Skin Sufferers

If you, or someone dear to you, are suffering the itching, burning, sleep-destroying torments of eczema or other cruel skin eruption, with its embarrassing, unsightly disfigurement; if you have tried all manner of treatment, no matter how harsh, to no avail, and have all but given up hope of cure, write to-day for a liberal sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Thousands of skin-tortured sufferers, from infancy to age, have found that the first warm bath with Cuticura Soap and gentle application of Cuticura Ointment bring instant relief, permit rest and sleep, and prove the first steps in a speedy and successful treatment. The Birth of Jesus.—Luke ii., 1-20

Golden Text—For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.—Luke ii., 11.

1. Verses 1-3—Who were Caesar Augustus and Cyrenius?

2. Verses 3-4—What was the political or national status of the Jews at this time?

3. Judah had neither king nor lawgiver at this time; what prophecy is there which intimates that Messiah was to be born under such conditions?

4. Why was Bethlehem called the city of David, and what does the name of the city signify

5. Verses 5-6—What would be a correct designation of a man who does not willingly pay his taxes?

6. Why were Joseph and Mary not to be censured for travelling abroad at such a momentous and critical time?

7. Verse 7—Do we need to do anything special, except doing our everyday duty, to help God bring to pass at the exact time and place whatever He has planned for us? Give your reasons.

8. Why was it the plan of God that Jesus should be born in Bethlehem in a stable, and cradled in a manger?

9. Does God have more interest in the masses or the classes, that is, in the poor or the rich?

10. How do you account for it that no person gave up his room in the inn, and that no private citizen offered hospitality to a woman of such respectability, in such a serious condition?

11. Verses 8-10—Which method assures us of the more Divine revelations and why specifically seeking them, or devoutly attending to our everyday duties?

12. May any godly person in these days ever expect to be visited by an angel?

13. Why is there never any reason to fear, either a natural or a supernatural revelation, if we are serving God?

14. Verses 11-12—Why was the birth of Jesus good tidings to the shepherds and to all men?

15. Does wealth or social position or education make people more sensitive to the supernatural than the opposites of these things?

16. Verses 13-14—Did this host of angels come at this moment, or were they already there and the eyes of the shepherds "suddenly" opened, and their ears attuned, to see and hear them?

17. What, if any, reason is there to believe that we are constantly surrounded with a host of angels

18. Verses 15-16—How much hurt or help would this revelation have been to the shepherds if they had gone to Bethlehem to see for themselves?

19. Verses 17-18—How much obligation rests upon Christians to make Jesus known in the world?

20. Verses 19-20—How is it that when we find out the facts concerning Jesus, that our hearts are so mightily stirred?

WAS TROUBLED WITH Headache AND Constipation.

After Suffering For Two Years Was Cured By BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

Headache of whatever nature is nearly always symptomatic of other diseased conditions, rather than a disease itself, but in most cases a disordered stomach, constipation, or bad circulation is the chief source of the difficulty. Burdock Blood Bitters removes the cause of the trouble through its cleansing, strengthening and tonic action on the stomach, liver, bowels and blood. Mr. Wm. Redmond, Cardigan Bridge, P. E. I., writes:—"I have been troubled with headache and constipation for about two years. After trying every doctor I knew, a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I found myself, after using one bottle, getting much better, and after using three bottles I was completely cured.

"After then I was on a visit, and found my cousin very sick, and the doctor told her there was something wrong with her head. I told her to use Burdock Blood Bitters and she was cured in a short time. I can safely recommend it to all."

LOCAL TREATMENT FOR WOMEN'S DISORDERS

The health we enjoy depends very largely upon how the blood circulates in our bodies; in other words, if we have perfect circulation we will have perfect health.

There is a constant wearing out of the tissues in every part of the body. The blood flowing through the veins carries off this waste or dead matter, while the blood coming from the heart through the arteries brings the fresh new living tissue, the essence of the food we have digested, to replace what has been carried off. This constant wearing out and expelling of the dead matter and the replacing of it with new matter, atom by atom, goes on day and night, until in about 7 years a complete change has been effected. Thus every man and woman has an entirely different body in every particle of it from what he or she had 7 years before.

It sometimes happens, however, from a variety of causes, that the blood becomes congested in certain portions of the body. This means that the blood vessels in these parts become weakened, and the circulation in that section of the body becomes sluggish and stagnant. The consequence is that the dead matter in that part of the body is only partially carried away, and that but little of the new, vital matter is introduced there to build up and strengthen the tissues and nerves.

This condition invariably exists in all cases of female disorders. The dead matter retained in the circulation, which should have been expelled, causes irritation and inflammation of the delicate membranes, and oppresses the nerve centres. This condition is the cause of the grievous physical and mental suffering which accompanies female troubles.

To obtain relief it is evident that the first thing to be done is to get rid of the dead matter which is being held in the circulation. If this dead matter is allowed to remain there a species of blood poisoning will result and nature will endeavor to get rid of it by forming ulcers, tumors, etc.

The above explanation will also show why ORANGE LILY is so successful in curing this condition. It is a local treatment, and is applied direct to the affected organs. Its curative elements are absorbed into the congested tissue, and from the very start the dead matter begins to be discharged. A feeling of immense relief, both mental and physical, accompanies it, and the improvement is constant and positive. This feature of the expelling of the dead matter is always present to a greater or less extent, and in some cases it is so marked as to be amazing. The case described in the following letter is not exceptional:

Dr. Coonley—I am thankful to Mrs. F. E. Currah, your Canadian representative, for my health restored by your wonderful remedy. I have suffered for 17 years, but not so bad until 3 years ago. Then I had a doctor, who told me I had a tumor, and could live no more than a year. If I went through an operation I would not live through it. A year later I sent for him again, and he gave me up to die. My husband then sent for another doctor, who performed an operation, and it did me much good. I doctored with him 3 or 4 months, but became so bad again that I thought I could live no longer, and I began to long to die. One day my husband came home and threw a slip of paper to me with Mrs. Currah's address and told me a lady had advised him to write to her for a treatment that would cure me. I said it was too late, that I would die anyway. I could not lift a teacup without hurting me. Then the first doctor told me I was worse than ever. However, my husband sent for ORANGE LILY, and the third treatment brought away one tumor. Others followed, until 7 tumors had been expelled, 3 large ones and 4 small ones. I know if it had not been for ORANGE LILY I would have died, for I could not live much longer. I would have thought it cheap at one hundred dollars for a month's treatment, instead of one dollar. It is worth its weight in gold.—MRS. GEO. LEWIS, Huntsville, Ont.

The above letter is published with Mrs. Lewis' permission. All letters received are treated as being sacredly confidential, but occasionally some patient feels so grateful for being cured that she is willing to make the matter known for the benefit and encouragement of her suffering sisters.

ORANGE LILY is a positive, scientific remedy for all disorders of the female functions. As explained above these troubles are of local origin, and require local treatment. It is just as sensible to take medicine internally for female troubles as it would be to take medicine internally for a bruise, a boil or an ulcerated tooth. In all these cases some dead matter is being retained, and the cure is effected by employing local methods for expelling the dead matter. ORANGE LILY has antiseptic, soothing and healing properties, and also tones up and invigorates blood vessels and nerves. I am so anxious that every suffering woman may satisfy herself, without cost to her, that ORANGE LILY will cure her, that I hereby make the following

FREE TRIAL OFFER

I will send, without charge, to every reader of this notice who suffers in any way from any of the troubles peculiar to women, if she will send me her address, enough of the ORANGE LILY treatment to last her ten days. In many cases this trial treatment is all that is necessary to effect a complete cure, and in every instance it will give very noticeable relief. If you are a sufferer, you owe it to yourself, to your family and to your friends to take advantage of this offer and get cured in the privacy of your home, without doctors' bills or expense of any kind. The "Parkyte" Sanitary Chemical Closet

For Schools, Hotels, Banks and Private Residences

Heretofore it has been impossible to install a Sanitary System of inside closet without water works and sewage, and you will agree with us when we say that the present outdoor system of closets are not only very insanitary, but are at the same time one of the most fruitful sources of both moral and physical ills.

The "Parkyte" Sanitary Chemical Closet is constructed principally for families and public bodies who live in a district where it is impossible to have waterworks and sewage. It can be placed in any part of a Residence, Store, School, Hotel, Bank, etc.

We have secured the Agency for this valuable Sanitary Closet, and invite investigation of its merits.

MISS A. GRADUATE Box 590, Brampton, Ont.

A Sky-Scraping Affair

(Short Story.)

It was a fact well known in social circles in Traverse City that Mr. Henry Harrington Hawkins and Mr. R. Ogden Winterbury were rivals for the hand of Miss Kate Barstow, but it was only known to three or four people that the aforesaid handsome young girl had already plighted her troth with Burt Rayl, manager of the big department store, and that when the marriage came off he was to have an interest in the business.

Mr. Hawkins was a young man of aesthetic tastes. He was a law student and wrote sonnets to himself, and his income was $8 a week. Mr. Winterbury neither had aesthetic tastes nor wrote poetry. He was employed by a firm publishing a State Gazeteer, and he therefore called himself a literary man and tried to make his salary of $12 per week carry out his assertions.

If Burt Rayl had been of a jealous disposition there would have been no rivalry between the other two. But he was not, and as Miss Kate was being kept in caramels and roses by the rivalry, and as good-looking girls are as prone to mischief as plainer ones, she let matters go on.

She knew of the rivalry, but he took no notice of it. Both young men were treated alike. They had been friends up to the occasion of a certain lawn party, when both fell in love. From that time on it was enmity. They passed each other in the street to glare and mutter. They sat together in the Barstow parlour with the young lady making a good third and smiled and smiled, and yet wished each other dead. If one got away early in the evening for a game of croquet with the object of his affections, the other waylaid him on his homeward way and hit him in the back with stones. If Miss Barstow attended a sacred concert with Mr. Hawkins it was Mr. Winterbury's turn to throw missiles. Their love for the girl was broad and deep and long and desperate. Neither of them stopped to figure on the cost of pork or potatoes or the price of house rent. That would have been abasing their love.

Things went on. Things go on, even if people are in love. Traverse City decided to hold a county fair. All the big hogs, fat cattle, old gardens, fancy bed quilts, gigantic pumpkins, overgrown cucumbers and three-legged calves in the county were to be exhibited, and one enterprising individual bought the privilege of setting up a Ferris wheel on the grounds. It was one that had seen its best days at a seashore resort and was longing for a rest.

When the fair opened, of course, everybody was there. That meant that Miss Kate Barstow and Mr. Hawkins and Mr. Winterbury were there. It also meant that when Miss Kate saw the Ferris wheel she was much taken with it, and expressed her desire to make the circuit and "get a view of the country for miles around."

The rivalry had become desperate by this time. Each rival felt that a crisis was at hand. Each proposed to make that circuit with Miss Kate, and to have his fate settled before they had left the car.

Now, the law student showed his fine Italian hand. He went to the owner of the wheel and had a very private conversation. Later on he borrowed $20 and passed the bills over to the man.

The transaction had hardly been closed when the literary editor of the Gazeteer appeared. He spent some ten minutes watching the machinery operating the wheel, and then he had a talk with the owner.

There were many winks and smiles, and more money passed. It was after the last trotting race that the rivals and the girl they loved approached the wheel. Each intended to make the circuit with Miss Kate and leave the other on the ground. Each had also planned that in case he got left the fact should not give the other any advantage. On the contrary, it should be bad for him. It can't be said that the girl had an intuition, but this much is certain, that in the crowd and crush around the car she so managed that Mr. Hawkins had as a partner a very fat woman whose husband was a nervous little man who dared not make the trip, while Mr. Winterbury found a little later that his companion was an old maid of forty or more who wanted to fall in love.

The rivals were thirty feet high when they discovered the mix-up, and there was nothing to do but go onward and upward. Miss Kate smiled and waved a hand at them, but that only increased the pain. The owner of the wheel had been closely watching things, but after half a minute he shook his head and muttered:

"Hanged if I know what to do. I have forgotten which I was to keep up here. They have gone and mixed themselves up, and I guess the best thing I can do is to stop the old machine right now."

The "old machine" had made only a half circuit. Mr. Hawkins and his fat woman and Mr. Winterbury and his old maid were right at the top when something went wrong with the machinery and the motion ceased. After half a minute there were loud demands to know what had happened. The wheel man told them as well as he could. Some cog, lever, cam or ratchet had given out, and it might be a full hour before that big wheel took up its slow and stately movement again.

"Young man, this is a purty how-de-do," exclaimed the fat woman when the news was shouted aloft. "Here I am up here, half scared to death, and down there is my Samuel almost in a fit."

"Well, I'm not to blame for it," replied Mr. Hawkins.

"I believe you are. I can see 'villain' written in every line on your face. Lay as much as the tip of your finger on me and I'll make you rue it to the last day of your life!"

"You shut up and keep quiet!" shouted the young lawyer at her. "Can't you see that your hitching around may upset this car?"

"I'm a dead woman—I know I am!" she wailed, as she began to shed tears.

"Didn't I tell you to keep still?"

She sank down in the bottom of the car, crowding his legs until he had to haul them up, and Mr. Hawkins swore according to Coke and Blackstone.

In the next car below Mr. Winterbury and the old maid were also having some conversation. He was a young man and looked like a good thing, and her heart went out to him. As her heart went out she exclaimed:

"What a romantic bower for a pair of lovers! All around us the meadows—overhead God's sky! I hope you appreciate the beautiful?"

"I'd appreciate a chance to punch that fellow's head down there," was the savage reply.

"Say not so. I could ride on forever."

"You may ride all you please after I get out."

It was an unkind remark and the old maid took it so, and flared up and told Mr. Winterbury that he was evidently a loafer in disguise, and that her brother down below would wallop better manners into him as soon as the wheel turned. Then the rivals caught sight of each other and began to shake their fists and indulge in epithets. These things scared the fat woman until she began to shriek, and angered the old maid until she threatened to stab her vis-a-vis with a hat-pin if he didn't give over. He gave over, but not until he had said:

"If I ever catch that long-nosed young man on the solid earth I'll rend him limb from limb, and if I'm hung for it I'll go to the gallows with a song on my lips!"

A thunder storm had been creeping up. The owner of the machine didn't know whether he had earned his $40 or not. He finally decided that he hadn't, and while seemingly industriously at work to make repairs, he accomplished nothing and left all his patrons to get wet.

There was a strong wind ahead of the rain, and the people aloft sat with their hearts in their mouths. The thunder roared and they roared with it. The lightning cut up didos and shrieks rent the air. When the rain came all were soaked in a minute. This included the fat woman and the old maid, and they privately informed Messrs. Hawkins and Winterbury that their vengeance would be deep and deadly and last through three generations.

The owner of the wheel was a man who believed in giving full measure for the money. He kept the wheel still for the full time he had agreed upon, and then added ten minutes. By that time the storm had ceased and the sun of joy shone again. Messrs. Hawkins and Winterbury gave him one long, lingering look as the wheel came round, and then leaped from their seats and walked away.

They walked toward and past the girl of their hearts as she stood smilingly beside her mother, but they didn't see her. They didn't want to. The thunder storm had washed their love away never to return. Henceforth no more caramels—no more roses. It was as if nothing ever had been—nothing but law and literary work.

"The Liver Pills act So Naturally and Easily."

Such a statement, coming from the cashier of a bank, shows what confidence responsible people have in these pills. Mr. A. L. Wilson after trying them wrote:

"I have used Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills and also your Anti-Pain Pills, on myself, with good results. The Liver Pills act so naturally and so easily that I scarcely know that I have taken a pill. Frequently being troubled with headache I take an Anti-Pain Pill and get immediate relief in every case."
A. L. Wilson, Sparta, Ill.
Mr. Wilson was for a number of years cashier of the First National Bank of Sparta.

Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills are different from others. Many kinds of liver pills are "unposible" after one trial on account of their harshness. Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills do not act by sheer force but in an easy, natural way, without griping or undue irritation. They are not habit forming.

BAGGING AN OCTOPUS

(Short Story.)

BY L. P. COPPERTHWITE.

The following story of an encounter with an octopus is told by a ship's captain, who, in his earlier seafaring days, had done some salvage work in the dress of the diver. The adventure took place in connection with the salving of the barque Tom Jones, a rotten old hulk that had fouled a submerged barge and gone down with her cargo of tinned salmon off a rocky shore in nine fathoms of water.

"The worst part of the whole business," related the captain, "was to free the hatches from the mass of twisted and tangled iron rods that had come about them. I worked at this nearly a week, and then was ready to begin taking out the cargo. It was a slow job, sorting out cases in the blackness of that hold, and by the time I had sent up from two to half a dozen loads the pressure and the cold would make me break cover for the top, to thaw out a bit.

"I had to work carefully, too, because the wash of the tide brought packing cases of all kinds round me, and if my air pipe had been caught there might have been a new diver drawing my pay at the end of the month.

"By the thirteenth day we had lifted all the cargo I could handle from the main hatch, and I began to work forward. I was just tipping a case toward the open net in which the cases were hauled up, and which I had spread on the tilted inner side of the hull when I realised that there was something moving near the open hatchway.

"I approached the opening cautiously and was about to peer out, when there came across the square of opaque light a long, wavering arm. I shrank back, then threw myself forward and half closed the sliding grating beneath the hatch. I didn't want any visitors, especially when they happened to be visitors with eight arms of unlimited strength, directed by a sullen disposition.

"The year before one of our men had been caught under water, and had been held prisoner there until he was nearly dead with cold and fright. He had been caught at the foot of a pier by an octopus, which had wrapped one arm about the post and two or three more about him. The man didn't dare to signal to the boat above to be hauled up, for fear the devil fish might be strong enough to crush in his ribs or injure him internally. He simply sat through this game of patience which his visitor had proposed, and he didn't know how long it would last, or whether it wouldn't end eventually by his suffocation. After nearly an hour of this nightmare, the terrible creature had gone as it had come.

"I paused and considered something that had just come into my dazed mind. Yes, perhaps it would work. I would call off the octopus through his very responsiveness to motion. There was a chance of my being able to reach the main hatch by traveling under decks, and perhaps I could entice him away from the vicinity of my air-pipe and signal line long enough to let me escape. I began to feel my way back, each moment getting further and further from the amber shadows of the forward hatch.

"It was a perilous undertaking. Any second I might bring something tumbling down and sever my supply pipe. I groped cautiously along, however, and presently had the joy of feeling the ladder of the main hatch lying across my path. Under currents had drifted the outer door shut, but I shoved it open and jerked the grating across the aperture. A moment later a black, wavering shadow was thrown across the checker board of light and darkness formed by the crossed timbers of the grating, and I knew that my ruse had worked—thus far.

"I took a long time to my return trip, trying not to stir up the water nor to displace anything that would tell of my progress. Suddenly I stood still. There, before me, was that telltale silhouette. The octopus had beaten me to the goal. To say that I was utterly discouraged does not half express it. I had not let myself consider this possibility, but now I was cowed, beaten, broken-spirited—the thing that threatened me was so utterly removed from anything I had ever fought against, was so diabolical and unyielding, that I felt my sinews rebelling against further effort. Already I was a thing of the past, sitting face to face with death.

"I don't know how it came into my head. I had been staring at the blotch on the floor that represented my net, when all of a sudden I began to wonder how the Japanese fishermen who sold devil fish on the water front caught the creatures. It seemed strange that I had never heard. Snare them! I kept repeating the words, and every time they came back they seemed to be speaking to some faculty that was asleep within me. Then I got up hurriedly. I would have jumped, but my rig was too heavy for that; but I got up and went over and picked up that net, and began working at the knot which held it to the manila line from the tackle above. I was fully alive and awake now; there was something to do. With a thousand needles stabbing my fingers and wrists, I continued to maul the knot, and after what seemed an interminable struggle, the rope was at last free in my hands.

"Feverishly I parted the strands for a distance of two feet up, then painfully tied a slip knot in one of them and approached the door with it in my hands. Cautiously I shoved the grating back a trifle, then retreated from the gap, for my adversary had reached for me with one of his five-foot arms. Again I approached and extended the loop of manila. This time I stood my ground, and watched the tentacle groping toward me. It touched the surface of my rubber suit, drew back quickly, then advanced again.

"This was my chance. I slipped the noose well over the groping arm and yanked it tight. Instantly it disappeared and the rope was jerked from my hands. Convulsively I signalled the men above to haul up the freight rope. There was a mighty commotion in the water, and I knew that I was alone, that my grim companion was bound for the scow above, and that a gang of hungry and ill-tempered derrick men up there would deal with him. Two minutes passed. Then there was a peremptory signal on my line, 'Come up.' I shoved open the grating and signalled back 'All right.' The next moment I was being hauled up, and as I went I believe I was receiving that I would never go below the surface again."

For And About Women

Why He Doesn't.

Punkins are so yellow,
Yellower than gold!
Sort o' make a fellow
Wish he wasn't old;
Wish that he could hide out
In some pitch dark place,
Scare some kid inside out
With a punkin face.

Scare some poor kid crazy
With a goblin leer;
It's the lazy daisy,
Glory time o' year!
Punkins are a yellow
Glory to the eye;
How they make a fellow
Long for punkin pie!

Take a punkin mellow,
Build it into pies,
Don't it make a fellow
Sort o' bat his eyes?
Sort o' keep a-lickin'
Whilst he says a grace,
Pinin' to be stickin'
That pie in his face.

Queer no poet feller
Singin' of a song
Of the autumn meller,
Summer gone along,
Don't compare (it's funny)
The bewitchin' eyes
Of his little honey
To two punkin pies.

Guess I know the reason
That it wouldn't do,
In the autumn season
When the skies are blue;
If he dared to do it—
Ain't this reason plain?—
Dared compare 'em to it,
It would make her vain.

For the Sickroom.

To brighten a sickroom by a gift of flowers seems a simple matter, and is often the only way open to sympathising friends when the invalid is too weak to see them, but it requires more discretion than most people exercise. As an expression of kindly intention the flowers can hardly fail to be cheering whatever they are, but otherwise they may be far from acceptable.

It is a wise woman who uses her everyday commonsense in this. Instead of choosing masses of cut flowers from a hothouse, to be charming for a day, and then fade visibly, giving an impression of decay and mortality, she chose a potted plant, full of buds, that would open day by day, bringing an ever fresh interest into the monotony of the sickroom and suggesting life and growth.

The same commonsense would also suggest flowers of cheerful colour and not heavily scented. The fresh fragrance of a pot of violets will act as a real tonic to some posy lovers, but the strong perfume of hyacinths or lilies will stifle a delicate person and often produce dizziness. A bit of forethought can be exercised by finding out from the nurse the temperature at which the sickroom is generally kept, and then consulting a florist as to what potted plant would keep in good condition in that particular atmosphere.

One invalid who was when well, passionately fond of woodland ways, got a real impetus toward recovery from the gift of a shallow box of "woods" plants. Tiny ferns, partridge berries, and many other little friends, greeting her with perky, uplifted greenery, made her ready to do cheerfully all that she was told, if only she could get well enough to see the beloved forest whence they came to her before the winter time.—New York Tribune.

Ruffles are Popular.

The recrudescence of ruffles is more on the tongue than in sight. We hear a good deal about it, but we see little evidence of it. Each year it has been solemnly whispered that women were again to be flounced and furbelowed, or rather their gowns were to be, for women cannot add a ruffle to her stature even by taking thought.

Yet season follows season without any sign of a real self-respecting ruffle, although plaiting that have adorned taffeta frocks during the last two weeks were a concession to the rumour. Somehow, when one speaks of ruffles, one thinks of masses of material that stand out in an aggressive manner and add to their circumference. But this mental attitude is due to the fact that the ruffles of the past have cut up just this kind of caper; the ruffles of the future may lie close to the figure and be almost inconspicuous.

Safe to say we will not jump from the Oriental slimness of the moment to anything stiff and starched. Ruffles will be introduced in a rather shamefaced way, made of chiffon and net, of crepe de chine and satin, and the public will accept them without realizing what it means.

All the rumours from those mysterious places where fashions are in the making assure us that skirts are still to be scanty in the new year, and bodices are still to be souvenirs of what once was. So if ruffles are introduced to any alarming extent rest assured they will lie limply against the surface of the frock, and will not draw attention to their existence.—New York Times.

What Winter Does to Women's Beauty.

"Wind and cold weather roughen, redden and chap the skin. The best protection is a home preparation made by dissolving a small original package of mayatone in half a pint of witch hazel. Apply to face, neck, and arms. It will not rub off or show like powder, and it makes the skin soft, smooth and satiny.

"If you now have chaps or cold sores, apply Mother's Salve before retiring. It is antiseptic and healing and is a splendid remedy for pimples, eczema, sores and all skin afflictions.

"Dry shampooing is preferred to washing the head, because all wet shampoos make the hair dry, brittle and colourless. To make a dry shampoo put a cupful of corn meal in a fruit jar, add the contents of an original package of therox and shake together well. Sprinkle a spoonful on the head and brush through the hair, and the scalp and hair will be clean and sweet. It leaves the hair light, fluffy and beautifully lustrous."—"Parisienne" in Woman's Journal.

PATHETIC SCENES

Middle-aged Man Charged With Abduction, Sentenced to Eighteen Months—His Wife Collapses

THE GIRL FAINTS

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, JAN. 20.—There were heart rending scenes in the police court this morning when Magistrate Denison sentenced to eighteen moths imprisonment, Frederick Gower, a middle-aged married man, who pleaded guilty to abducting and taking to Detroit a sixteen-year-old girl who worked in the biscuit factory with him. His wife collapsed when giving evidence against him and had to be carried out. The girl fell in a faint in the witness box; the prisoner, himself, was unable to walk after sentence was pronounced, and was borne down stairs to the cells by a policeman, and his mother, who was also in court, took a fit when the prisoner was taken away.

Prof. Chant Is To Lecture

Professor Chant of the University of Toronto, will deliver a lecture in the Collegiate Institute auditorium on Friday, Jan. 26th, when all information in regard to the recent near approach of Mars to the earth will be presented. Dr. Chant is a professor of Astronomy and no doubt his lecture will be of very great educational value. The citizens should make an effort to be present. Professor Chant comes under the auspices of the Peterborough Centre of the Royal Astronomical Society.

CURED ACHES AND PAINS LIKE MAGIC

When he Used Dodd's Kidney Pills For Rheumatism.

Saskatchewan Man Tells of Quick Relief After Three Years of Suffering.

Holbeck, Sask., Jan. 19.—(Special.)—Among the many on the prairies who are shouting the praises of Dodd's Kidney Pills none speak with more enthusiasm than Mr. Matt. Syverson, a well-known resident of this place.

"I suffered from rehumatism for three years," Mr. Syverson says; "and I was also troubled with an acute pain around my heart. My case was a serious one and several times I doubted if recovery was possible. But seven boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me completely.

"I can truly and honestly recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills as a remedy for cases like mine. They surely cleared out all my aches and pains as if by magic."

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. When the kidneys are right they strain all the uric acid out of the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills make the kidneys right. That's why they never fail to cure rheumatism and kindred diseases.

SCOTCH CURLERS WILL VISIT CITY TO-MORROW

Preparations Are Completed For The Reception of The Besom From Over Seas---Will be Here on The Early Morning Train From The East.

The preparations for the reception of the Scottish curlers when they arrive in the city to-morrow morning, are pretty well in hand, and with seven sheets of good curling ice in readiness for Monday, a gala time for the visiting curlers is anticipated. The special train conveying the curlers leaves Kingston to-night, and is expected to arrive in the city at 5:51 a.m. to-morrow. The special car with the curlers will be placed on the siding at the C.P.R. station and at 8 o'clock they will be met by areception committee, composed of the President of the club, Mr. J. H. Connal, the Vice-President, Mr. R. Neil, and members of the club.

A parade to Knox church will then follow, after which the disposition of the day will be of a quiet nature. It is understood that a sleigh drive will be one of the features of the afternoon programme, and the crowning feature of Monday's programme will, in all probability, be the banquet, which will be tendered the visitors at the Masonic Hall. A large number of the local curlers have already signified their intention to attend this function, by placing their names on the roll at the club.

The visitors all speak very highly of their experiences so far in Canada. Provost D. R. Gordon is the only man who has been in the Dominion before on a curling tour. He made the trip with the last party. The captain of the team is T. S. G. H. Robertson-Aikman, of Hamilton, and the secretary is Andrew Blair of Aberfoyle. Mr. Blair and others of the team have curled in Switzerland. Messrs. Blair and Beddall are accompanied by their wives.

Special arrangements are being made by the lady curling enthusiasts of the city to entertain the wives of the visiting curlers.

PRINCIPAL FALCONER'S LECTURE AT THE NORMAL SCHOOL WAS ENJOYED

The last of the series of winter lectures was delivered last evening in the Normal school by Principal Faulkner of Toronto University, who maintained the high standard of merit the series has gained. The attendance was a good one and attentive.

Dr. Faulkner has addressed meetings in Normal schools in other cities, his last previous lecture being delivered in Ottawa Thursday evening. He selected as his subject last evening, "The conception of progress. Is there such a thing? What does it mean?

"Is there such a thing as progress," he commenced. You will naturally say, "Of course. Why question it? I want you to stand off and examine that idea and consider whether this thought which you have in your mind so frequently is a thought that you can understand.

One of the functions o. education is to produce exact thinking, with ability to criticise your idea. I rather think if you ask an average person what he means when he says a town is not progressive, or a man is not progressive, that he will say something after this. The man does not use modern methods. It may be he has no telephone, or the town has no factories or no electric light, or the nation has no material resources.

If you take a geographical definition of the people of the world this evening you will find that they do not believe in progress. You will find that great civilization—bearing upon the state of things at the present day—that civilization will take a downward grade.

It was in the 15th century that the western ocean was supposed to have been the home of Almons. Columbus went to the Azores, San Salvador, and saw Trinity, Trinidad, and farther on he could see the mountains of South America thus he saw for the first time the new world. Where was the progress. Was it discovering the new world? No! It was the new spirit of courage that entered into the minds of these adventurers who went out and led the new spirit of man into a new adventure.

The next step was printing. In the old days we find the scholar in the monastery and round him monks who would copy at dictation the manuscript But after all it was a small circulation they could have. The printing press took the thoughts of one man and scattered them all over the world. There, therefore was new soil from which new fruit would spring up. The press then, was the second thing in what we call progress of civilization. This caused a great change to come in the 16th century.

One of the foremost modern philosophers has said, 'If you get at the clear thought of man he could understand anything. He believed that man by his mind was master of everything that he could reach at, to the vastest distance and comprehend by that the world he lived in.

In the beginning of the 19th century the steam engine was introduced, and with it railways and steamships. Shipping was responsible in making the contines of the world appear narrower. Because of steamships new continents were discovered. By shipping, Africa, South America, China and Japan began to open up and the face of the whole world was changed. When our grandfathers crossed the ocean the journey occupied them six weeks, but now it requires but four or five days. Shipping occasioned people to come into closer contact; it made one man have more respect for another and in addition to that, a large amount of information has been gathered in.

All nature is under the control of law. Some of you will remember in the early days with what terror a placard bearing the inscription diphtheria was read. Such terror is not current now, because the law of diphtheria is understood. And in the Pan-swamps and thus went yellow fever, was discovered to have been carried by mosquitoes. The mosquitoes were destroyed by the draining of the swamps and thus went yellow fever, because the law was understood. This is a modern acquisition.

Wherein does progress consist? The spirit of man has been awakened to a spirit of nature and to what that spirit can think and do—that by observing the law of nature he can control nature.

NOT ENNISMORE DR. MOLONEY BUT DR. MOLONEY. EGANVILLE

A gentleman who knows well Dr. Paul Moloney, formerly of Ennismore, says that a despatch from Ottawa, printed in yesterday's Examiner, stating that he was to be a candidate in the South Renfrew by-election, does him a double injustice. In the first place he is not the gentleman, Dr. Moloney of Eganville, who is said to be a candidate. Dr Paul Moloney is practising in Cornwall, outside South Renfrew altogether, and The Examiner's informant says he is not the man, to be a party to breaking an agreement by which Hon. G. P. Graham was to be returned unopposed for the Commons, on the condit ion, which was honourably observed, that Dr. McGarry should be allowed the provincial election by acclamation.

Slight Accident

A "run-off" occurred on the C. P. R. at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, on the siding adjacent to Mr. R. C. Braund's store, at the corner of Park and Albert streets. A freighter, containing a large number of cars, was coming east and when running over the switch, one of the centre cars in some manner, ran off the track, and the truc was badly damaged. After some delay the track was cleared.

BRAKEMAN INJURED

G. T. R. Employee Meets With Unfortunate Accident Near Whitby

ARM AMPUTATED

A serious and painful accident happened at Whitby yesterday afternoon to James O'Neil, brakeman on the Whitby and Klondyke mixed. Mr. O'Neil was in the act of making a coupling between two cars when his arm was accidentally caught in the coupling, smashing the member above the elbow. He was brought to Lindsay, where he was placed in the Ross Memorial Hospital, under the care of Dr. Jeffers, the G.T.R. surgeon. The physician on making an examination of the injured right arm, concluded amputation was necessary, but owing to the patient being weak from loss of blood, he put off the operation until this morning at 10 o'clock. The patient suffered much from the shock occasioned by the accident as well as the operation, and is reported to be in a weak condition.

Mr. O'Neil has only been on the road four years, having come to Lindsay from Emily, where he embarked in railroading. He resides in the south ward, on the corner of Glenelg and Georgina streets, and has a wife and four small children.

KINGSTON SUICIDE

Young Man Who Shot Himself in Station Formerly Taught School at Rice Lake

HE WENT INSANE

Special to The Examiner.

KINGSTON, JAN. 19.—The remains of the late Charles E. Hereux, who put a bullet through his brain in the Kingston & Pembroke railway station here on Tuesday afternoon last, were identified to-day by his step-father, Mr. A. Sabouzin of Casselman, who stated that the deceased must suddenly have lost his mind, as he was in no trouble whatever, when heard from recently. His step son had recently taught school at Rice Lake, and was a young man of good habits. He was twenty-eight years of age, and a graduate of the Normal School at Jacques Cartier, Que. On Saturday morning the remains will be placed in the vault of St. Mary's Roman Catholic cemetery, where they will be interred in the spring.

GEORGE STREET CHURCH TO-MORROW.

Through inadvertence in making up the paper, this morning's Times places the music intended for the George street Methodist anniversary services under the heading 'Mark street Methodist church. Mr Renwick and his choir have been at great pains to prepare the programme for to-morrow's service and a treat is in store for those who attend.

EXHIBITION HAS A SUCCESSFUL MEETING

Annual Business Meeting Was Held Yesterday Afternoon and Was Marked by a Large Attendance and Considerable Enthusiasm---Board of Directors Are Elected.

The annual meeting of the directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition was held in the Council chamber yesterday afternoon with a large attendance.

Mr. H. Garbutt, acting president, was in the chair. He opened the meeting with a few general remarks upon the successful year concluded by the Board, and also referred to the distinct loss sustained by the Board, by the death of the late Mr. Robert Leary. Last year an attempt was made to erect some permanent buildings, said Mr. Garbutt, and an option on the property was secured during the term of the lease. He hoped that something would be done towards the purchase of the grounds before the expiration of the lease. For natural location and other advantages it was one of the best sites in the province for exhibition purposes and therefore it was in the interests of the city and those concerned to secure possession of this property.

It was moved by Mr. Collins, seconded by Mr. Denne, that the minutes of the last meeting be taken as read.

The financial statement, showing a balance on hand of over eight hundred dollars, was then read and formally adopted.

The advisability of holding the stallion and bull show as usual this year caused a little discussion, and resulted in it being left in the hands of the Executive committee.

The seed crop competition will also be held this year as usual, and with the exception of a slight change in the prize list, will be conducted on the same lines as on previous occasions. The Dominion Government grant has been increased from $30 to $50.

The question of resorting to the services of departmental judges for this year's show was also given consideration.

Mr. R. Denne thought that the association should be allowed to pick their own judges.

It was moved by Mr. R. M. Glover and seconded by Mr. R. Scott that as the departmental judges had proven satisfactory in the past, that their services be again secured for this year.

On motion of Messrs. Turner and Denne an amendment was moved that the matter be left in the hands of the Executive committee.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Dr. King and Glover, that the membership fee of one dollar be paid into the Ontario Association of Fairs and Exhibitions. —Carried.

Mr. Turner suggested that a suitable entrance gate be constructed at the street car entrance. The present entrance was an eyesore. A turn-style would also be a commendable innovation.

Mr. Garbutt thought that this was a move in the right direction. He also intimated that under the present existing conditions there were a lot of people who gained admission to the grounds without paying.

Mr. W. E. Conway took exception to this statement, and said that there were a number of people who thought they should not pay, but they were made pay, and any who got through without paying did so by scaling the fence. He concluded his remarks by calling the issuing of passes a loose game.

Mr. Turner contradicted Mr. Conway's statement, in so far as laxity in watching the gate was concerned. He instanced several cases where he had observed the crowds rushing the gates, and as a result many of them gained admittance without paying. This closed the discussion.

Mr. Conway read a detailed statement relative to the gate and grand stand receipts for the past two years. The receipts for 1911 showed a decrease of $164.30 as compared with the previous year.

Mr. Garbutt thought that the receipts from the grand stand were paying good interest on the investment.

The election of officers for the ensuing year then followed.

It was moved by Mr. Collins and seconded by Mr. Denne, that Mr. Garbutt be elected president.

As there were no further nominations, Mr. Glover moved that the nominations be closed. Therefore Mr. Garbutt was unanimously elected president of the exhibition for the ensuing year.

The nominees for the first vice-president's chair were Messrs. Collins and Gillespie. A vote resulted in Mr. Gillespie being elected.

It was moved by Mr. Cressman and seconded by Mr. McWilliams, that Mr. Denne be elected second vice-president.—Carried.

At the request of Mr. Denne, his name was withdrawn, and the position went by the unanimous approval of the meeting to Mr. W. Collins.

Fifteen directors were elected. They are as follows: Messrs. J. J. Turner, Sr., W. E. Conway, R. M. Glover, R. Neil, W. Collins, J. Cruickshank, R. Storey, J. Brown, S. Milburn, C. Moore, S. Deyell, R. J. Munro, J. Baptie, J T. C. Lang and S. Redmond.

Messrs. Collins, Moore and Garbutt were appointed delegates to the annual convention of the Ontario Association of Fairs and Exhibitions, which will be held in the City Hall, Toronto, on Wednesday and Thursday February 7th and 8th.

A discussion arose as to the advisability of separating the secretary treasurer's office.

Mr. Turner advocated the division of the office by reason of the fact that the duties involved had outgrown the limits of one man to properly perform them. This was especially noticeable at exhibition time.

On motion of Messrs. Denne and Deyell it was decided to divide the office.

Mr. Hall who has been secretary for several years and has given satisfactory service was reappointed to the position of secretary.

Mr. J. H. Callender was nominated for the position of treasurer by Messrs. Glover and Wise, and Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr., by Messrs. Deyell and Denne. The latter was elected. The question of salary was left in the hands of the Board of Directors.

The Honourary Directors elected were:

Hon. President—M. E. A. Peck, M. P.P.

Hon. Vice-President— Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P.

Directors—Mayor Bradburn, Mr. James Thompson, Mr. W. Cressman, Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, M.P. Hon. J. R. Stratton, Mr. Wise, Mr. John Cox, Mr. W. G. Morrow, Mr. W. B. Stewart and the Warden.

The meeting then adjourned.

LECTURE OF MR. JOSEPH FELS WAS CANCELLED

St. Paul's church, was last night the scene of a genuine disappointment, when Mr. H. B. Cowan announced to the large gathering that Mr. Jos. Fels would not be present to address them. Mr. Cowan explained that he had taken upon himself to cancel the engagement on grounds which he considered sufficient. He stated that he had attended a banquet of the Empire Club in Toronto, at which Mr. Fells gave an address, and his remarks had created a very unfavourable impression, and owing to the statements he had made regarding the Los Angeles Times outrage, in addition to other remarks, he did not consider it advisable to have him address a meeting in Peterborough. He got in communication with a certain reverend gentleman in Toronto and while the latter was in sympathy with Mr. Fel's work, yet he also deemed it inadvisable to have him give an address in Peterborough. Mr. Cowan assured them of his deep regret at disappointing them, and stated that he had taken the action at the last moment, when it was too late to put a notice in the local press.

In order that they would not have to turn away without having heard anything on the subject of single tax, Mr. Cowan kindly offered to speak to the best of his ability on Mr. Fel's subject. This offer was enthusiastically accepted and Mr. Cowan accordingly gave a very interesting address on the subject of Single Tax, which lasted almost an hour.

Mr. Cowan dealt very capably with his subject, and by illustrations pointed out that capital and labour should work in harmony. According to theories advanced by the learned men, the population of a country increases much faster than its products. This was disproved by Henry George. He gave a short history on Mr. Henry George, stating that that gentleman had discovered that as population increases the poverty of the masses becomes greater. He explained by illustration that this was due to the fact that a few men get in control of the general resources of the community and the rest of the people had to pay almost whatever those in control asked. Henry George claimed that God never created the world and its contents and intended things to be that way, but owing to man's great injustice and selfishness, the bad conditions exist, and the fact of this existence means disobedience of the laws of God.

Mr. Cowan said that the great resources of wealth could be summed up in the following: Land, natural resources and the great transportation system.

An outlined report of Mr. Cowan's address will appear in Monday's issue.

SEWER IS COMPLETED

New Sewage System in Southern Part of the City is Finished and Work is Inspected

A DESCRIPTION OF PLANT

The south end pumping station and sewer has at last been completed, and we hereunder give a brief description of the work that has been the subject of so much discussion, both amongst the citizens generally, and in the Council meetings. The City Fathers inspected the whole system a few days ago in company with the Engineer in charge, and the City Engineer, Mr. Hay:

The 18 inch sanitary sewer on George street meets the 12 inch Romaine street sewer, after passing under G. T. R. tracks at the man-hole in front of the pumping station, and both are then led into the well in the building through a 15 inch pipe.

From the well it passes into ejectors, situated on the lower floor of the station, and these, by air pressure, force the sewerage through a 12 inch cast iron main to the 15 inch sanitary sewer on Romaine street, east of the G.T.R. track, and is then carried by trunk sewer to the river.

To provide against flooding of residences connected to the sewer, through failure of power to run air compressors, the old 9 in. pipe, under the G. T. R. track is used as an overflow to connect the eastern section with the western section of the Romaine street sewer.

To take care of the storm water and surface drainage, a 20 inch concrete storm drain is constructed on the south side of Romaine street, running from Park street to the Little Lake, where an outlet is provided at the corner of Romaine and Crescent streets.

The pumping station is equipped with two 7 h.p. motor-driven air compressors directly connected, furnished by the Lancashire Dynamo and Motor Company of Manchester, England, each unit having a capacity of 50 cubic feet of air per minute; also an auxiliary gasoline air compressor —(110 cubic feet per minute)—supplied by the Canadian Fairbanks Co. of Toronto.

All these units are connected to two large air receivers, and from there the compressed air is led to the ejectors.

Each air unit is supplied with relief valves, which automatically shut off the compressor, when 15 pounds or more pressure is registered on the gauge, and turns it on again when the pressure falls below this point.

For present needs one ejector and one air compressor unit is required to be in continuous operation. The gasoline unit is to be used only as an auxiliary in case the electric power fails. As a precautionary measure, a private alarm system is installed, running from the pumping station to the City Engineer's Office and to the Fire Halls (at which place the attendant, George Jamieson, engineer, is on duty). This sends in an alarm who the air compressor fails, due to the stoppage of the air compressors, from lack of power.

MASON'S GROCERY STORE TO BE REMODELLED

A Speedy Clearance of Stock Necessary—Drop in Prices

As will be seen by the announcement in our advertising columns, the grocery store of Mr. E. F. Mason, 499 George street, is to undergo extensive improvements. The contract for the remodelling of the store has been awarded, and the work of installing new space-saving fixtures, counters, etc., will be commenced in a few days.

These alterations involve the complete removal of the present stock in order to facilitate the work. In the meantime, to save expense and trouble, of moving, a quick clearance sale will begin on Monday, with prices cut to figures that should encourage a regular raid on the goods. Housekeepers should read the advertisement through—every line of it.

WHERE QUEBEC LEADS ONTARIO

The Province of Quebec, ruled by a staunch Britisher, like Sir James claims to be, can take lessons in enterprise from the "benighted" Province of Quebec. Quebec has decided to raise by way of loan, ten million dollars, to construct 3,500 miles of good roads in that province, nine trunk lines of high-class highway. It is to advance this sum to municipalities at the low rate of interest of 2 per cent. The arrangement provides means of preventing any retrograde municipality from shirking the work. In such an event steps will be taken to bring it into line. The Whitney Government, while it has carried out the policy of the late Government, in the matter of good roads, has not made any advance, nor shown an interest such as the importance of the movement and the advance of the province demands. It has shown too great an indifference to the improvement of highways, and might devise some big, comprehensive scheme, such as Quebec has undertaken. Ontario is wealthier than Quebec, and claims to be more progressive; it should maintain its claim by "going Quebec one better" in the matter of highway improvement. The neglect of the Government to provide good roads in the newer districts is one cause of the tardy development of those new regions—a neglect that provokes demands a secession from the Province in one one-quarter of Northern Ontario. The character of the civilisation of a country is reflected in the character of its highways. A government that neglects, or is indifferent to, so important a matter as the improvement of the public highways lacks one great element of claim to being progressive.

IMPROVEMENT DEMANDED.

The City Council has a chance to do some good work in the direction of improving conditions at the Canadian Pacific Railway station. There is great need for an enlargement or rearrangement of the station platform. At present, incoming passengers, from the west especially, and especially in the evenings, are greatly inconvenienced. On Saturday evenings the lack of space, and properly arranged space, leads to no end of confusion, crowding and discomfort to the meeting tide of incoming and outgoing travellers. And not only discomfort, but passengers are exposed to the danger of injury. Alighting passengers, to reach George street and street cars, have to run the gauntlet of trunks and other luggage, being hurled across their path by the railway porters, who have little time to do their work, and can't be expected to be as careful as if they could work at leisure. Passengers run the danger of injury, while the railway workmen are hindered in their work. The city fathers should take cognizance of these conditions. Sir Thomas Shaughnessy has shown himself to be a capable and careful administrator, who has done excellent work in meeting, to the best of his ability, the wants of the travelling public. But with a line of the vast extent of the C.P.R., there are bound to be details that escape his attention. We are sure, that if the conditions referred to at the station were brought to his notice, improvements would be provided. While the Council may, with satisfactory results, bring this matter to the attention of Sir Thomas, they might at the same time, with equally good results, take the opportunity of pointing out to him that the inadequate conditions might be removed by the erection of a new station, which is badly needed and which, having regard to the large freight and passenger patronage given the railway by Peterborough, might well be considered. If the City Council would point out to Sir Thomas what fine stations — what superior stations as compared with Peterborough—Guelph and Brantford have, they would furnish good reasons for a new and larger and better arranged station here, as good at least as the cities mentioned, which it is safe to say, do not do as much business with the C.P.R. as the city of Peterborough.

SUNDAY TOBOGGANING.

The City Council of Toronto and the Ministerial Association are wrestling with the question of Sunday tobogganing at High Park. As inevitable, the discussion of the question leads to expression of extreme opinions—the cry of "Sabbath desecration" is met by the cry "blue laws". Neither attitude touches the happy medium. There is no doubt that indiscriminate tobogganning tends to general demoralization in the matter of maintaining the sanctity of the Sabbath day. The harm may not be in the act itself, taken by itself, but the evil lies in the tendency. The presence of great crowds on the park slides, perhaps of persons little given to a tender sense of morals, may easily have a demoralising effect. The young, whose place in the Sunday School, will reason that if there is no harm in others having the enjoyment of tobogganning on Sunday, why may not they also have it, Sunday School or no Sunday School? If there is no harm in tobogganing on Sunday—and there can be no very great moral lapse in a lad coasting down a hill on Sunday—if others do it, why not he? There may be no very grave moral wrong per se in a man sending a stone down a curling rink on Sunday, but if there is a general disposition to follow his example there would ensue demoralization and the most regrettable form of Sunday desecration. If promiscuous Sunday tobogganing is excused and justified; if it is to be allowed, why not permit golfing—a good, robust lung-filling, open air exercise? If we grant golfing, why not have hockey—a fine, strenuous, blood-stirring pastime? While many may argue that sliding down a hill on Sunday is not a very heinous offence, the same reasoning might be applied to other things, with as much good logic. It may not be a greater moral wrong for a man to take a glass of whisky toddy at night, to induce sleep, than it is to take a bromide tablet for the same purpose; yet, if it were done publicly the example might be followed by others, who would find it the open door to the evils of intemperance. It is not so much the act itself as the tendency that demoralizes. In a Christian country one of the best evidences of high moral popular character is the respect and reverence paid to the sacred day called Sunday—respect for the Lord naturally demands respect for the Lord's day. Canada holds a high place in this regard, and any general and public form of amusement that impairs the peaceful and reverent attitude of the people towards Sunday does not seem to deserve encouragement.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The dies are all ready at the Ottawa mint for the silver dollar piece, and we shall soon have Canadian cartwheel currency.

We suppose, says the Toronto Star, both kinds of government are needed—a Laurier government to do things and a Borden government to undo them. Otherwise the country would exceed the speed limit.

Ottawa elected its mayor for a fourth term and it now finds that his chief claim to good service is that the city, under his administration, achieved a deficit last year of $71,000. Even the city water works went behind.

Hon. S. H. Blake said yesterday that the Ne Temere decree never had any force in Canada. The eminent counsel declared: "The decree of the Council of Trent do not rule in respect of Roman Catholic or other marriages, as they were never promulgated in this country. Until they are so promulgated, and accepted, in this land they have no force whatever".

Farmer Peers In Canada

Canada is awaiting an "Emigration de Luxe," which is to take place this year. Several members of the British Peerage are going to take up farming in Canada in the spring, and a large umber of Peers will make their annual tour of inspection of their Canadian estates.

"We have enough titled people living in Canada or interested in the country to open a House of Peers of our own," said one of the leading railway authorities, "and, with a Prince of the royal blood—the Duke of Connaught—a Governer-General, we have all the material to go ahead and start a colonial kingdom.

"The Duke and Duphess of Sutherland will take up their residence for the coming autumn in their bungalow at Brooks, Alta. It is a cosy little weather-board house in the middle of the Duke's prairie holdings, and is the first over-seas ducal mansion ever built.

Earl Grey's Hunting Lodge.

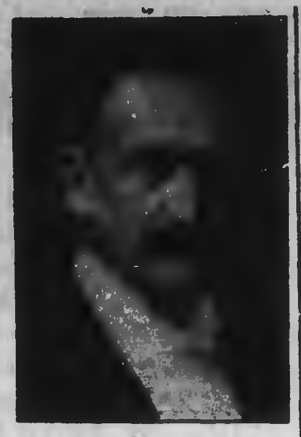
"Earl Grey keeps his hunting lodge in the Columbia Valley, B.C., and Lord Aberdeen owns one of the finest and most profitable fruit farms on the Pacific Slope—the Coldstream estate.

"Lord Clanwilliam is one of our big land-holders, and, with the Hon. Edward Cole, is interested in the Saskatchewan Investment and Trust Company, which owns the leading hotel in Saskatoon. Both spend a lot of time in Canada. Lord Hindlip is the landlord of a wide extent of prairie and British Columbia land, and Lord Desborough is interested in the timber or lumber trade.

"Lord Sholto Douglas is, or was until quite recently, fruit-farming in British Columbia, and the Earl of Stanhope frequently visits the Dominion. Among other members of the Peerage who are interested in Canada, either for the hunting or its commercial opportunities, are Lord Strathcona, Lord Lovat, Lord Bruce, Lord Mostyn, Lord Vivian, Marquis of Graham, Lord Wenlock, Earl of Macclesfield, Lord Clinton, E arlof Dunmore, Earl of Harrowby, and Viscount Gort.

"Among the new settlers is Lord Somers, who recently left the Life Guards to go farming near Toronto, and he is coming home to take out Lord and Lady Hyde, his sister and brother-in-law, who are to join him there. Lord Leconfield's brother, Mr. Reginald Wyndham, is another settler."

What Mayor Morrow Told The "Canadian Mail" Re Peterboro'



The following, taken from the Canadian Mail, London, Eng., of Dec. 30th, was accompanied by an excellent portrait of ex-Mayor Morrow. Though it tells us of a good deal we already know, it shows that our late mayor was in harness to the last in speaking good words for Peterborough, complementary to the good service he gave it for two years:

The Canadian Mail, in order to obtain information respecting the City of Peterborough, Ontario, one of the most progressive and most rapidly growing cities of the Dominion, had an interview with Mr. W. G. Morrow, the Mayor of the City. The Mayor is enthusiastic regarding the prospects of the city, as he believes that its future is assured.

"The population of Peterborough is 20,000," said the Mayor. "During the past year its growth has been the largest in its history, the return made by the civic assessors showing an increase in population in the year of 2,400".

"Has the growth of the city been a steady one?" Mr. Morrow was asked.

"Yes," replied the Mayor, "taking the results of the census for the past forty years, as taken by the Dominion authorities, a particularly steady growth is shown. Between 1871 and 1881 the increase in the population of the city was 48 per cent.; from 1881 to 1891 it was 43 per cent.; and from 1891 to 1901 it was 16 per cent.; while in the ten years from 1901 to 1911 the increase was 63 per cent."

"To what do you attribute the growth of Peterborough?"

"Principally to industrial development. The city is surrounded by an excellent agricultural district, which has contributed largely to its development, but the chief increase, especially of late years, has been caused by the establishment of manufacturing industries and the enlargement of those in operation".

"Does Peterborough then, offer exceptional opportunities to manufacturers? What has attracted industries to the city?"

"There are several reasons why manufacturers have located at Peterborough. The city is centrally situated. It is between the two largest commercial centres, Montreal and Toronto, and has excellent railway conection with all markets, which makes it an ideal shipping point. The Trent Valley, a series of short canals connecting navigable rivers and lakes, gives water communication over 150 miles in length, and when the work which the Dominion Government is carrying out is completed will give water connection to Lake Ontario and the Georgian Bay, and thus to all points.

"The city is provided with plenty of hydro-electric power. The Otonabee River, which passes through the city, and connecting waters furnishes this. Several of these powers have been developed, and electric power is delivered at the factories at attractively low rates.

"A part—indeed, a small part—only of the products of the factories are sold locally. They are largely exported to the Canadian North West, to which the shipping facilities are excellent, and also to Europe and other parts of the world. United States and English firms have located in the city on account of the advantages that are to be obtained for manufacturing and shipping and these as well as industries built up by local capital export largely."

"Why do industries come to Peterborough instead of locating in one of the larger centres?"

"Expenses are lower," said the Mayor. "While Peterborough has all the conveniences of a larger city, the cost of living is not as high and labour is cheaper, and at the same time the City has all the shipping advantages. Peterborough is an excellent residential centre. With all the civic improvements, such as sewers, waterworks, electric railway, fire protection, we are thoroughly up to date. Our schools are second to none. There are ten common schools; besides a collegiate institute and a provincial training school for teachers. All the leading religious denominations have fine churches, and there are three hospitals, handsome Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Association buildings, and a well-furnished free public library. The wholesale and retail stores are of the best.

"The city has several parks, large and small, in the bounds of the city, while celebrated summer resorts are close at hand. These, with other conditions, make Peterborough an ideal residential city, as is evinced by the many handsome houses and the attractive character of the homes in which the mechanics live. One of the characteristics of the city is the number of the homes owned by the workmen who reside in them, and this also gives a steadiness to employment and in some measure accounts for the entire absence of labour troubles, and perhaps also, for the fact that there are no 'slum districts'."

"You think that the prospects for the continued growth of the city are good?" was the last question asked the Mayor.

"Of the best," he replied with enthusiasm. "The advantages which have made a city of Peterborough so rapidly are all in full operation and, indeed, are increasing, for more electric power is being developed and new railway connections established. Also the completion of the Trent waterway will give a new impetus to the city's advancement. I look for continued progress and rapid development."

THE CLYDE'S OLDEST SKIPPER

Glaswegians, Paisley "buddies," Greenockians, and other Clydesiders here will note with regret the death of Captain Alexander Gillies, of Buchanan's steamers, which took place at the end of last month at his home in Langside, Glasgow. His demise removes another of the old school of sea captains whose names are associated with the early history of the development of pleasure steamer services on the Clyde.

For several years he has been known as the oldest captain of the river steamers, and for some time previous to that he was only second in seniority to Captain Barr, of the steamer Edinburgh Castle, who died about half a dozen years ago.

Captain Gillies, from his long connection with Messrs. Buchanan's services, was very well known in Glasgow and the various lower ports on the Clyde, which for fully half a century he was wont to visit in the course of his business. He remained in active service until about three years ago. At the time of his retiral he was remarkably fresh and vigorous in appearance, and looked a typical veteran of the sea.

Welland is said to be the fastest growing manufacturing town in Eastern Canada—growing from 1,700 people to 7,000, and from one factory to 25 in the past four years.

WILL MR. COWAN EXPLAIN?

Editor Post Card Column:

Dear Sir,—Since Mr. Cowan has assumed the role of Dictator of Public Morals for the City of Peterborough, perhaps he will condescend to explain more lucidly in your columns, than is shown in the Morning Times and the Globe, and at the meeting last night, the reason why he so arbitrarily deprived hundreds of citizens from hearing Mr. Fels on Tax Reform. Was it that he was egotistical enough to suppose that his presentation of the subject would be more acceptable than that of the eminent and learned reformer?

Insanity Seems To Be On Increase

Washington, Jan. 17.—A special census of insane confined to institutions in 1910 in continental United States was taken by the bureau of the Census Department of Commerce and Labour, and a preliminary comparative summary for 1904 and 1910 was issued to-day by Director Durand. The statement was prepared by Dr. J. A. Hill, chief statistician, division of revision and results, who is in charge of the work. The figures are subject to revision later, as there are a few institutions from which complete returns have not been received, but if any changes are made they are not likely to affect materially the totals and rates given therein.

The number of institutions canvassed was 372; the number of insane persons in the institutions Jan. 1st, 1910, was 187,464; the number admitted during 1910 was 60,003, and the number discharged in that year was 53,980. At the last special United States census of the insane population in insane asylums Jan. 1st, 1904, numbered 150,151, and the number of persons committed to insane asylums during the year was 49,622. Therefore in six years, from 1904 to 1910, there was an increase of 7,803, or 24.8 per cent. in the number of patients confined in insane asylums; and an increase of 10,981, or 22.1 per cent., in the number annually committed to such asylums. An increase of 37,308 in the population in insane asylums taking place in six years is an annual increase of 6,200.

INSANITY IS INCREASING

While the population of the United States increased about 11 per cent. in the interval between 1904 and 1910, the population in insane asylums increased about 25 per cent. The number of insane in asylums per 100,000 population increased 136.2 in 1904 to 203.8 in 1910. The number of persons annually committed to hospitals for the insane per 100,000 population increased from 61.6 in 1904 to 65.9 in 1910. If these ratios are accepted as representing insanity rates it would appear that the number of persons becoming insane in a community comprising 100,000 persons was greater by 4.4 in 1910 than it was in 1904. It must be remembered, however, that these figures include only the insane who are committed to hospitals. As to the number of cases of insanity not resulting in commitments to hospitals the census has no data. It is entirely possible that the increase in the number of commitments per 100,000 population is not due to any considerable degree to an increased prevalence of insanity, but simply to an extension of this method of caring for the insane. It is a change which might result from an increase in the number of institutions of this class and, from an increasin disposition on the part of the public to resort to such institutions. In this connection it may be noted that the number of institutions for the insane reported by the census increased from 328 in 1904 to 372 in 1910, an increase of about 13 per cent. The average number of inmates per institution increased from 458 in 1904 to 504 in 1910.

The figures compiled by the census afford a striking indication of the prevalence of insanity, if not an exact measure of it. It is somewhat startling to reflect that the 187,464 patients confined in hospitals for the insane make up a population larger than that of the city of Columbus, Ohio.

FIGURES MAY MISLEAD

As regards the figures by states in the appended table, the report points out, by way of caution, that it should be constantly borne in mind that the variations between different states, in the number of insane in institutions in proportion to population, are probably due to differences in the sufficiency of the provisions made for caring for the insane in this way, and also to differences as regards the practice of committing the insane to institutions, quite as much as to variations in the sanity rate prevailing in different communities.

The state which, in proportion to its population, had the largest number of insane reported in institutions on Jan. 1st, 1910, was Massachusetts with 344.0 per 100,000 population. New York however, had almost the same proportion., namely, 343.1 per 100,000 population.

The state which ranks next to New York and Massachusetts in the number of insane in hospitals in proportion to population is Connecticut, where the ratio is 321.1 per 100,000 population.

"MARY ANN"

(Short Story.)

BY ADA ROSCOE.

She was only a boarding house drudge, with a great absorbing love for Tom Kennedy. And Tom was a pouter-breasted guardsman in a red shell jacket and long legs striped with yellow, on the end of which were shining boots and jingling spurs.

"Tom," said Mary Ann one evening, as they sat together in the little bar parlour shortly after they had met. "What's the matter, dear? You don't seem yourself."

"I hope I ain't vexed you," she continued, appealingly looking up into his big vacuous face.

"No," he said shortly, selecting a woodbine from a satin backed cigarette case, one of her many offerings at the shrine of Mars. "You do seem quiet." She took his rough hand and fondled it gently. "Has the sergeant been on to you?"

He shook his head and then took another big drink, as if to give him pluck. "Mary Ann," he began solemnly, and a premonition of evil smote her with a deadly fear. "How long have we been together?"

"Five months. Don't you remember, Tom? You met me at a dance, and started talking, and how Clara and Ann kept staring so. They couldn't believe their own eyes, could they?" She laughed shrilly. "You don't know how happy you've made me, Tom. I was always a lucky sort of girl, but I was never right down real happy till you came along." His face was still averted, and showed no signs of softening.

"What's up, dear? I'm sure it's me that's vexed you." Her voice held a note of painful intensity. He threw away the stump of his cigarette.

"Five months, is it?" He paused irresolutely. "I was thinking it was somewhere about that time," he concluded feebly.

"Tom, you've got something on your mind, and you don't like to tell me. Don't be afraid of me—I'm only a little one." She nestled up close to him, raising her lips to be kissed. Sheepishly he stooped to press his lips to hers. "Now tell me what it's all about," she demanded with a tiny show of proprietorship.

"I'm—I'm afraid we've got to part," he blurted out.

"Part! Oh, Tom, you're fooling me, ain't you?" she giggled foolishly.

"Not as I'm aware of," he pursued, with a miserable attempt at dignity. The colour drained from her face, and her white lips twitched convulsively as she gazed on him horror-stricken.

"But—we—cant—part, Tom," she managed to gasp spasmodically. "You know we can't, dear, dear Tom!" She strove to fondle him, but he thrust her from him. "You're joking, ain't you? I never knew such a chap for larks," she sobbed, clutching frantically at this, her last hope.

"Look here, it ain't no good making a scene. 'Sides, how do you know but what a customer won't come in. We ain't bought the house, remember," he rattled on, trying hard to feel more like a man and less like a cur.

"But you said we should be married on the strength."

"Oh, if you're going to turn nasty, I'm going." He strove to rise, but she held him by the sleeve.

"Tom, I wants to tell you something." She stopped suddenly, then blushed a vivid red. "Never mind" —her voice trailed wearily—"just talk about yourself, Tom, like you always does."

"I don't feel like it to-night, Mary Ann," he responded gloomily.

"Tom." Her voice sank to a low, broken whisper. "Have you seen someone you like better?" She gazed up into his stupid red face with a look of entreaty, and touched his gaudy jacket with its brazen buttons as though it were a priceless gem.

"That's my business," he retorted, finding it easier to be brutal than penitent.

"Don't be cross, Tom. I didn't mean to upset you, but I've been that proud of you—and now——"

"Yes—yes, I know." He rose to his feet and looked into the mirror. There was no denying he was a handsome, stylish fellow, and he'd really wasted a lot of time walking out with this little fat servant. People had chaffed him about it—girls mostly. It was her blind adoration that had held him captive so long.

He looked down at her little crouching figure, and smiled indulgently. She was not half a bad sort, and had trusted him implicitly. If she'd knocked about a bit more she would have known that smart guardsmen, standing six feet in their socks, don't throw themselves away on servant girls—at least, not often.

Then he rang for another pot of mild bitter and sat down again.

"Tom," she raised her head, and her face was lined and suffering. "I was silly to think you would go on loving me. It wasn't to be expected. But you did love me when—when you talked so much of having me with you always, didn't you, dear?" Her voice was charged with pain.

"Course I did." Somehow he had to answer thus to ease his awakening conscience. "I'm glad of that—ever so glad, 'cus if you didn't, I should have felt lower than what I do now." She paused for a moment. "Kiss me fair on the lips, Tom. I want to forget your love's gone from me."

He obeyed her mechanically, but his lips seemed to touch burning coals. "God bless you, dear—I shan't never forget you, and whatever happens—you know what I mean?" He turned his head away to hide the look of shame that rose unbidden. "I shall just keep me mouth shut for your sake."

Tom Kennedy pondered long and deeply over this last piece of unselfish renunciation, and he did battle with it valiantly, with the fixed intention of overthrowing it. But it was a mighty enemy, and proved his master, and he felt crushed and dissatisfied.

"It's very good of you," he said involuntarily. Once more looking up, she smiled through her tears at the man who had wronged her, and at that supreme moment she wore the face of an angel.

"I shall love you, Tom, always—always. Now I think we'd best be moving." She rose unsteadily to her feet, this grotesque little waif born of drunken parents, who valued neither her body nor her soul, and held out her hand to him. "I ain't cross with you, Tom, dear, so don't think it. What's more, I couldn't if I tried."

He took her hand in his, and his own trembled, violently at the contact. Then the dissolute soldier fell from his being like a loathsome shroud and the real man behind stood revealed. Another moment and he had clasped her in his arms, and was half smothering her with kisses.

"I love you—girl—I love you," he cried hoarsely. "And no woman but you shall ever be my wife."

And to-day Mary Ann Kennedy declares she is the luckiest girl that was ever born, so we must take her word for it, as we pass on our way, knowing what we do of her life in the buried past.

A Tale Of The Sea

Captain W. I. Eyres, who, after forty-two years' absence, is now in the city attending the funeral of his uncle, and respecting whom an article appeared in Thursday's issue of the Examiner, has had many thrilling experiences in his travels round the world, and he can relate them in a most enviable style. In conversation with an Examiner reporter he told of one of these experiences, and for the benefit of the Examiner readers it is here set down:

In the year 1876 I left New York in the ship St. Francis, of Chapman & Flint's famous Clipper Line of New York and San Francisco packets.

In these good old days there was very little law for the seamen, sailing boarding house masters having control of the shipping and the placing of seamen. This ship the St. Francis was one of the most beautiful and perfect specimens of the American shipbuilder's art. She was built in Bath, Maine, U.S., in 1871. We had a miscellaneous crew, representing all the different nations of the world. The captain was George F. Foster, a typical Yankee ship master.

After leaving New York and proceeding to sea the usual routine of licking the sailors by the mates, straightening them out, putting them in line, were completed with the incidents peculiar to a deep water voyage. We ran through the North East and South East trades till we arrived in the latitude of Cape Horn 56 degrees 55 minutes south. Arriving off Cape Horn, we encountered the usual stormy and turbulent weather, violent snow squalls and heavy southeast winds. It was the 23rd of June (in this latitude the climate is wintry at that time of the year). On the morning of the 24th at 2 o'clock the man on the lookout reported a light right ahead, and the officer on watch, who was the second mate, immediately repaired to the forecastle. We put on the starboard tack and close hauled, the ship being practically hove to and unmanageable. Suddenly the lookout descried the form of a vessel, and we, being in full sail, could not get out of the road. This ship was running before these heavy southwest winds carrying top gallant sails. We received the order from our second officer to put the helm hard on, but as our ship had no steerage way she was practically inert. Then with a crash the vessel struck us in the starboard fore rigging. She cleared from the rigging and struck us again in the mizzen rigging. Then the steersman put his helm hard over and cleared away from us. Our captain hailed him, "What ship is that?" and got no response. The barque stood away in the darkness before the wind around Cape Horn. After the barque got clear of us we got lights to see what damage we had sustained by the impact of the collision. We found that the planking and the fore rigging were badly scarred and chafed, but the ship was in no immediate danger, pumps being applied and the ship found not leaking.

Some time afterwards someone looked at the mizzen mast and saw in the dusk of the morning the head and part of the bust of a man, apparently a young man of twenty or twenty-two or three years of age, jammed between the royal and skysail backstay. After bringing the remains and submitting them to the captain's inspection, they were placed in the wheel house and were given a sea burial on the following day.

The weather moderating the following morning, we made temporary repairs to the ship and proceeded to San Francisco, arriving there practically on time, our captain making reports of the usual routine and collecting insurance for the damage sustained by the ship.

One year afterwards, having arrived at Liverpool, England, I met a seaman who had been a shipmate of mine in the ship St. Francis. He called my attention to a notice in the sailors' house in Liverpool. The wording of the notice was: "Wanted—Information of an unknown ship, supposed to be American, who ran down the British barque Colchagua off Cape Horn on the 26th day of June, 1876. If any of the seamen of this ship should see this notice they would confer a favour by calling at ——"

Having called at the address some days subsequent we found a beautiful, cultivated English woman. She said it was her desire to know what had become of her son, who had been an apprentice in the barque Colchagua and as the ship had arrived safely in England, and the lad never appeared fter the collision, she wished to know what had become of him. I was appointed by the seamen to confer with the lady and as we concluded that this must have been the ship that was run down on that memorable day and that the remains were undoubtedly those of her son, in as nice a manner as possible I acquainted the mother of her bereavement.

She told me that the captain of this Colchagua had reported that the American ship had run him down and had violated the rules of the sea (which was untrue). After conferring with the American insurance agents the owners of the ship, namely Messrs. Flint & Montgomery, had to relinquish their insurance to the owners of the ship St. Francis. The captain of the Colchagua, was brought from his commission in Chile to attend a Board of Trade enquiry in England, and he and his officers suffered a cancellation of their certificates for life and the captain was given ten years' penal servitude for perjury and misrepresentation.

TIT-BITS

PAINTING EIFFEL TOWER.

The Eiffel Tower changes its dress every five or six years at a cost of from $14,000 to $16,000. The date is at hand when fifty painters will find occupation for three or four months in covering the 180,000 square yards of its surface with a new coat of paint.

The shade has yet to be decided upon. The Eiffel Tower started twenty-two years ago in orange, were red in 1893, golden yellow in 1900 and silver white on the summit and chrome yellow at the base in 1907. There are people who would vote for an invisible shade of khaki for the coming renewal. The tower is now used as a wireless telegraph station, as a post for an electric device to prevent hailstorms and as a guiding mark for aviators.

INCREASE IN GUN POWER.

An improved rifle of 13.5 calibre is to be used on British super-dreadnoughts in place of the gun of the same calibre introduced not long ago. It is more powerful both as to range and weight of projectile. The older 13.5 gun, which is to be used on some big ships not yet completed, throws a shell weighing 1,250 pounds, but the improved gun will carry a projectile weighing 1,400 pounds.

The new super-dreadnought will have also some improved 6-inch guns for protection against torpedo craft. Until very recently 6-inch guns were regarded as big enough for secondary batteries, but with the increasing tendency toward the use of heavier ordnance they have been relegated to the task heretofore assigned to fourteen-pounders and even three-pounders.

Librarian of Public Library Requests the Assistance of the Public

The Librarian of the Public Library asks the Examiner to announce that the fiction in the library is now all in proper order and catalogued; and the assistance of the public in preserving this condition of affairs is requested. Patrons are asked to carefully replace books in their proper places after they have taken them down, in order to avoid confusion.

SOME CAN

But Student Had to Quit.

Some people are apparently immune to tea and coffee poisoning—if you are not, Nature will tell you so in the ailments she sends as warnings. And when you get a warning, heed it or you get hurt, sure. A young college student writes from New York:

"I had been told frequently that coffee was injurious to me," (tea is just as bad) "and if I had not been told, the almost constant headaches with which I began to suffer after using it for several years, the state of lethargic mentality which gradually came upon me to hinder me in my studies, the general lassitude and indisposition to any sort of effort, which possessed me, ought to have been sufficient warning.

But I disregarded them, till my physician told me a few months ago that I must give up coffee or quit college. I could hesitate no longer, and at once abandoned coffee.

"On the advice of a friend I began to drink Postum, and rejoice to tell you that with the drug in coffee" (the same drug—caffeine—is found in tea) "removed and the healthful properties of Postum in its place I was soon relieved of all my ailments.

The headaches and nervousness disappeared entirely, strength came back to me, and my complexion, which had been very, very bad, cleared up beautifully.

Better than all, my mental faculties were toned up, and I now feel that no course of study would be too difficult for me". Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

REVIVAL OF ST. LUKE'S PARISH MAGAZINE

St. Luke's parish magazine, whose publication has been for some time suspended, has been revived, together with other forms of church activity, and is now issued monthly as aforetime. It is printed on the Examiner presses, and in both matter and typography, constitutes a valuable, seemly record of church events and activities, and also contains a large store of general literature that literally makes it a "magazine" of good and edifying matter. It should, and will, doubtless, find a regular place in every home in the parish.

A SUCCESS

The mission lecture under the auspices of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the George street Methodist church last night in the Sunday school room was a most gratifying success. The attendance was large and the lecture by Mr. Keyes of the Normal school staff was most interesting. He dealt with home missions as well as the work in China, and his remarks were illustrated by a large number of stereopticon views thrown on the canvas by Mr. V. Fiske.

In addition a number of beautiful views of Newfoundland were shown by Mr. Jas. Stubbs.

Miss Gladys Pentland added to the enjoyment of the occasion by contributing a recitation and little Miss Mable Penrose sang a solo very acceptably.

Persons troubled with partial paralysis are often very much benefitted by massaging the affected parts thoroughly when applying Chamberlain's Liniment. This liniment also relieves rheumatic pains. For sale by all dealers.

Training The Boys To Be Good Farmers

The Schools Division of the Ontario Experimental Union has been very much alive during the past year, and the report of the director, Mr. S. B. McCready, at Guelph last week showed a growth in the interest manifested by the teachers, trustees and children in the work of elementary agriculture.

"This branch of the Union was organized in 1909 and has now completed its third year of operation. Its aim is to adapt the work of the Union to the schools of the province, and to induce the teachers and boards of trustees to take up some phase of it as a means of introducing a measure of agricultural training," said Mr. McCready.

"There have never been so many inquiries regarding school garden work as we are receiving at present. The Department of Education advises teachers to secure the material and directions offered by us, and has appointed a director of this school division to the position of Director of Elementary Agricultural Education.

NOT FOR GROWN-UPS ALONE.

"The importance of some such work in the schools is not generally recognised. Everyone seems to think that the only ones to be considered in agricultural propaganda are the grown-ups. And so we have the agricultural societies and horticultural societies and field crop competitions and seed growers' associations and farmers' clubs and Farmers' Institutes and short courses, and a dozen other agencies for them, as well as high school classes and an agricultural college for the youth. And with all these only a fraction of the field is being covered, a few thousand people being reached. In the meantime there are over five thousand country schools in session for over two hundred days in the year, with over two hundred and fifty thousand pupils in attendance. At least fifty thousand of these are in the higher classes and old enough to take advantage of any instruction that an enterprising teacher can give to them, touching on the common things of the field, the orchard, the garden or the stable—things that will be of vital concern to them from the day they leave school behind them.

"Here is the chance for the best investment of agricultural instruction that can be imagined. Just think what possibilities there lie in every twelve or fourteen-year-old boy leaving school if he knew the secrets of the weeds, the soils, and the grains; if he had been stirred to experimenting for himself through simple experimenting that the schoolmaster initiated him into; if he knew where to get and how to use the latest discoveries of our professional experimentalists. There would be no trouble then to get old orchards and old soils renewed, old weeds killed, old flat, stale and unprofitable varieties replaced, new manures tested, new bulletins read, and new soils conserved. No. 21 barley and No. 61 oats, and No. 57 rye and Davies' Warrior potato would be grown everywhere in a twinkling and possibly improved.

NEXT GENERATION OF FARMERS.

"Just think of all—or nearly all—our next generation of farmers being as progressive as the members of this Experimental Union. They tell us Ontario has not begun to realise a fraction of her agricultural possibilities. She never will until the schools take a hand in the work of instruction. To bring about this 'consummation devoutly to be wished' in a rational, practical and pedagogically sound way is the aim of the Schools Division.

"It is hard to say what is the one chief deterrent to the cause. Perhaps there is no one thing to explain it. It is not the teachers — they, willing slaves, are ready to do what they must; it is not the program of school studies—it includes the subject; it is not the Provincial Department of Education—it officially encourages and subsidizes the work; it is not the press — it preaches the cause week after week, and year in and year out. The lack of progress seems to be due to a lack of public opinion. We haven't agriculture taught in our schools because we do not want it taught. We don't think our schools can do it, we know they never have done it, and we don't think children go to school for such a thing.

MORE SCHOOLS TAKE UP GARDENING.

"The progress made during the past year has been quite marked, so far at least as one can judge by the increase in the number of schools taking up gardening. In 1910 there were fourteen school gardens in Ontario receiving special government grants—these are gardens conducted by teachers certificated in elementary agriculture. In 1911 there were thirty-four such gardens. These thirty-four gardens were distributed as follows: Brant county 2, Carleton 3, Elgin 3, Hastings 1, Kent 6, Lincoln 5, Norfolk 1, Ontario 1, Perth 3, Russell 1, Waterloo 2, Wellington 2, Wentworth 2, York 3. Fourteen counties are represented in this list, and Kent has the largest number. The work seems to be more readily introduced in the western counties than in the eastern.

"The failure of teachers to report is one of the disappointments of the work, but we hope to have this defect remedied in the years to come. Through the inspectors we have learned of a few other isolated schools in which gardening was carried on.

NINETY SCHOOLS INTERESTED.

"Taking all kinds of school gardens or school gardening into account, there were in Ontario during the session of 1911 ninety schools actually interested in the work, distributed as follows: Brant county 5, Bruce 4, Carleton 6, Dufferin 1, Dundas 4, Elgin 6, Grey 4, Haldimand 1, Hastings 3, Huron 2, Kent 6, Lincoln 6, Middlesex 6, Ontario 1, Oxford 3, Peel 2, Perth 5, Prescott 1, Russell 1, Simcoe 3, Victoria 1, Waterloo 6, Wellington 4, Wentworth 5, York 4.

"It is likely this number would be more than doubled were we able to learn of them. For the future we shall endeavour to bring them all together into some common work, so that they shall be known one to another, and their work made known to the people at large.

"The work for 1912 is not yet definitely settled. Its extent and character depend somewhat on the decision of the Department of Education."

GREAT SNAKES

(Short Story.)

(By T. Edwin Smith)

Stafford's is a sort of general stopping place on the Lethbridge trail, and on the night that I have in mind there were six of us there. Stafford himself, Wilcox, a farmer who had come for coal; Mason, a windy old fellow who had stopped to get in out of the storm; Mr. Henderson, a young school teacher who was up looking for a homestead, and John Church and I, homesteaders. The subject of snakes came up in the most natural manner.

"Isn't it strange," said I, "that there are no snakes in this part of the country."

"There are," Mr. Mason put in.

"That may be," I replied, "but I have been tramping all day through beautiful snake country and I haven't even seen a skin."

Old Bill took his pipe out of his mouth.

"There are a few, I believe, down by Lethbridge," he said, "but I have never seen any about here either."

The school teacher breathed a sigh of relief.

"Well, I for one am glad of it," he said.

"You afraid of snakes?" demanded Mr. Mason.

"At any rate," replied the school teacher, "if I see a snake coming my way he can have the road; yes, all of it if he insists."

"A snake won't hurt you. Give him half a chance and he'll get out of your way."

"Yes, but he'll bite first," replied the pedagogue.

"Sure if you step on him," said Mr. Mason.

"But it's sure death if you are bitten, isn't it?" he asked appealing to me.

"Not necessarily," I replied cautiously. "I once saw a man who had been bitten, at least he claimed so. I never examined him to see the scar."

"Well, I've been bitten," said Mason; "I can show you the scar."

"How did it happen?" somebody asked.

Mr. Mason could not ask for a better opening, so he began:

"I was down on the Clearwater river in Idaho about six years ago looking for timber claims. One day, as I was going through a patch of brush, I heard something whirr close to my foot. I looked around, and there not more than six feet away was one of them big diamond-backed cusses lying by a log all coiled up and just making his tail fly. He was as big around as my arm, and I don't know how long. I picked up a chunk of wood and threw it at him. I hit him, too, but not hard enough to hurt him, so I threw another. I missed him, too, this time. I'll bet I threw fifty pieces of wood, clods and such like at that feller and then didn't get him. After I had threw everything that I could find, I tried to kick him, but at the very first kick he nabbed me just above the shoe tops. I pulled off my sock and got out my knife in no time. I slashed two big cuts in my leg where his fangs had gone in and sucked out a mouthful of blood. It was thick and green. I must have sucked out a gallon of blood before I got through."

"Weren't you sick?" somebody asked.

"O, my leg was a little sore, but that's all."

"What became of the snake?" I asked.

"I tramped the life out of him as soon as he bit me," the hero replied lightly.

"No. You don't say so," we exclaimed.

"Yes, sir; tramped the life out of him," Mason said.

"Well, I'll be damned," ejaculated John Church, with intense admiration.

"Humph!" snorted Mr. Mason, "I'd like to see the snake that I was afraid of."

"Haven't you ever?" inquired John, in his most seductive tone.

"No. You know how dangerous a rattler is? Well, I once carried one of them wrapped around my arm three miles one day."

"Tell us about it," I asked.

"O," said Mason, carelessly, "I just happened to hear him whirr close to my foot one day, and then when he struck I put my foot on his head before he could draw it back. Then I picked him up and held him with my thumb and fingers just behind the ears. Of course he coiled around my arm, and I carried him to town that way."

John Church and I were leaning against the wall some little distance away from the others and as he finished his tale John leaned over toward me.

"I just wonder," he whispered, "if old Windbag is as bold about snakes as he pretends to be."

"So do I," I said. "I wish I had a garter snake to turn loose in here. I'll bet we would soon find out then."

"Say, I've thought of the thing."

"What is it?"

"One of the miners here has a garter snake in a can in the bunk house."

"Let's get it," I said.

We rose and went out carelessly, just as the snake charmer began on another yarn. We got his snakeship, and started back to the house. As I walked, my foot struck against one of the Buffalo Peas, and the rustling of the seeds inside the dry pod gave me an idea.

"Wait," I called, "let's make a rattler of him."

"How?"

"Look here," I picked a stem of the pea and he saw the idea at once.

"Good stuff," he cried. "We'll do it."

We took snakey back to the bunk house, and with a few pieces of thread and a great deal of patience we fixed the peapods to his tail so that he made a very good imitation rattler. Then we went back where the bunch was.

Our entrance was unnoticed, for Mr. Mason was relating some more of his exploits. Unobserved by anyone John put the snake down on the floor by the old fellow's chair, and put a brick on top of him, so that the tail could not move, yet in such a way that he could work loose in a few minutes.

"And there was that darned rattler lying coiled up on his breast in the sun. He didn't dare move or speak, but he looked at me. I got out my sixshooter and took aim and fired."

"Did you get him?" Mr. Wilcox asked.

"You bet I did. Cut him in four pieces."

John and I had our former places. I looked at our captive. It was nearly free.

"I don't believe I could hit a snake if I tried," I said.

"Why?" Mr. Mason thundered.

"I should be too badly frightened," I said.

"Well, I can any time."

Just then there was an ominous whirr near the boaster's chair.

"What the devil's that?" he yelled.

"Rattlesnake," John answered.

"Where?"

"Under your chair," I answered, and pointed at the snake's head.

"Wow!" he yelled, and climbed his chair.

"Shoot it," John shouted.

We all climbed and shouted. John threw a book. I threw a pipe, while Mason pulled his gun and filled the floor full of bullets just as I blew out the lamp.

Suddenly the whirring ceased (we had been afraid those threads would not hold.) Mason crowed in the darkness.

"Got him! I got him! I knew I would! Never missed yet!"

I lit the lamp. Mason was standing in the open door, empty gun in his hand, and the perspiration scarcely dry on his forehead. John picked up the uninjured, but badly frightened garter snake, and stroked its back.

You should have heard that bunch whoop for joy, as Mason gave one look at the fake rattles, then went outside to get his horse.

TIRED-OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

Debate At St. Peter's

A most interesting debate took place at St. Peter's Separate School yesterday morning, when four of the students of the Junior fourth class favoured their hearers with an intellectual treat. Master Butler Hickey who occupied the chair, announced the subject of discussion: Resolved that Canada and not the United States is to be THE country of the twentieth century.

Masters Joseph Clancy and Eddie Heffernan were loyal supporters of Canada's cause, while the negative side of the debate was defended by Master Casimir Donoghue and Stanley Bogue. All four proved themselves able debaters, and, if yesterday's achievements may be deemed a standard of future successes, there can be no doubt but that years to come will be for them years of prosperity and distinction.

Rev. Father McColl acted in the capacity of judge, and, after much deliberation, decided that the speakers of the affirmative side should be the happy possessors of the laurels of victory.
